

LBJ Says Demos Humanity's Party

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

The President inserted some Johnson bywords in his re-election dialogue Saturday night, calling for a unified American "Great Society" and a "Charter of Opportunity" for older citizens.

Earlier, President Johnson borrowed "vigor," "new frontier" and "move forward" from his predecessor.

The $100-a-plate fund-raising dinner at the Hollywood Palladium Saturday night closed the President's two-day pre-campaign swing in California. He is scheduled to return to Washington late this morning.

MR. JOHNSON told about 2,500 at the Palladium, in clear rebuttal to Sen. Barry Goldwater, who has the GOP presidential nomination almost cinched, that the Democratic Party "has always been the special agent of the American aim toward compassion. To us, the old, the sick, the hungry, the helpless have represented not failures to be forsaken, but human beings to be helped."

HIS CHARTER of Opportunity would include medical care through Social Security; high quality medical services through renovation and new construction of hospitals and nursing homes; increased Social Security benefits; an expanded housing program for older Americans and an expanded volunteer program to use the wisdom and energy of older Americans to help underprivileged here and throughout the world.

The President said the keystone of American conquests against a common enemy, from the defeat of the West's wilderness and since, has been cooperation. In time of war Americans had this same sense of unity, sharing a common enterprise and common enemy.

"Today, I have again called on that tradition,"

MTA Union Votes to End Strike; Buses Roll Monday

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Bus drivers for the Metropolitan Transit Authority voted by a 2-1 margin Saturday to accept a new three-year contract, bringing to an end a week-long, four-county strike.

The more than 1,000 buses were expected to roll as usual Monday morning.

By 9:30 p.m., the vote was unofficially about 1,400 to 700 in favor of ending the strike with just a "couple dozen" ballots left to count.

AGREEMENT between negotiators for the MTA and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen was reached Friday after a bargaining session which lasted 20 hours.

MTA Board Chairman A. J. Elyraud said the agreement called for the drivers to receive a 26-cent hourly pay increase. Fringe benefits would bring the total cost to the MTA of 35.7 cents an hour, he said.

Approval of the new contract was virtually assured when it received the unanimous endorsement of the union's negotiating committee, according to BRT Chairman Don Sheets. Elyraud said the new contract would not require an increase in transit fares.

Racial Battle in Florida

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (UPI)—Angry whites attacked integrationists romping in the Atlantic surf Saturday and police acting on orders from Gov. Farris Bryant turned back a Negro march on downtown St. Augustine.

A white integrationist was badly mauled, a Negro girl's nose was broken and a Negro woman received a head wound in the battle at the beach.

Saturday night, after Bryant issued an order banning demonstrations after dark, 86 Negroes decided to march anyway. They said they had not been officially notified of Bryant's order, and claimed it violated a federal injunction anyway.

THEY got seven blocks before they met an army of policemen. The officers stood in four lines across the street, and one line held dogs on leashes. An officer read Bryant's order. The Negroes—some of whom were among those beaten at the beach—protested, then turned around and went home. There were no incidents.

DETAILS, DETAILS

Lost: 1 Marriage License-- Found: 1 Kindly Minister

By JIM MELTON

Arthur (Buddy) Lentzner of Lakewood, and Diana Bass of Rossmore, recited their vows Saturday and the guests agreed it was a lovely wedding—except for one little detail.

Before he would join them "till death do us part," the minister made them promise—because of that little detail—not to begin their honeymoon until Monday.

The 19-year-old Lakewood High School graduates' marriage won't be official until then, because:

Buddy lost the license.

WITH EVERYTHING ready for the big wedding scheduled Saturday at 10 a.m. and guests arriving from Northern California and Nevada, the groom discovered Friday night that the license was missing.

The big brown official envelope was nowhere to be found.

By 8:30 p.m. it seemed certain he wouldn't find it, so Buddy's friends began trying to help him buy a duplicate. He was staying with Mr. and Mrs. Bob Bridgewood, whose son, Robert, is Buddy's buddy.

The Bridgewoods called lawyers, judges,

this newspaper. About all they found out is that it's impossible to buy a duplicate marriage license Friday night. They tried to call the doctor who had tested the couple's blood in hopes of getting duplicate certificates so they could buy another license Saturday morning. The doctor wasn't home.

They gave up at 2 a.m.

Saturday morning there wasn't time for new blood tests.

A family friend offered to fly them to Nevada for a quick wedding, then return them here for the reception. With 100 guests on hand, they turned down the offer.

FINALLY, a judge assured them it would be proper to hold the ceremony provided they signed an affidavit that they had taken out a license and that they wouldn't consider themselves married until the certificate was signed and sealed.

But then the minister said no. No license, no ceremony.

Bob Bridgewood found another minister. After reading the affidavit and Buddy and Diana's names in The Independent, Press-Telegram marriage license list, the Rev. Ralph Baker agreed to perform the ritual.

CHURCH HIT 2ND TIME BY FIREBUG

Fire erupted in the First Foursquare Church for the second time in two weeks Saturday night after an arsonist slipped past parishioners guarding the building.

Long Beach's fifth church-fire in recent weeks was within half a mile of two churches destroyed by fires last month.

Rev. Billy Adams, the pastor, said an arson suspect was chased from the church at 2416 E. 11th St. shortly before the fire was discovered at 9:50 p.m. Rev. Stanley Dorsett, youth pastor, chased a tall young man in a dark coat.

CHURCH members found the blaze in the sanctuary after they saw a tall, young man wearing a dark coat run down the alley.

The first damage estimate for Saturday night's fire was $20,000. There appeared to be little structural damage, according to Acting Assistant Chief Kenneth Hoffman, but the chancel furnishings and ceiling above it were destroyed.

Two engine companies and a ladder truck, commanded by Battalion Chief Arthur Radin, brought the blaze under control by 10:15 p.m.

ALTHOUGH the arsonist slipped by the guards to set the fire, Hoffman credited the church members with saving the building. "Because they were there, we were able to save the church," Hoffman said. "If these people hadn't been around, it would have been very hard to spot the fire."

The church was torched for the first time on June 7, but that blaze also was discovered in time to save the steel-and-concrete building.

First Foursquare Church is less than half a mile from the Grace Methodist Church, 300 Junipero Ave., destroyed by a predawn blaze May 23, and First Brethren Church, 1925 E.

Fifth St., practically destroyed in a million-dollar blaze May 24.

A few days earlier, on May 18, a fire in the North Long Beach Methodist Church was brought under control after it did $50,000 damage to the church library.

Since the fires last month many congregations have mounted watches on their buildings and police have intensified surveillance.

Kennedy Faces Lengthy Ordeal with Broken Back

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. (UPI)—A team of medical specialists Saturday termed Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., who suffered a broken back in a plane crash Friday night, in "good condition" and eliminated the possibility of any paralysis.

The doctors from Washington's Walter Reed Hospital flew into Northampton on President Johnson's Air Force One jet Saturday and made an extensive examination of the 32-year-old brother of the late President.

At midnight Saturday an aide of the senator, relaying information from the doctors, said Kennedy's condition remained good and he was comfortable.

Kennedy was hurt in the crash that killed the plane's pilot and Kennedy's administrative aide in an apple orchard near Southamptn, Mass.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., and his wife also were injured in the crash but both were labeled in good condition with lesser injuries.

Dr. Charles W. Metz, an orthopedic surgeon at Walter Reed, said it was possible that Kennedy would need surgery, though this was not definitely determined. He said the period of recovery would be from six to eight months.

THE DOCTORS, ordered to Kennedy's bedside by Secretary of Defense McNamara, said one of the three vertebrae broken in Kennedy's back—the third lumbar vertebra in the lower back—was split in half and "displaced some degrees sideways."

But the injury, the doctors said, apparently, had not damaged the spinal cord and Kennedy had free movement of arms and legs.

METZ SAID the broken vertebrae "created an unstable medical situation" causing the firm outlook for the long recovery period.

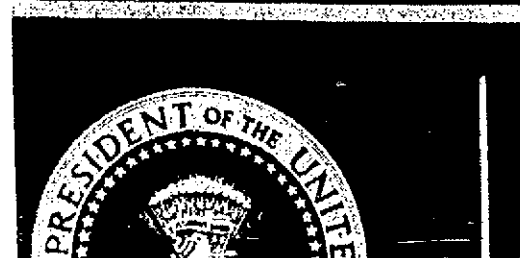

Dr. Paul Russell, a con-

PRESIDENT ARRIVED AT EL TORO IN 'COPTER

AT CAMPUS DEDICATION HE (CIRCLE) MINGLES WITH CROWD

ORDERLY, EXPECTANT

Big Crowd Forms Early for President's Speech

By KEN KNIGHT

NEWPORT BEACH — The huge crowd began arriving early. The President was coming.

Patiently they found seats and began their wait for the chief executive to arrive.

First the people filled the 7,000 folding chairs and then found other places to sit as they sprawled out over the rolling hills that are the site of the soon-to-be-constructed University of California, Irvine.

ROADS into the site opened at 8 a.m. and as soon as they did there were drivers to fill the parking lot that could accommodate 5,000 cars.

Along with the crowd were some 500 police officers, Orange County sheriffs deputies, California highway patrolmen and Secret Service men. No one knows how many Secret Service men there were.

But the big crowd, estimated at between 15,000 and 20,000, was orderly, just expectant.

EVERYBODY was waiting with a solemnity that

EARS TOO short to pull. Nails, a boxer pet of Mrs. Sally Fiske of New York City, gave President his support with a sign referring to the beagle pets of the President. Sign reads, "Him, Her and Me for Johnson."

was broken only by an occasional march played by the El Toro Marine Band or singing by the Newport Beach Harbor High School Glee Club.

A lot of lunches were opened up as the President was late in arriving, but there was no sign of impatience as the crowd continued to grow.

Even the weather was kind to the assemblage.

It was cloudy but not cold. A slight breeze from the ocean only three miles away came over the hills to ruffle the pendants that ringed the dedication site.

FINALLY an announcement came that President Johnson had left nearby El Toro, and his Army helicopter could be seen coming from the north-east.

And after introductions, the President spoke.

He said the leaders and people of California have the vigor to put the state on top and that's where he thinks it will stay.

That was what they had come to hear.

ONE FATHER'S DAY AFTER ANOTHER

New 'Daddy' Starts Pleasant Work

By ANDY PARK

This Father's Day, a 29-year-old Long Beach bachelor is spending his last day alone without children.

Monday, Robert Reynolds will walk into the Long Beach Day Nursery at 1548 Chestnut Ave., and become "father" to almost 100 youngsters.

When Reynolds walks into the Community Chest-supported nursery shortly before 7 a.m. Monday, he will be the first male elementary school teacher to do so in the 52-year history of the Long Beach institution.

MRS. MERILYN Burt, executive director of the nursery, is "frankly looking forward" to what she terms "a long-needed breakthrough" in day nursery and elementary school teaching.

Reynolds, a certificated teacher in the California school system, will become a fulltime teacher in Torrance in September, teaching the 6th grade. But for the summer, he will join the staff of head teacher Mrs. Fern Jensen at the Chestnut Avenue Nursery.

Why?

"I THINK there is a great need for understanding of the male role in life," Reynolds said. "And this need manifests itself in any child in the pre-school age group. But it is especially present in children from broken homes."

Mrs. Burt says that of the 270 children in the three day nurseries in Long Beach "more than 90 percent" come from broken homes—and, of that percentage, the vast majority have only the mother as the remaining parent.

"We need a man," Mrs. Jensen said. But since the nursery opened in Long Beach in 1912, only women have been available as teachers. "The low pay, the long hours, many of the disadvantages," Mrs. Burt said, are the reason why no man has yet taken up the nursery teaching mantle.

REYNOLDS visited the nursery last week, getting acquainted. As Father's Day approached, he met some of the children he will take responsibility for beginning Monday.

From 7 a.m., when working mothers drop off their children, until 5:30 p.m., five days a week, the youngsters from 27 months through seventh grade spend most of their lives—fatherless lives—at the nursery.

BACHELOR Robert Reynolds will become "father" Monday to almost 100 youngsters at the Long Beach Day Nursery.

As Reynolds and Mrs. Burt walked around the spacious playgrounds and through the classrooms, they talked and the children watched.

MRS. BURT, the professional, talked of "need," "father image" and "emotional attachments." Reynolds spoke of "challenge," "male role" and "pre-school academics."

At first the children spoke not at all. Then, slowly and shyly, they began to approach the tall, youthful man who was new to their lives.

"Are you the doctor?" a tousled 5-year-old asked. "I'll bet he's the dentist," a snaggled-toothed boy of 7 said knowingly.

BUT A very tiny, very pretty, very sad little girl of 6, in a very clean but very worn pink frilly dress, walked up and grabbed Reynolds' hand.

She tugged, and he bent double to hear her quiet question.

"Are... you my father?"

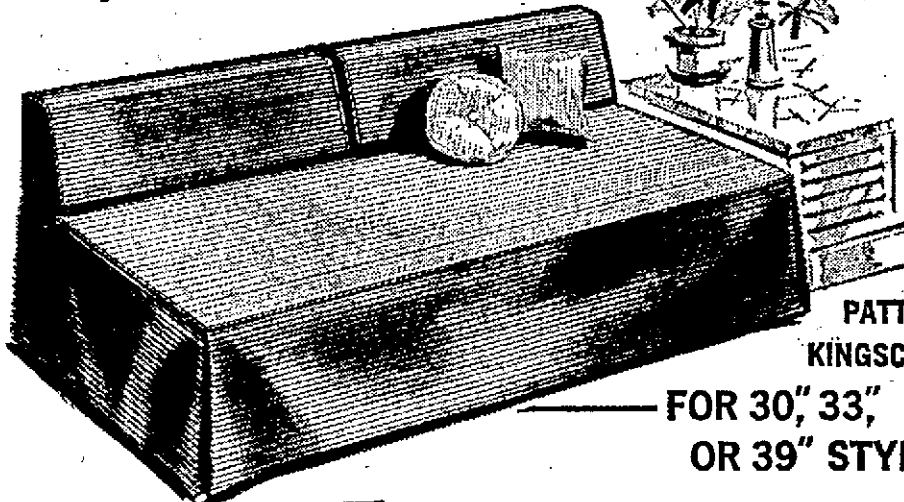

Others turned away with glistening eyes as Reynolds hesitated, then smiled and began his summer of Father's Days by answering his first question.

STARLIGHT SERENADE

Pops Music Not Only Pleases Audience--the Musicians Like It Too

Members of the Long Beach Symphony Orchestra feel about the Summer Pops Concerts opening June 30 in Bixby Park, as does the restaurateur who hangs a sign in his establishment, "The food's good; I eat here myself."

"Normally the members of the orchestra would be taking their vacations during the period the concerts are scheduled," said Lauris Jones, conductor. "But the musicians are reshuffling their vacation schedules. They want to be here to play."

What the concerts have done musically is to improve the ensemble playing of the orchestra by increasing the annual number of concerts played each year," he said.

LAURIS JONES will conduct Long Beach Symphony in season's first Pops Concert June 30.

EIGHT YEARS ago the total symphony season here was made up of five concerts. The success of Symphony Association programming and the addition of the summer concerts has increased this number to 20.

"More people are listening to symphony orchestras in a year than attend baseball games," Jones said — and a large amount of this increase in audience is due to the outdoor concerts attended by huge throngs throughout the nation.

Popularity of the Long

Beach Starlight Serenade concerts has swelled the audience for the Long Beach Symphony to where more people hear it now than ever before, attracted by the joint program of picnic in the park and music under the stars that people know and enjoy.

The programs are made up of music the musicians like to play too, said Jones, and they are comfortable in the easy informality of the setting.

THE PROGRAM June 30 will feature Metropolitan Opera tenor Brian Sullivan and radio, concert, television and opera soprano Grace-Lynne Martin. They will sing both operatic and popular songs.

Sullivan will sing the "Flower Song" from Bizet's "Carmen" from "Vesti La Gubba" from Leoncavallo's "I Pagliacci," "One Alone" from Romberg's "Desert Song," "I'm Falling in Love with Someone" from Herbert's "Naughty Marietta" and "Yours Is My Heart Alone" by Lehar.

Miss Martin has programmed "Songs to Remember" from Kern's "Robert" and Strauss' "Tales from the Vienna Woods."

Ducts will be the "Drinking Song" from Verdi's "La Traviata" and "Wanting You" from Romberg's "New Moon."

Orchestral selections similarly are from the classical and light music repertoire, including the Finale from Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony, selections from "Gypsy" by Styne-Bennett, "Dance of the Comedians" from Smetana's "Bartered Bride," Hayman's "Pops Hoe Down," Tchaikovsky's "Waltz of the Flowers" and Willson's "Seventy Six Trombones."

In addition to the June 30 program free concerts will be given in Bixby Park on July 28 and Sept. 1. A fourth concert will be given Sept. 12 at Avalon, Catalina Island.

Johnson Says Democrats Agents of Compassion

struction. "In the past four years we have taken more tangible steps toward this goal than at any time in our postwar history," he said, continuing:

"Second, we want America to be strong... Today America is first among the nations in strength. California is first among the states in contributing to that strength. I tell you tonight America and California are going to remain first."

"THIRD, we want to continue the upward progress of prosperity... Business knows its market depends upon fair wages for workers. Labor knows a business must have the incentive of profits if it is to create new jobs."

"Fourth, we want to eliminate poverty... out of compassion for the oppressed and the awareness that the entire economy will rise as more people share in the benefits of our society."

"Fifth, we want every American of every race and color to enjoy the full blessings of American liberty."

"SIXTH, we share a care and concern for the elderly, the sick, the handicapped. We will not turn our back on those who through no fault of their own, can no longer sustain themselves... This nation will never again fall into indifference toward the distressed and the despairing."

These shared American goals, said President Johnson, "underlie my hopes for national unity."

can turn unity of interest into unity of purpose and unity of goals into unity in the Great Society."

THAT ACHIEVED, he declared we will eliminate racial injustice, abolish poverty, remove fear from our future and remain strong while finding the path to peace.

At the Irvine campus, before more than 20,000 persons gathered in a raw earth amphitheater among the rolling hills of Orange County and Goldwater country, President Johnson asked Californians to "throw off your doubts about America."

His call for confidence followed a quote of Franklin D. Roosevelt that "The only limit to our realization of tomorrow will be our doubts of today."

IN THAT tomorrow, Johnson said he foresees the day "when an urban extension service operated by universities across the country, will do for urban American what the Agricultural Extension Service has done for rural America." He said he is asking the U. S. Commissioner of Education to meet with education leaders to see how it can come to pass.

Mr. Johnson noted that this nation has changed from 80 percent rural to 70 percent urban within a century.

Speaking under gray skies and into a chill wind which whipped pennants bordering the amphitheater three miles north of Corona Del Mar, the President said all our hopes for peace depend on the kind of society we can build in the United States, "and that in turn rests on our system of education. I do not intend for us to settle for an uneasy peace for the world, an inferior society for America or an inadequate education for our children... As long as I am President, the education of your children is going to receive top priority by the men who lead your nation."

CONTINUING, the chief executive said, "I have come to California to ask you to throw off your doubts about America. Help us demonstrate to the world that people of compassion and commitment can free their fellow citizens from the bonds of injustice, the prisons of poverty, and the chains of ignorance. Help us to open the doors of America's abundance and freedom's promise to every man, whatever his race, his region or his religion."

"Help us to build a strong and vital and progressive society. In education, in health, in transportation, in every field of human endeavor, let us move forward to do our best, knowing that 'whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap.'"

Johnson alluded jokingly to the political side of his California mission in an aside to University of California President Clark Kerr, noting that, "It seems every time I come to a new college. If you keep up this pace we're going to have a lot of ceremonies like this between now and November."

AND A few minutes later, Johnson, the politician, substituted action for words—he slipped down into the crowd after his talk and walked over to greet and shake hands with members of the All-Orange County Honor Choir, a group of 200 high school singers.

Gov. Brown and Democratic U. S. Senate nominee Pierre Salinger, Johnson's former press secretary, accompanied the President on his four-speech trip through the state. Mr. Johnson put in a couple of good words for Salinger, including his Saturday night speech salutation, "Former Secretary and future Senator Salinger."

KERR SAID the new Irvine campus will rise to monumental proportions in years to come and will be the focus of a new center of population

LYNDA BIRD JOINS DADDY

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Lynda Bird Johnson, eldest daughter of the President, quietly slipped into Los Angeles Saturday night to join her father after a flight to Honolulu.

Upon landing at International Airport, she went quickly to a waiting car and rode to the hotel where her father was staying. A Secret Service agent accompanied her.

which will number more than 100,000 by 1980.

Kerr said the President's participation in the dedication "augurs a bright future" for the new campus. And, he noted, the guest of honor is "now a member of our company" by virtue of the LLD degree awarded him this spring at UCLA.

UCI chancellor Daniel G. Aldrich Jr. said Irvine "is not conceived as an isolated academic but as an institution that plays an active role in the transfer of learning to life."

He said learning more of our cultural heritage "is not to escape from the vicissitudes and practicalities of life, it is a means of wrestling with them."

EDWARD W. CARTER, chairman of the Regents of the University of California said the university in considerable measure "is truly a national university," citing its contribution to federal research through national departments, particularly the Atomic Energy Commission.

Dramatic evidence of the confidence of its staff, said Carter, is that it includes about one fourth of the world's Nobel Laureates in sciences and about one eighth of the members of the National Academy of Sciences.

Carter noted also that UC generates a substantial number of the government's top administrators, including in the President's official family, Secretary of State Rusk, Secretary of Defense McNamara, CIO Director John A. McCone, Atomic Energy Commission Chairman Glenn Seaborg and Chief Justice Earl Warren.

WORLD NEWS BRIEFS

U.S. AF Sorties in Laos Bared

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The U.S. Air Force has been flying unpublicized reconnaissance missions over Communist-besieged Laos with heavily armed jet escorts, it was learned Saturday.

The missions are being carried out under President Johnson's policy of stepping up military pressure on the Communists.

While similar U.S. Navy reconnaissance operations were acknowledged here after they were disclosed by Communist radio, nothing had been said about the Air Force sorties.

Besides the June 10 Air Force strike against Red anti-aircraft gun positions in central Laos — first revealed by UPI a week ago and still not officially acknowledged — it was learned that Air Force RF101 Voodoo reconnaissance planes have been making sweeps over the Plain of Jars.

Saratoga Stowaway Hauled Off by FBI
JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — David Russell Irwin, a 19-year-old aspiring writer who stowed away aboard the giant aircraft carrier Saratoga, was jailed Saturday after his plan for exposing the Navy's lack of security boomeranged.

Irwin, of Gillette, N.J., walked aboard the Saratoga last Sunday in civilian dress as a visitor and changed into a borrowed uniform for a six-day cruise with reservists, the Navy said.

He was discovered Wednesday by an alert apprentice seaman who noticed Irwin's unfamiliarity with Navy jargon.

Irwin, who said he planned to gather material for a magazine article, was escorted ashore by FBI agents when the ship returned to port Saturday.

Missing U.S. Plane May Be 'Pirate'

WASHINGTON (AP)—Cuba said Saturday a "pirate plane" from the United States bombed one of its sugar mills Friday and was shot down. A few hours later the U.S. State Department reported a private U.S. plane is missing from Florida.

The department said it is not known whether the missing Florida plane is the craft reported downed over the north coast of Las Villas Province.

Barry Says Ike Agrees on U.N. Revision

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., said Saturday that former President Dwight D. Eisenhower agrees with him that the United Nations charter should be revised and the voting formula changed.

Goldwater, leading candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, said both Eisenhower and Secretary of State Dean Rusk support "a thorough discussion on the charter of the United Nations."

Goldwater added, "I believe in the United Nations." He said, however, that some way must be found to revise the formula giving each nation a vote in the General Assembly.

300 Overcome by Heat at N.Y. Resort

LAKE GEORGE, N.Y. (AP)—About 300 persons were overcome by heat and collapsed Saturday at the end of a volunteer firemen's parade in this Adirondack Mountain resort.

Ambulances, fire trucks and a school bus took the most seriously ill to Glens Falls Hospital about nine miles away. Others were treated in a first-aid headquarters at Lake George Central School, in an emergency squad headquarters and in private homes.

At the height of the heat epidemic, patients lay on the hospital lawn and in corridors, while others waited in ambulances.

Danish Chief 'Lets K Have It'

COPENHAGEN (AP)—Danish Premier Jens Otto Krag accused Soviet Premier Khrushchev on nationwide television Saturday night of subscribing to an outdated ideology.

The charge was made by Krag in a recorded face-to-face conversation with Khrushchev after they had both signed a joint communique at the end of Khrushchev's five-day official visit to Denmark.

Quiz Witnesses in $2,300 Holdup

Detectives Saturday were sifting clues and still questioning victims of a brazen robbery at Alfred's Restaurant late Friday night.

Four armed men escaped with more than $2,300 in the holdup which occurred shortly after 11:30 p.m. Nine late diners and six employees of the restaurant, at 700 E. 45th St., were held at gun point in the dining room as the bandits rifled two cash registers and an office safe.

The Laughs Are Bitter Behind the Iron Curtain These Days

MUNICH (UPI)—In Ro-ling "Polish-Soviet Friendship month" an anonymous by-stander commented: "O.K. the satellite ties with Mos-cow and broadens contacts with the West, this story has been making the rounds: Party First Secretary Gheorghe Gheorgiu-Dej has just returned from a visit to the United States and is being questioned by a Politburo member about life there. He says that so far as he could see Americans lived in beau-tiful, well-furnished houses, were well dressed and ate well. "This is extraordinary!" 1960's. "Sometimes," he says responds the politburo man, "So the Russians are right when they say the Americans are backward. They are liv-ing as we did 30 years ago!"

Another Romanian story has a local Communist Party functionary advising aides that it would not be wise for Romania to surpass the Americans—it should just try to catch up and stay side-by-side. But why? demands a member of the group. "Well, you see, comrade," explains the functionary, "if we pass the Americans they would see the holes in our pants!"

These jokes come from the collection of recent Soviet and Satellite humor compiled by Radio Free Europe at its Munich operational head-quarters. "Political jokes," RFE notes, "span the length and breadth of the communist world in spite of official dis-approval."

HERE ARE some of the stories being told in Poland: When Warsaw was plastered with posters announce-

Luncheon to Honor Navy Base Chief

A luncheon honoring Rear Adm. O. D. Waters, com-manding officer of the Naval Base here, and officers of his command will be given by the Independent Business Men's Association at noon Tuesday in Hoefly's Restau-rant.

Gene Gallman, president of the IBMA, will present, May-ors Edwin C. Wade of Long Beach, Robert Baker of Lake-wood and William Menden-of the Kremlin and watch for hall of Signal Hill will attend.

So the man takes the job at 1,000 rubles a month and is happy until one day a group of American tourists sees him at his lookout. They ask what he is doing and he tells them. "Well," says one of the Americans, "we can do bet-ter than that. If you'll come back with us and go to the top of the Empire State Build-ing to watch for the collapse of capitalism, we'll pay you $5,000 a month." The man agrees quickly and tells Khrushchev about his new job. "Fool!" said Khrushchev. "Some day or other capital-ism is bound to fall, but we both know that communism will never come. You had bet-ter keep your permanent job here!"

SOME GAGS making the rounds in Czechoslovakia: Can communism be intro-duced into a highly indus-trialized society? Yes, but it would be a pity. And another: Could Switzerland or Swe-den ever be made commu-nist? Yes, but why? Then there is the Czech story about a party official who visits a collective and says to a farmer: "Do you realize tomorrow is the first anniversary of your collec-tive? You should kill a couple of geese to celebrate the oc-casion." "Why?" retorts the farmer, "it wasn't their fault."

RUSSIA itself has its polit-ical jokes. Here is a sampling: Moscow cafe wits relate that Red China finally has put a Sputnik into space: 50,000,000 Chinese held the-cratapult. Another 50,000,000 to be a member of the East Germany Central Committee. What did you do to be ar- rested?" "I called our leader Walter Ulbricht an incapable fool." "Ah, I see. Then you're in for betrayal of a state se-cret."

A Russian and an Amer-ican engineer are comparing notes and the Russian boasts that he has a house, a car and earns 1,000 rubles a month. "I can't complain," he says. The American says he too has a house, a car and earns $1,000 a month. "And," he adds, "I CAN complain."

And then there's the East German story about the two secret policemen who meet in jail. "What, you here?" "Yes, I am."

Kennedys' Bedside Vigil Set

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. (UPI) — Assured by doctors that Sen. Edward M. Kennedy is much improved from his plane crash injuries, most of his immediate family Saturday returned to the family compound at Hyannis Port.

Departing for the Cape Cod residence at about 4:15 p.m. (EDT) were the injured senator's wife Joan, who recently suffered a miscarriage; his brother, Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy, his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Smith.

It was arranged that one member of the family remain at Cooley Dickinson Hospital at all times. Mrs. Peter Lawford, another sister, was to take the first shift.

Also remaining at the hospital was Varick Tunney, a college classmate and close friend, who left his campaign for a congressional seat in California to fly to Northampton to be with the senator.

Tunney and Kennedy are godfathers of each other's children.

SEN. KENNEDY ON STRETCHER

Ambulance attendants prepare to carry Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., into Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton, Mass. He suffered broken back in plane crash en route to Democratic state convention.

stant called from Boston's famed Massachusetts General Hospital, said it would be some time before Kennedy could be removed from Cooley-Dickinson Hospital.

Kennedy received three pints of blood in transfusions and was given glucose intravenously, along with other medication.

"If it had not been for the attention the senator received," Metz said, "it could have been quite a different story." He complimented Dr. Thomas Corriden who supervised the early treatment.

X-RAYS taken when Kennedy arrived at the hospital after the crash shortly before Friday midnight showed fractures of the fifth and sixth ribs on the left side, fractures of the second, third and fourth transverse processes, which give the spine support.

He was also cut on both legs and the right hand.

Kennedy was en route to West Springfield, Mass., to attend the state's Democratic convention where he was to be endorsed by acclamation for a full, six-year term in the post once held by John F. Kennedy.

Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy rushed by plane from Hyannis Port, Mass., to be at his brother's side. The senator's wife, who suffered a miscarriage only a few weeks ago, sped to Northampton from West Springfield with Massachusetts Gov. Endicott Peabody.

BOTH PRESIDENT Johnson and Mrs. Johnson made telephone calls to the Northampton Hospital to express concern over the senator's injury and to talk to doctors about the condition of Kennedy, Sen. Bayh and Mrs. Bayh.

PILOT OF the Aero Commander plane, Edwin T. Zimny, 48, of Andover, Mass., died in the crash. Moss, Kennedy aide, a former New England Telephone Co. executive, died at 6:15 a.m., about seven hours after the crash, at the hospital.

Sen. Bayh told his Washington staff by phone Saturday that he saw "black things outside the window" and then realized just before the crash they were trees.

Bayh, who was to deliver the keynote address at the state convention, said the plane started its descent to land at Barnes Airport in Westfield.

"I could see car lights," Bayh said, but the plane then began a steep climb. Then the plane went down in the apple orchard.

Bayh: Kennedy 'Took It Like a Trooper'

SOUTHAMPTON, Mass. (UPI)—Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., seriously injured in the crash of a private plane Friday night, "looked like a trooper," his friend and colleague, Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., said Saturday night.

Speaking from a hospital bed, Bayh recounted what happened when a twin-engine plane carrying Kennedy and him to the Massachusetts Democratic Convention slammed into an apple orchard while attempting to land in the fog.

THE PILOT and a Kennedy aide were killed in the crash. Kennedy suffered a broken back and other injuries. Bayh and his wife, Marvella, were less seriously hurt.

Bayh described the crash as "one of those you just don't walk away from."

"I can't understand why we're here now," he said.

Bayh said Kennedy was talking to his aide, Edward Moss, 41, of Andover, Mass., just before the crash.

"HE WAS sort of half-standing, half sitting. I just happened to be looking out the window and saw some strange shapes that looked like we were in a thundercloud. Then I looked in front and we were in it."

"There was a sizable crash at the front of the plane—and sparks," Bayh said. "My wife and I were not seriously injured."

"She tells me she didn't lose consciousness. I just had the wind knocked out of me," Bayh said the front of the plane "opened up like a butcher knife opened it." He said his wife "crawled and

Died of Injuries

'Amazing' That Ted Is Alive

SOUTHAMPTON, Mass. (UPI)—A physician said Saturday it is probably "amazing" Sen. Edward M. Kennedy survived the plane crash here Friday night that killed two men.

Dr. David Jackson said Sen. Birch Bayh told him he and his wife, Marvella, were strapped into the two rear seats of the twin-engine plane when it hit.

Jackson said Bayh was not certain what position Kennedy was in at impact but that the Massachusetts senator apparently loosened his seat belt and may have been standing up and looking at a map.

"AT ANY RATE, it's amazing he (Kennedy) is alive, if he was loose (not strapped down) in the plane," Jackson said.

Bob Keefe, administrative assistant to Bayh, said Bayh and his wife were "momentarily stunned or unconscious" after the plane hit. When they revived, almost simultaneously, Bayh pushed his wife through a safety window, which blew out on impact.

Kennedy's aide, Edward Moss, 41, and the pilot, Edwin T. Zimny, 48, both fatally injured, were in the cramped front seat of the plane. The Bayhs could not aid them.

Would Back Barry, Says Scranton

BOSTON (UPI) — Pennsylvania Gov. William W. Scranton said Saturday he "will support the Republican presidential nominee, even if it is (Sen. Barry) Goldwater."

Campaigning for New England's national convention delegate votes, the late-starter in the presidential race addressed 100 delegates and alternates to the coming GOP national conclave.

"I am a Republican and will support the Republican presidential nominee, even if it is Goldwater," he said.

HE ALSO gave the keynote address at the Massachusetts Republican State Convention and then conferred with members of the New Hampshire and Rhode Island National convention delegations.

Scranton returned to Harrisburg, Pa., and home later in the day.

At the state convention, Goldwater supporters booed him when he asked, "Is it possible to stand with one foot in the 20th century and the other in the 19th?" and toward the end they interrupted with a chant, "We want Barry" — a chant gavelled into silence by Sen. Everett Saltonstall, R-Mass., honorary convention chairman.

Scranton told his audience that "the true spirit of the Republican Party today" stands with equal determination to save the nation from the "dry rot of phony liberalism and the slow death of blind reaction."

HE DREW cheers from throughout the sweltering Boston Arena convention hall as he blasted the Johnson administration, saying it is one that "failed to produce a single good idea or successful strategy during its first year in office."

"We cannot afford to go ahead with politics as usual while our allies are drifting away . . . while Latin America is threatened with cancerous subversion . . . and while freedom is being murdered in Southeast Asia," he said.

MISS CALIFORNIA CHOSEN

Miss San Diego, Linda Ann Taylor, 18, third from left, was chosen as Miss California Saturday at the International Hotel, Los Angeles, and will enter the American Beauty Congress, preliminary judging to the International Beauty Congress to be held in Long Beach Aug. 5-15. Other contestants clutching at a mink stole tossed by sympathetic member of the audience in chilly 50-degree weather Saturday morning are, from left, Miss Oakland, Vickie Backeberg, 20; Miss Laguna Beach, Gay MacGillivray, 20; and Miss West Los Angeles, Madeline Mack, 19.

Irate Whites Attack

ists have used the public beach without incident.

A CAR OF white segregationists waited all day at the beach for the Negroes to show up Saturday. When they did, the whites, using a radio, called in reinforcements. Six more carloads of segregationists roared down the beach, Confederate flags flapping from their aerials.

When the approximately 10 Negroes, including several small children, and two white youths reached the water, about 20 of the segregationists charged them. The whites, most of them in bathing suits, stormed into the water and concentrated their attack on Al Lingo, a husky white integrationist from Summit, N.J.

The troopers called in help and soon about 50 of them stood between the angry whites and the integrationists on the beach.

Goldwater Delegates Staying Put

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—The Philadelphia Bulletin, after talks with state leaders, U.S. senators and chairmen of delegations, reported Saturday there has been "no erosion yet of Sen. Barry Goldwater's strength" in the battle for the Republican nomination for President.

The Bulletin said its canvass of 50 states, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands showed Pennsylvania Gov. William W. Scranton's gains for the moderate GOP cause as substantial, but not at the expense of Goldwater.

The Bulletin survey found 650 solid first-ballot votes—five short of the 655 majority needed for nomination — for the Arizona senator.

POPE PAUL
Starts Second Year

First Year of Paul as Pope Marked

By WILLIAM SUNDERLAND

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope Paul VI, the slight, 67-year-old northern Italian intellectual celebrates his first year on the Throne of Peter today, and everyone is asking, "Where is he going?"

IN CONTRAST with John XXIII, Pope Paul has sought to broaden and to increase the role of the Papacy. In a sense it has been a partial return to the days of Pius XII.

Pope John delegated responsibility and believed that on a large scale local bishops should be allowed to make their own decisions.

But Paul has taken the reins of leadership into his own hands. The Papacy is supreme, he believes, and it is the Pope and only the Pope who must make the decisions regarding the church.

This naturally has led to some consternation in the Roman Curia, that ultra-conservative Vatican body which governs the church.

The Pontiff made it clear that the curia was to bend to the will of the Pope, not vice versa.

Many churchmen hailed this move as a step toward the modernization of the Catholic church as important as the Ecumenical Council.

It is known that there are plans for a special body to be set up to carry out the reforms proposed by the Pontiff.

PAUL VI also is carrying out some reform of the Vatican ceremonies, which he considered outdated and unnecessary in many cases. He has indicated he plans to do away with the many noblemen who have purely honorary posts in the Vatican. And he recently announced that he was doing away with the old system where cardinals were "protectors" of religious orders.

Even the Swiss Guard came under the pontiff's eye. They have been cut back from 130 to 100.

Seldom in history has a pontiff received such a public demonstration as Paul did during his three-day pilgrimage to the Holy Land this year. More important, the enthusiasm came not only from Christians, but from Moslems and Jews.

FOR THE papacy, a number of firsts were involved—the first time since 1812 a Pope has left Italy; the first time any Pope since St. Peter (whom Catholics consider the first pontiff) has visited the Holy Land; the first time a Pope has flown by jetliner.

It was there, in Jerusalem, that Pope Paul and Patriarch Athenagoras of Constantinople (Istanbul) exchanged their "kiss of peace" and hopes were born for unification of the Orthodox and Catholic Churches after nine hundred years of separation.

WHAT LIES ahead for Pope Paul is difficult to predict. But there is the possibility of more trips outside of Italy.

"Almost definite" is a journey to Bombay in November or December to attend the Eucharistic Congress.

There is speculation on the possibility of visits to Manila and the United States.

Important during the next year is the third session of the Ecumenical Council, which opens Sept. 14. Although it is not likely to be the final council meeting, it may be the decisive one, producing more concrete results than the first two.

D-DAY PLUS 20 YEARS

Normandy Invasion Harbor

Twenty years after D-Day, General Dwight D. Eisenhower returned to the scene of the events that radically altered the course of World War II to record his reminiscences for a CBS REPORTS, "D-Day Plus 20 Years: Eisenhower Returns to Normandy," which was broadcast over the CBS Network on the anniversary of D-Day. In this exclusive conversation with Walter Cronkite, General Eisenhower recounted the historic moments of the Normandy invasion. This is the thirteenth in a series of sixteen installments of the entire conversation, including many portions not broadcast, prepared by the New York Herald Tribune. Here the former President is on a bluff above an artificial harbor off the Normandy beaches, telling Mr. Cronkite of the ingenious devices which played such an important role in the Allied success.

Copyright 1964, Dwight D. Eisenhower
Edited by Martin Blumenson

MR. CRONKITE: General, here we are above Arramanches and the artificial harbor on a day that is a little calmer at sea but almost as rainy as many of those that the troops suffered in those days. What was the major problem of supply and the ports that led to this fantastic thing we see partly in the haze behind us here, what is left twenty years later of these artificial harbors?

GEN. EISENHOWER: Armies and navies have known for centuries that when you have a major invasion of a hostile shore, you have to capture a major port very soon. We were quite sure that while we might capture Cherbourg quickly we would find it destroyed pretty badly. We couldn't wait to repair Cherbourg because we were going to bring a lot of heavy equipment over to the Continent. Moreover, the English Channel is notorious for its foul and uncertain weather. So it seemed to me that we had to have something very soon and very radical to help us get that equipment over.

As far back as 1942, Admiral (Lord Louis) Mountbatten (head of the British Combined Operations Headquarters) happened to say to me, "Well, you won't have a port early enough, so we'll just have to make one."

This sounded rather fantastic to me. But actually early in 1943 the British began to work on this problem very seriously, and the Prime Minister interested himself in it. They conceived the idea of building artificial harbors—two of them, one for the American side of the beachhead and the other for the British. The British harbor was here in front of Arramanches.

This one turned out to be very successful. You can still see the remains of that harbor, the breakwaters that were built to fence in almost seven miles of shoreline to protect ships from the wind and the waves.

TWO STORM-TWISTED LOSBNITZ PIERS, JUTTING OUT FROM OMAHA BEACH

First, to get the breakwater started, you had to sink some ships, some old battleships and big freighters that had outlived their usefulness. Then there were concrete boxes called Phoenixes that were floated over from England to be sunk here. Finally, piers were built, piers that went up and down with the tide, flexible bridges in a sense.

The whole thing was a masterly conception, and the completion of the harbor almost miraculous. Unfortunately, we had a great storm on June 19th (in 1944), and the artificial port on the American side broke up. It was resting on a sand base, and it had taken some heavy shelling.

But the one right here rode out the storm. We used it right on into the fall, until we got and opened the port of Antwerp (in November, 1944). It was a Godsend, and the British who conceived it and had the greater part of building it used it very heavily.

MR. CRONKITE: Did the breakup of our port cause

any serious concern as to whether the operation might still be a success?

GEN. EISENHOWER: No, I don't think so. We had much more equipment for bringing supplies in over the beaches than the British did. We had amphibious trucks—DUKWs (pronounced "ducks")—and many small landing craft, LCTs, LCIs, and so on. But we also used the British artificial harbor to bring some of our very heavy equipment in.

We captured Cherbourg on the 26th of June, 20 days after D-Day, and we started rehabilitating the port at once—getting the mines and the ships the Germans had scuttled out of there. It wasn't long before we had it repaired and a terrific amount of tonnage coming in through Cherbourg. But in the meantime, in the early days, this artificial port did the job.

MR. CRONKITE: It must have taken a tremendous amount of courage for those British tug pilots to bring this stuff across the Channel. The concrete box Phoenixes were some seven stories high, weren't they?

GEN. EISENHOWER: I don't recall that we lost a single Phoenix coming across, and that's remarkable.

MR. CRONKITE: These Phoenixes and the other pieces of equipment that built the harbor were made in England, of course, and they're unlike anything that man ever saw before. How is the world did we keep that part of the operation a secret?

GEN. EISENHOWER: The Germans knew we were building something strange, but they couldn't conceive what it was. Just imagine almost 50,000 men working on this one project alone, using 30,000 tons of steel and I can't tell you how much cement.

MR. CRONKITE: I remember flying over this area on D-Day and seeing these things being towed. They were just then leaving the Southampton area, and I had no idea what they were. I couldn't imagine what those big boxes were, and the pilots were wondering, and it was a mystery to everybody, I think, until they were sunk out here and became operational.

GEN. EISENHOWER: The Prime Minister (Churchill) was the driver on this project. He just wouldn't take any excuses. He was one of the principal movers in this thing and deserves a lot of credit for its success.

MR. CRONKITE: Was this Admiral Mountbatten's conception originally, do you think?

GEN. EISENHOWER: I don't know. He was the one who said openly that we could build an artificial harbor.

MR. CRONKITE: This might be the place to mention the other fantastic means of supply for the beachhead and the eventual conquest of Germany, and that was PLUTO, the pipe line (Pipe Line Under The Ocean).

GEN. EISENHOWER: Yes. In order to minimize the need for ships and ports, we laid pipe lines to carry oil and gasoline, and we took the oil and gasoline that came through the lines under the sea clear to the Rhine River.

MR. CRONKITE: General, was there ever a time in the first days of the landing when supply became so critical as to endanger the operation?

GEN. EISENHOWER: The storm of June 19th hurt us some. It threw some three to five hundred vessels up on the beaches and put them out of commission.

MR. CRONKITE: You know, General, the fact that the storm came on June 19th—which was the next available date for you to have invaded Normandy and have the tides and the moon right—proves the wisdom of going on the 6th, doesn't it?

GEN. EISENHOWER: At least it proves we were lucky, Walter.

If we had invaded on the 19th, we would have been absolutely wrecked. Nothing could have stayed here. It was the worst storm in the Channel in 40 years.

I had the 83rd Division in ships anchored right off the beach. They couldn't even attempt to unload. For three days they were tossed around, and when they finally were able to unload, every one of them was just as seasick as he could be. They had to rest a full day before they could do anything.

And I couldn't get over here to Normandy. I couldn't get over in a ship. I couldn't get over in a plane. For three days I was just bogged down in England because of that storm.

NEXT: Gen. Eisenhower tells of his own experiences in the early days of the Normandy battle and describes what he believes motivates the individual fighting man.

Ft. Worth, San Diego Wisconsin Probes Lewd-Photo Convair May Merge Plot Against Governor, Others

SAN DIEGO (AP)—A General Dynamics Corporation spokesman in New York said the San Diego and Fort Worth, Tex., divisions of Convair may merge, the San Diego Union reported Saturday.

Madcap Rooters Ordered to Cut Gridiron Grass

CULLMAN, Ala. (AP)—Cullman High School's football field will be one of the state's best-maintained gridirons this fall.

Six youths have been sentenced by Recorder's Court Judge Tom Smith to work 20 hours each on cutting and trimming the grass on the oval.

The boys all pleaded guilty to charges of painting "CHS Class of '64—Go, go, go" on businesses and other property in Cullman.

Hazel Crosby, Ex-Star, Dies

PETALUMA (AP)—Hazel Crosby Brown, 74, a widely known vaudeville star, died Friday in a hospital.

She was one of the original members of the Loew's vaudeville act "Gus Edwards' Children."

As Hazel Crosby, she appeared with Walter Winchell, George Jessell and George Price on the vaudeville stage in her 26-year career and was a leading lady for Leon Errol, the rubber-legged comic. She lived in nearby Sonoma with a daughter.

Venezuela Adopts Changes in Church

CARACAS (AP)—Venezuela's Catholic episcopacy in annual meeting has decided the Spanish language will replace Latin in the mass and ceremonies such as baptism and burial and that locally composed religious music is acceptable. The reforms are permitted under Vatican Ecumenical Council decisions.

that no final decision has been reached.

Convair in San Diego finished work on the 880 and 990 jet airliners, and now has no new aircraft contract.

THE DIVISION has reduced its work force from 14,000 to 3,000 since 1961.

The Fort Worth division has about 15,000 employees and the bi-service F-11 (TFX) fighter contract. It hired 5,000 since January 1963.

One source said the board of directors, scheduled to meet Friday, is expected to consider plans for joining the two divisions.

"It would make a lot of sense," he said, "because they are similar in product lines and capabilities."

CONVAIR and Fort Worth division spokesmen could add nothing to the corporation official's statement in New York.

The possibility of a consolidation was rumored Thursday after General Dynamics President Roger Lewis completed a week of talks with company division officials in San Diego.

"There are some loose ends still to be wrapped up," a source close to the company said.

MADISON, Wis. (UPI)—More witnesses will be called Monday in a probe of an alleged plot to discredit Wisconsin's governor and other high state officials with obscene "staged" photos.

Assistant Dist. Atty. Earl H. Munson Jr. of Dane County said more witnesses have been subpoenaed for Monday but declined to identify them.

Seven Milwaukee police, including Chief Harold A. Breier, testified Friday, bringing to 10 the number of witnesses heard.

The probe was called by Dist. Atty. Michael B. Torphy Jr. It is investigating reports of a conspiracy to procure compromising photographs of state officials to retaliate against them for their roles in a recently concluded Milwaukee County John Doe probe.

Two Milwaukee Police Department detectives and a member of the Milwaukee County district attorney's staff reportedly have been implicated in the probe.

Breier said he brought "records and tape" to the hearing. He said these were of a conversation, but would not elaborate.

The alleged conspiracy to obtain the photographs of Gov. John Reynolds, U.S. Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., Atty. Gen. George Thompson and other persons that played a prominent role in the Milwaukee County John Doe probe of city and police business has reportedly been based primarily on the testimony of a prisoner now in Dane County jail.

The prisoner, Earl Jacobs, 44, of Madison, who has been convicted of receiving stolen property, has said he was contacted by the Milwaukee detectives and offered $2,000 to procure the pictures. Reportedly, a tape recording of a conversation he had with one of the detectives has been introduced as evidence.

Jacobs told reporters the detectives warned him to get "photographs or recordings which would place these men (the officials) in very embarrassing positions, like being with nude women." He said they told him they wanted to "get something on these guys 'cause we're in trouble" because of the Milwaukee County

Police Keep Eye Out for Half-Suits

By MARY ELLIS CARLTON

Controversy still rages as to whether the topless swim-suits for women are quite an eye-ful, just awful or unlawful. Long Beach police have decided on the latter.

A junior Olympic swimmer, age 17, says she'd never wear one, a youthful lifeguard thinks it's the greatest idea since tranquilizers and an international beauty queen thinks "the whole thing's disgusting."

One local shop had them on display Saturday, another "wouldn't allow one in the place." Others have them on order to keep up with the trend toward over-all sun-tans.

BUT LOCAL gendarmes, putting their collective foot down, have taken a definite stand.

They'll pinch (whoops, I mean arrest) any female nature lover who goes bouncing along the beach half-dressed in one of California designer Rudi Gernreich's topless wonders.

Police Chief William Mooney said Saturday that officers are being instructed to arrest women who appear publicly in naked top bathing suits.

City prosecutor James T. Starr had this to say: "To me, appearing in this type bathing suit is lewdness. We will issue complaints and prosecute."

MOONEY said there are three laws to cover the latest controversy in women's swimwear.

One is Section 314 of the California State Penal Code which makes a misdemeanor of lewd conduct.

Another: Section 650 1/2 of the same code, which covers outrages to public decency.

Even more graphic and to the point is Section 7300.12 of the Long Beach Municipal Code, which says specifically:

"... No person of the female sex shall be attired in a bathing suit unless such suit shall be made of opaque material and worn in such a manner as to preclude from and provide against the exposure of all parts of the buttocks, breasts and (read and heed, bikini wearers) to a line above the naval of the body."

MEANWHILE, store owners about town report the latest shock treatment to swimwear is the most-talked-about item in the garment industry.

"We will have them for people who ask," said John Horsey, fashion coordinator for Buffums, which, as Long Beach's oldest department store, has been selling swim-suits since the black stocking days.

But he sniffed at it as "unimportant fashionwise—a gimmick and a very clever publicity stunt by Mr. Gernreich."

"We believe in being advanced—but that's pushing it a little far," he concluded.

Fredericks of Hollywood was first in town to have them on display in their Ocean Blvd. show windows. "You wouldn't believe the expressions when people look at them," reported Izzy MacLeod, store manager.

Henry Katz, owner of Greta's in the Shore, says that if such nude suits became the vogue he'd quit selling swim-suits.

"Instead, I'd buy up all the parking lots on Pacific Coast Highway and sell space for girl-watching. That would replace baseball as the national sport," he quipped.

Diane Barbieri, owner of La

Scarpa, a boutique shop in Seal Beach, is expecting shipment next week. "You'd be amazed, not a woman comes in the shop who doesn't ask to see one."

IBC executive producer Wayne Dillard thinks they're fine in their place, but not in this international beauty contest.

One local housewife and part-time writer of children's stories, Mrs. Mark Clutter, believes she has the answer:

"I think any woman would be happy to wear one if hubby would buy her a mink stole for coverup."

MY, HOW THEY'VE CHANGED

Hampshire Sweeps-Off and Running

By ALLAN PRIAULX
CONCORD, N. H. (UPI)—Sweepstakes tickets are selling like hotcakes in New Hampshire, the only state in this century to authorize a sweepstakes. But hardly any Yankees are buying them.

More than $1.3 million worth of tickets have been sold so far at $3 apiece to persons willing to gamble on prizes which range up to $100,000.

Most of the buyers appear to come from surrounding states and a few cars from as far as Oregon are seen parked in front of the state's green front liquor stores, the only place besides race tracks they are sold.

"WE HAVEN'T even started yet," Sweeps Director Edward J. Powers claimed. "Wait until the summer tourists pour into this state, we'll at least triple our business."

The first tickets will be drawn from plastic drums in Salem, N. H., at Rockingham Park sometime in July.

There will be 332 tickets out of the first $1 million worth drawn, and each person holding a ticket that is drawn will win some sort of prize, from a few hundred dollars to a top of $100,000. The series will be repeated for each $1 million worth.

NEW HAMPSHIRE authorized a sweepstakes to raise money for education in the state which has no sales or income tax.

The proposal passed the legislature last year after heated debate and was approved by Democratic Gov. John W. King. The voters gave it a thumping endorsement last March in a referendum.

Here's how it will work: Each of the 332 three-year-old horses entered in the race will be assigned a ticket in a small rotating drum.

A larger drum will hold 333,333 tickets representing $1 million.

A horse ticket and a sweeps ticket will be matched two-by-two. Tickets on horses that actually run the race and the ones that win will be worth the most after the Sept. 12 race.

The name and address of the ticket buyer or beneficiary are on all tickets, which the store keeps, and buyers are given only an "acknowledgement" which they are not required to present to collect. Prizes will be paid on the basis of names and addresses.

The tickets are sold through electronic devices much like a receipt-giving machine in a retail store.

The tickets go into the machine and are picked up each evening by an armored car and stored in a bank vault in Manchester.

NEW HAMPSHIRE'S two senators and two congressmen co-sponsored bills in Washington to exempt the state's program from a steep 10 per cent federal excise gambling tax.

The state is believed to be the only one in the nation paying a direct tax to the federal government and the lawmakers feel the sweeps should be exempt, just as pari-mutuel tracks and other programs are.

Going by the book, the Internal Revenue Service has even ruled that the clerks selling the tickets must have $50 federal gambling tax stamp. Both taxes are paid under protest.

A FEAR that "big time gamblers and racketeers" would move into the Granite State was expressed by opponents of the sweeps.

"We've had no complaints or reports whatsoever as of the present time," said state police criminal division head Capt. John Conti. "But we're keeping our ears open."

Because the tickets are sold only in the liquor stores and at Rockingham Park and Hindsdale race tracks, the sweeps commission is itching to liberalize the laws.

It has urged hotels and motels to provide a "ticket buying service" for their guests the same way they provide a laundry service.

The law will be in for some amending at the 1965 legislature.

Show Judges Pick Top Dogs

Whippet Is First in Hound Class

By ELEANOR AVERY PRICE
P-T Pets Editor

Hounds, toy breeds, and non-sporting breeds promenaded Saturday before judges and thousands of spectators at Harbor City Kennel Club's two-day extravaganza being held at Long Beach Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Winners of the hound group, selected by Judge Maxwell Riddle of Ohio, was a whippet, Champion Courtenay Fleetfoot of Pennyworth, owned by Pennyworth Kennels of New Hampshire.

WINNER of the non-sporting breed, judged by James W. Trullinger, of Long Island, New York, was a miniature poodle, Champion Montmartre Maria Nina, owned by Mrs. Robert Tranchin of Dallas, Texas.

The host city of Long Beach took two first place prizes in the Best of Breeds Saturday judging. Champion Margaret's Rique Rebel, owned by Margaret W. Johnston, of 7174 Atlantic Ave., was named best Chihuahua (Smooth Coat); and Zorra of Aroi, owned by Ronald C. Hackett of 275 Junipero St., was adjudged best greyhound.

Working, sporting and terrier breeds will be featured today. Altogether, more than 3,600 entries of 106 breeds make this the largest dog show ever held in the nation.

NATION'S LARGEST DOG SHOW GETS UNDER WAY SATURDAY IN VETERANS' STADIUM

MOSTLY FAMILY PETS

Big Show Dogs Just Dogs

By LES RODNEY

Dog shows have been kidded so much that it came as a pleasant surprise to this non-knowledgeable mutt-owner, assigned to browse around the Veterans Memorial Stadium Saturday, to find that in spite of all the mysteries of grooming, presenting and judging, dogs are still basically dogs, and their owners are quite likely to be nice people.

There, for instance, was one of the prize-winning basset hounds being led on his once-around-the-grounds victory walk. And when the smattering of applause broke out, don't you know the lugubrious, flop-eared, bleary-eyed champion stopped and shuddered violently in animation, exactly as your non-pedigreed dog and mine.

In the huge roofed pavilions away from the judging areas, where the dogs just waited their turn, you could see children dreamily curled up next to their pet pooches, catching up on their sleep, while the dog like as not affectionately licked his or her face.

"IN FACT," one veteran dog shower said, "the conception that these are some special kind of dogs, different from others, is all wrong. Most of these dogs also happen to be house pets."

If you ask a dog owner a question, like "Pardon my ignorance, but what kind of dog is this?" you will get not only a courteous response, but an enthusiastic and detailed one.

The thin-faced, tiny-legged, nostril-quivering dogs called Italian greyhounds were touted as "exceptionally intelligent," by one owner. In truth they looked pretty smart putting on their hilarious fashion show, in which they displayed to considerable applause a variety of styles, including the topless bathing suit.

DESPITE THE physical contrast, a 190-pound Irish wolfhound was likewise enthused over by its owner as "exceptionally intelligent."

There were only 26 of this breed. "You won't find too many," the lady explained, "because you have to be a certain kind of person to have one. We had to move to a ranch, and buy a half-ton truck because a couple of them couldn't fit into a station wagon. And smart? We sometimes have to spell words in front of him to keep him from understanding!"

A whippet owner said they were pretty smart too, and second fastest runner to the greyhound. "Can do 40 miles an hour." But a little later a Borzoi fancier, showing one of those sleek Russian wolfhounds which ran with the Czars in the good old days, mentioned that not only was his gorgeous (and it was) Timon a true representative of this best-tempered dog, but could run 47 miles an hour.

A frantically combing poodle owner stopped long enough to snort: "Intelligent? They're human!"—which some people in the age of H-bombs might consider a contradiction in terms. It came as a shock when a Dalmatian owner, fondling one of the black-and-white "firehouse dogs," admitted it might not be the most intelligent. "Shrewd, though, and the most lovable in many ways."

ONE THING they all agreed on: This, the biggest of dog show in American history, was a superbly planned and run affair, something for Long Beach to be proud of.

Oh yes. There was a dog photographer seeking business, with a big sign: "Let Your Dog Know He's Important!" But no drunk wandered up to a boxer and snarled, "Maybe he's a good boxer, but can he PUNCH?"

And there were no reports of any drop-outs from dog obedience school.

DEBATE FLARES ON SAFETY REGULATIONS

Rising Water-Sport Death Toll Rocks the Boat

By LOU JOBST

Marine Editor

California—with nearly 850 miles of seashore and 2,000 square miles of inland waters—has become the flashpoint of the nation's "aquatic explosion."

The state, which has three of every 10 pleasure boats in the U.S., has seen an unprecedented boom in recreational boating turn into a nightmare of disorder and disaster.

Last year nearly 250 Californians were killed or injured in motor boat accidents alone. The toll among other water sports enthusiasts was almost as appalling.

THE situation has brought a rising clamor to "do something" about water safety.

Suggested solutions have ranged from extremes of a call for massive government action, including state licensing of all boat operators, to a demand that authorities take a hands-off, "It'll work itself out" attitude toward the situation.

Aquatic experts such as representatives of 21 agencies who sponsored the first annual Western Boat and Aquatic Safety Congress at Santa Monica Thursday, Friday and Saturday offer no single, simple solution.

"Let's have no more laws governing boaters," said Rear Adm. N. W. Sprow, commandant of the 11th Coast Guard District at Long Beach and a featured speaker in the congress. "We have enough legislation and government control already."

Sprow believes the growing safety crisis can be curbed by adequate enforcement of present statutes and through "self-policing" by the boating industry. He eyes with suspicion a proposal to license boat operators in the manner auto drivers are now certificated, seeing it mainly as a scheme by bureaucrats to raise more tax dollars.

"I think we should withhold judgment until more facts are in," said Lachlan M. (Lock) Richards, chief of the California state division of Small Craft Harbors.

ABHORRING the idea of creating another "big bureaucracy" or legisla-ing away any more personal freedom, Richards believes no stand should be taken on state licensing or "any other possible corrective action" until a complete and thorough study of boating accidents and safety can be made. He also opposes more fees because "boat owners are already over-taxed."

Richards feels there is too much speculation and too little concrete information on the problem at present.

He is especially wary of fixing the major responsibility for boating accidents on any one group or set of causes until all the facts can be gathered, examined and correlated.

SPROW says most of the accidents are caused by male boaters between 25 and 44.

The Coast Guard officer, whose 1,000-man command ("about the same number of men as 20 years ago") encompasses all of Southern California, Arizona and a part of Nevada, is willing to admit more legislative control of boating "is on the way."

He even favors at least one major change in the "rules of the road," regulations governing rights-of-way on the high seas and other navigable waters.

SPROW is for giving "deep laden vessels in marked channels" the absolute right-of-way over small craft including sailboats. He considers present regulation which hold that a 1,100-foot-long tanker must yield to a tiny boat even in narrow channel entrances, as outmoded and illogical.

The admiral also would like to see more aids to navigation such as beacons and channel markers, especially on newly opening inland waterways, along with closer inspection and licensing of crews and vessels and more education—the battery of local boating societies for years—of the boating public.

HE ALSO favors a crackdown on bootleg boats-for-hire operators, men who operate passenger-carrying craft without Coast Guard inspection and certification, and would like to see something done about unscrupulous boat suppliers who use "false advertising to make claims for equipment which it just won't do."

Sprow even promised to keep secret the name of any boater who would turn informant on uncertified-for-hire operators.

"This is a serious problem and one we have to stamp out," he asserted.

Another speaker, Dr. Glenn H. Egstrom, director of the Performance Physiology Laboratory at UCLA, estimated up to four out of five "week-end athletes" might not be able to physically and mentally cope with the "extreme conditions" of their particular pastime.

A scuba diver, Dr. Egstrom said a study of 22 Los Angeles diving deaths revealed that panic and improper use of equipment were the leading causes of underwater fatalities.

HE SAID many water sportsmen "fail to look at the total problem" and prepare for any eventuality.

While boaters may take every precaution to what might happen to them in the boat, they are careless about what they might need if they fall in the water, he said.

He said anybody that attempts to sail to Catalina Island without being able to swim, for instance, is foolishly jeopardizing his life.

THE UCLA professor said many persons, including fishermen, boaters and divers, fail to master the best techniques of water safety and do not avail themselves of the best safety equipment.

More safety training is needed in all fields, he said, so the aquatic sportsman can learn to "make the educated choice."

The meeting in the Miramar Hotel also featured an address by Commodore J. P. Obarski, legal officer of the 11th CG District; numerous safety and boating demonstrations and more than a dozen panel discussions ranging from speed and safety in drag racing to marine communications, towing and launching.

Symposia were also held on skin diving, water skiing, insurance and navigation.

Civil Rights Act a Milestone— Not End of Road

WITH SENATE PASSAGE of the civil rights bill the nation reaches a significant milestone in the long journey toward equality, but the racial struggle does not automatically come to an end, of course.

In fact, for a time that struggle will probably grow even more intense as Negroes, their rights now guaranteed by a specific statute as well as by the U.S. Constitution, seek more boldly the practical benefits of their progress.

Prejudice cannot be erased by legislation or court edict. The rights which have been declared are yet to be secured. It will probably be as hard to end discrimination in restaurants, at union headquarters, and at the voter registration desk as it has been to integrate the schools.

NO DRAMATIC UPHEAVALS are expected in California as the result of the new federal legislation, for in almost every respect California laws already are as strong or stronger than the new civil rights measure.

The greatest impact will be felt, obviously, in the southern states where discrimination has been a tradition and a way of life.

POLITICALLY, President Johnson should benefit by the passage, in his administration, of the strongest civil rights measure since reconstruction days. Americans generally have expressed themselves in the public opinion polls in favor of such legislation.

Passage would not have been possible, however, without strong Republican leadership in its behalf. Sen. Leverett Saltonstall, the Massachusetts Republican, is correct in saying that "this is truly a bipartisan endeavor in which both parties can properly take pride and satisfaction."

There will be stormy times in some parts of the nation when the government takes the steps necessary to enforce the law of the land. But if Americans join hands, as Democrats and Republicans did in working for the passage of the civil rights bill, the storm will be weathered. And afterwards, the day will be considerably brighter for all Americans.

Patient Is Sound

AN EXCELLENT TESTIMONY to Long Beach's economic health is the ability of the City Manager to offer a budget which proposes an expansion of services without a raise in the tax rate.

City Manager John Mansell's proposed budget has been made possible by good city administration and good civic promotion.

There's a tendency to criticize the way things are done in the home town. Certainly there's a lot of room for improvement in Long Beach. But clearly, there is much which is right. Enlightened zoning and building codes, good utility services, effective promotion of Long Beach's physical advantages have stimulated the city's economic growth and provided a broader tax base.

Long Beach, besides being physically a good place to dwell, also happens to be a good place to do business and earn a living. A doctor of economics would have to pronounce the patient sound and vigorous.

Reapportioning May Take Years

I, P-T Sacramento Bureau

SACRAMENTO—California Senate reapportionment, apparently mandated by a U.S. Supreme Court decision on other state legislatures, still may be years off.

Earliest it is likely would be for the 1967 legislature. And Northern Californians, bitterly opposed to shuffling Northern-occupied Senate seats in favor of McCAULEY the more heavily populated Southland, will try to stall longer if possible.

A tipoff on which way the geographical winds are blowing: Gov. Brown.

Brown, a close student of constitutional law, stated clearly that "California must reapportion its Senate" shortly after the historic court decision was handed down.

To a Northern California senator, that was like waving a red flag at a bull. Brown was blustered by Northern California lawmakers, and the northern press took a dim view of his interpretation.

Within 24 hours, Brown softened his position considerably.

He said he had agreed to withhold taking any stand on reapportionment until the Senate Judiciary Committee had a chance to study the impact of the court decision.

Also, the governor blasted the Supreme Court for intruding on the province of the legislative process.

This took political courage for Brown to take on the U.S. Supreme Court. The governor is thought to aspire to either the U.S. Supreme Court bench or the vice presidency.

But regardless of his role as a close student of the constitution, Gov. Brown is a San Francisco-spawned politician. And all of Northern California has declared war on the Supreme Court decision.

Northerners are crossing their fingers, hoping that the U.S. Supreme Court will exclude California from its ruling because the California electorate in 1962 rejected a proposition to add seven more Senate seats in the Southland.

Also, Gov. Brown took note of the fact that some rural states will try to upset the court ruling by initiating a federal constitutional amendment.

Why the delay in California reapportionment?

Southern California Senators are outnumbered 4 to 1 by northerners, and the North wants to keep it that way as long as possible. However, the Southland controls the Assembly, where representation is by population rather than county lines.

Many prominent Northern California senators would bite the political dust if the Senate is reapportioned on a population basis. The casualties would be especially high among the senators who crusaded to revoke Long Beach's tideland trust.

Sens. Virgil O'Sullivan, Fred Farr and Stephen Teale all are from under-sized senate districts. They probably will be redistricted out of a job when reapportionment comes.

If the court order sticks to peg Senate districts on a population basis, the future California senate district would cover an area of 400,000 population.

Long Beach area would be in line for one and possibly two senators of its own. Orange County would be entitled to two senators. Los Angeles County probably would wind up with 17 senators.

In all cases, new Southland Senate districts would come from the thinly-populated north.

Monterey County, Sen. Farr's home-district, is only a little more than half the population of Long Beach. Yet its 198,351 citizens rate one full senator under California's present apportionment.

Sen. O'Sullivan represents a district of only 52,625 population. The 28th Senatorial District, composed of tiny Alpine, Inyo and Mono Counties, has a population of only 14,000 persons.

Most practical way to reapportion the 40-member Senate would be to provide one Senate seat for every two districts in the 80-seat Assembly.

But that drastic plan would wipe out most of the far-north senators. And the Sacramento bellies is that incumbent northern senators will insist on a Senate-packing program that will salvage as many Northern seats as possible. That way the South would get new seats, but many northern incumbents would be able to retain their offices. Only taxpayers might oppose enlarging the Senate.

HOWEVER, the Senate-packing scheme would require approval of the electorate for a constitutional amendment. The current constitution limits the size of the Senate to 40 members.

Delays for a constitutional amendment would work in favor of interests that want to keep intact the present Senate. That way the 1965 legislature could not act finally on any reapportionment plan.

Rather, it merely would refer a possible future reapportionment plan to voters. The electorate probably wouldn't vote on the measure until November of 1965. Lawmakers could debate the issue again in 1966 or 1967.

In the meantime, there is more time for some one to overturn or invalidate the 1964 Supreme Court decision. And in that vein, delay-and-stall will be the order of the day for reapportionment foes.

Platoon Politics Puts New People in Posts of Power

I, P-T Political Editor

THE PLAYERS change. There's the fairly normal political attrition from election to election, from vogue to vogue. But California has adopted this season a platoon system and it's going to be a bit more difficult distinguishing and identifying the new faces.

State Republicans fielded the big new platoon in selecting the Goldwater delegation over the Rockefeller slate. Both these slates had something in common—they each had about 15 persons who had served on the 1960 Nixon delegation. In Rocky's group, beyond the 15 repeaters, were numerous other familiar names—generally considered to be the party regulars.

There'll be a lot of new faces in the California seats at the Cow Palace next month. Reporters are bound to miss the easy talk with the old familiar contacts. But of course that was the whole idea of Goldwater supporters—to put in a different team.

Missing from the San Francisco swirl will be Sen. Kuchel, that city's ex-Mayor Christopher, former Gov. Knight, former Labor Secretary James Mitchell, State Sen. Jack McCarthy, Assemblymen Bagley, Marks, Milias, Britschgi, Veneman and Flouray, Congressman Mallard, former state GOP chairman John Krehbiel and Laughlin Waters, former State Treasurer Ron Button, national committeeman Joe Martin and former Assembly Speaker Luther Lincoln.

HOUSER

GOLDWATER'S WINNERS include delegation chairman Bill Knowland, Secretary of State Frank Jordan, State Sen. Jack Schrade, Assemblymen Don Mulford and E. Richard Barnes, L.A. County Sheriff Peter Pitchess, former U.S. Treasurer Ivy Baker Stevens, former Congressman Pat Hillings, L.A. City Atty. Roger Arnebergh and former Assemblymen Harold Levering, Joe Shell and Bruce Reagan.

Not only are many of the Goldwater delegates (other than those above) unfamiliar to the press but may stay that way by their own choice if the frequently voiced right-wing mistrust of reporters is not mitigated.

New faces of 1964 continue. Now comes Pierre Salinger, not even in the state's index of potentials as recently as last March when he made his lion-like entrance and took his lion's share of the vote for California's available U.S. Senate seat.

SALINGER'S DEFEAT of Controller Alan Cranston set back the California Democratic Council in a degree still to be assessed. But several CDC people and clubs have defected and a new Democratic Volunteers Committee has been organized to hew to a line apparently drawn by Assembly Speaker Jesse Unruh.

New faces are a certainty in national committee posts of both parties. Long Beach's Ann Bowler, who chaired the impressive county effort for Goldwater, is the committeewoman designate for the GOP; Atty. Gardiner Johnson of Piedmont will be the committeeman.

Democrats meet next Saturday to name their committee people, the offices now held by Atty. Gen. Stanley Mosk and former U.S. Treasurer Elizabeth Smith Gatov. State Demo Chairman Eugene Wyman seems a likely choice. State FEPC Chairman Carmen Warschaw hasn't given up her fight, through all of this year, for the other spot.

WE'LL SEE PLENTY of new faces at the state GOP convention this year, after the national convention, as a result of the packing bill of the recent legislature. Designed to head off a party takeover by Birch Society members and other far-right disciples, the law gives incumbent Republicans extra state committee appointments to smother Birch inroads in the June primary.

And finally, within a few days we'll see a new shuffle here at home in the makeup of the Democratic State Committee as Assemblyman Joseph M. Kennick and nominees Michal Cullen, 32nd Congressional District, and Willard Hastings, 39th Assembly District, name their choices to the party's official group.

Our Challenge Called Unfair

EDITOR:

Your May 25th and June 18th editorials are a classic and sad display of the misused power of the press. The "challenges" you so grandly make are carefully worded offers that constitute no financial risk to your paper and yet at the same time, without careful reading, seem to make you a champion of fair play and someone else a liar or worse.

I'm sure that $10,000 could easily be raised to back up an equally worded challenge to your paper to prove that you have never sold a paper to or accepted an ad from a Communist and that if you are unable to prove "to the satisfaction of the State Attorney General" that this is untrue, then your readers are to conclude that your paper is in favor of communism.

Such a challenge and such a conclusion would of course be unfair to you—and so, gentlemen, are your editorials which make such "grandstand plays."

Instead of the State Attorney General's spending his time in judging your carefully rigged editorial challenges, I'm sure he can spend his time to better advantage investigating the unfortunate effects on this community and many others where a few men have gained a monopoly over the press with the result that only one newspaper is printed.

Opposes Pay Hike for Congressmen

President Johnson, in declaring War on Poverty has a very good place to start in his own back yard:

Congress wants a $7,500 pay increase for our poverty-ridden congressmen.

In one of the issues of your paper it was stated it is costing the taxpayer $170,000 per year to keep each member of Congress in Washington, with all the special privileges they enjoy, and there is no law which requires their presence in any session of Congress.

I will not cast my vote for any congressman who votes for this increase.

If the pay is too little, why will they spend an enormous amount to get the office? They vote a tax cut and at the same time vote to increase the national debt.

It doesn't seem to make sense.

State Senate Not Needed

EDITOR:

I believe the time has come to completely eliminate the State Senate and change over to a one-house legislature.

Monday's U. S. Supreme Court decision prohibits use of the population vs. area check-and-balance system. Let's not have two houses completely duplicating the same work and representing the same people in the same way.

GOP-Dixiecrat Alliance May Split

WASHINGTON — A significant byplay occurred on the Senate floor last week which could mean the end of the powerful alliance between Northern Republicans and Southern Democrats. This alliance, never formalized by written agreement but very potent just the same, has dominated the Senate for a quarter of a century.

PEARSON

First put together by the late Sen. Bob Taft of Ohio, it decreed that Northern Republicans would support the South on racial and civil rights votes. This is how Hell's Canyon was defeated, and why the South has so consistently opposed wage-hour, labor, and social legislation.

The two leaders of this alliance in recent years have been Sen. Dick Russell of Georgia, the elder statesman of the South and the soulful senator from Illinois, Everett Dirksen, the GOP leader.

But last week, when Russell introduced his amendment requiring the civil rights bill to go to a nationwide referendum for approval, it was the other leader of the alliance, Dirksen, who delivered the most crushing blow.

"Are we to reject and repudiate the action of Congress after all these days of deliberation?" he asked.

And referring to the House of Representatives, which has already passed the civil rights bill, Dirksen continued: "What an affront to the other legislative branch of government to say, 'You gentlemen had the gall to stand up and be counted on the record, but we will not do so. We will take refuge in an escape clause. We are going to send the issue back to the people.'"

"Mr. President, I shall not make that confession. Somewhere in Shakespeare it is written: 'Cowards die many times before their deaths, the valiant never taste death but once.'"

Listening to Dirksen's speech were many senators, because this was an important test vote. Among them was his Democratic colleague from Illinois, Paul Douglas. Douglas and Dirksen have been bitter political opponents.

But Douglas whispered to his neighbor, Sen. Jennings Randolph, D-W. Va., "I think I should congratulate him."

"Go over and shake his hand right now before you lose the impulse," whispered Randolph.

Douglas did so. On the floor of the Senate the two political enemies from Illinois made up.

Three men died while I was abroad, men who, in their own unique way played important parts in molding modern America.

One was Don Gajay of Cambridge City, Ind., who has saved thousands of dairy farmers countless hours and aching backs by initiating the Chore-Boy milking parlor system, whereby cows eat and are milked at a higher level than the dairyman stands.

Another was Matty Fox, who first backed Indonesia's drive for independence and pioneered pay-as-you-go television. The critics will say, in view of President Sukarno's irresponsible gymnastics, that Indonesia should never have been given its independence. And the big TV networks still say that pay-as-you-go TV is a dastardly subversive influence. But the fact is that you cannot stop the march of independent nations. And you eventually won't be able to stop the public's right to pick what it wants to see on TV rather than have three network presidents, together with a slew of advertisers who are interested in dough, not public morality, decide what kind of crime, sex, and scandal the people should view.

Matty Fox died before his time. But eventually the television goals he fought for will be achieved.

The third molder of modern America was Morris Cafritz, who, second to Major L'Enfant, the designer of Washington, probably did most to build up the District of Columbia.

But despite wealth, he never lost the common touch, never forgot old friends, never was too busy to spend hours working with Big Brothers and the Boys Clubs.

BILL SUMNER

High Court Dealt Arrogant Slap to Voters in Colorado

WASHINGTON—In its historic judgment on the apportionment of state legislatures, the Supreme Court decreed—among many other things—that the voters of a state have no right to form constitutions and legislative systems that don't comply with the theories of the court.

Many other observations will be made about this ruling, possibly the most controversial of the Warren Court, but the sheer arrogance by which the majority of six, led by Justice Warren, gave the backs of their hands—for one example—to the voters of Colorado is almost matchless.

It is not difficult to agree in principle that the urban voters of Virginia, Alabama and Maryland have received a deliberate and decisive swindling over the years at the hands of the rural bosses. And Alabama, for one, was in definite violation of its own constitution by not setting up both of its legislative houses on a population basis.

But the voters of Colorado, in a referendum on legislative reapportionment in November, 1962, voted decisively—305,700 to 172,725—to maintain the existing apportionment of their

Senate, which is based on a combination of population and geography.

At the same time, they defeated, 311,749 to 149,822, an amendment which would have set up both of their houses on a straight population basis.

"We hold that the fact that a challenged legislative apportionment plan was approved by the electorate is without federal constitutional significance," the majority opinion held. It was intimated, too, in the decision, that Colorado's voters hadn't really understood what they were voting about.

While it is going to be extremely difficult to find any specific guidelines as to what the court will uphold in the litigation that is bound to follow, Justice Harlan, in his long and bitter dissent, noted that considerations which are now unconstitutional in matters of legislative apportionment now—by this decision—include:

History, economic or other sorts of group interests, area, geographical considerations, a desire to insure effective representation for sparsely settled areas, availability of access of citizens to their representatives, theories of bicameralism except those approved by the court, occupation, an attempt to balance urban and rural power and the preference of a majority of voters in the state.

"I know of no principle of logic or practical or theoretical politics, still less any constitutional principle," he wrote, "which establishes all or any of these exclusions. Certain it is that the court's opinion does not establish them."

Of all six decisions (New York, Delaware, Alabama, Maryland, Virginia and Colorado), Harlan stated they gave support to a current mistaken view of the Constitution and the constitutional function of the court.

"THIS VIEW," he said, "in a nutshell, is that every major social ill in this country can find its cure in some constitutional principle, and that this court should 'take the lead' in promoting reform when other branches of government fail to act. The Constitution is not a panacea for every blot upon the public welfare, nor should this court, ordained as a judicial body, be thought of as a general haven for reform movements."

"... when, in the name of constitutional interpretation, the court adds something to the Constitution that was deliberately excluded from it (he cited the debate on the 14th Amendment), the court in reality substitutes its view of what should be so for the amending process."

Sixth Grade Education Isn't Sure Evidence of Literacy

United Press International
IT IS NOT NECESSARY to take one side or the other in the civil rights dispute to understand that the U.S. Senate voted against reason and common sense in establishing a sixth-grade education as evidence of literacy in voter qualification.

A sixth-grade education is not evidence of literacy in any circumstances, nor can a Senate vote make it so. The question arose this week on an amendment proposed by Sen. Olin D. Johnston, D-S.C. Johnston proposed to delete from the bill the provision establishing a sixth-grade education as evidence of literacy. To be literate is to be able to read and to write.

The available evidence is that too many American kids are not properly literate when they leave high school and that too many universities and colleges have been compelled to establish remedial reading courses for entering freshmen. This, of course, is a scandal of national proportions and too little known.

When Johnston offered his amendment last Monday in the Senate he argued in its support that for the federal government to establish voter qualifications would be an unconstitutional exercise of power. On that argument the Senate snatched him down by a vote of 74 to 18. The Senate was in no mood to hear about constitutional obstacles to the civil rights bill.

Johnston might have obtained better attention if he had argued that, constitutional or not, the sixth-grade provision was preposterous on its face if it presumed to deal with literacy. The Reading Reform Foundation in New York estimates that three-quarters of American school children are being subjected to primitive teaching methods in which the child bypasses the alphabet on his way to read.

"This has proved ruinous in practice in the last 40 years and is largely responsible for the alarming fact that over one-quarter of our draftees must now be rejected as illiterate," the foundation has said.

The purpose of the sixth-grade clause, of course, is to support the constitutional provision that no one shall be denied the vote because of race or color. There must be better ways to enforce that provision than to invite illiterates to the polls.

An employer named Herbert Worley spoke last year in Jackson, Miss., before the State Association of School Administrators. He said he had received job applications from Mississippi high school graduates who could not spell the name of the school they had attended. Other such graduates, Worley said, were unable to spell sufficiently to fill out an application form. High school graduates!

Such individuals are illiterates and not fit to vote. Johnston's constitutional argument against the sixth-grade provision will reach the Supreme Court in time and may prevail there. If that provision could be hailed before the court of common sense it surely would lose because it states as a fact something that is not true.

Negro 'Epochal' Moment Confuses GOP

By HARRY SHARPE
United Press International

The strongest racial rights bill since North and South fought over slavery passed the Senate last week, with early House approval expected.

It was an epochal moment for the American Negro, but a confusing one for the Republican Party. Its front-running presidential candidate, Sen. Barry Goldwater, voted against it, thus thrusting the issue point blank into the general election campaign.

GOLDWATER told former President Eisenhower in advance how he was going to vote.

Many Republicans feared there would be an irreparable split between liberal and conservative wings when party unity is needed to oppose President Johnson. The latter is ready to sign the bill into law. Eisenhower, regarded as the only man who could break Goldwater, kept his counsel.

The blunt-spoken Goldwater described himself as unalterably opposed to discrimination. But he said that for the sake of national liberty he could not swallow the bill's two most important sections—public accommodations and fair employment. He charged they were unconstitutional. He also asserted they would "require for their effective execution the creation of a police state, with neighbor informing on neighbor."

"If my vote is misconstrued," he added, "let it be, and let me suffer the consequences."

These were immediate. Pennsylvania Gov. William W. Scranton, waging a last-minute blitz in an attempt to derail Goldwater's bandwagon—but without Eisenhower's public benediction—called on the senator to repudiate his stand as against the "traditional Republican philosophy of equal opportunity for all." Goldwater retorted that Scranton wanted him to sell out his principles as the price of the nomination. Rep. Melvin R. Laird, Wis., chairman of the GOP national convention platform drafting committee, asserted the platform should endorse the bill and that the convention should refuse to nominate a candidate rejecting this or any other platform plank. He said any president elected would have to enforce all federal laws, including racial rights.

Anguished cries also came from members of the GOP's liberal Senate bloc. Senate and House GOP leaders had joined with the Democrats to help frame and pass a "non-political" bill and Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois, in particular had put his prestige on the line.

WITH THE national convention in the offing, Goldwater has now placed himself in a small minority in the Senate and House and among Republican governors. But it was conceded that his posture fits the views of many Americans outside the South not in full sympathy with the Negro's objectives.

The bill, a substitute for a House-passed version, would end discrimination in voting, schools, employment, unions, public places, private enterprises offering public accommodations, and in dispensing federal funds. It was approved after the longest Southern filibuster in history—a talkathon brought to a halt by a gag rule which Goldwater also opposed. The senator's greatest strength lies in the South while other top Republicans are committed in the other direction.

President Johnson—and the late President John F. Kennedy before him—helped lay down the bipartisan congressional line by appealing to both sides to help solve the racial crisis with no thought of politics.

NATIONAL Negro leaders vowed to test the bill the minute it becomes law.

Goldwater meantime had piled up enough convention votes to win the nomination—if they stay hitched. Scranton's drive for delegates got a big lift when frustrated New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller withdrew from the race and threw him his support. But Scranton still had to make inroads deep enough to keep Goldwater from getting the magic 655 votes required.

The latest state-by-state UPI tabulation gave Goldwater 658. Scranton was campaigning hard in state after state, saying Goldwater's delegates were "fair game." He also hoped for defections in view of Goldwater's civil rights stand and noted that 230 of the senator's votes were unpledged.

Rockefeller got turned down when he urged Eisenhower and former Vice President Richard M. Nixon

CHIEF JUSTICE WARREN
Legislators Represent People to come out for Scranton. Both claimed "neutrality" though each had sought to sidetrack Goldwater. Dr. Milton Eisenhower, the ex-President's brother, came out solidly for Scranton.

Goldwater was claiming 674 first ballot votes, but was cautious. He said he wanted 50 to 100 more as a pad against possible defections. He flayed President Johnson and his policies in addressing the pro-Goldwater Texas GOP convention.

JOHNSON in turn used the Cleveland airport to denounce "cheap, mud-slinging personal politics" and called for positive discussion of America's good points. In California, where he spent this weekend politicking and speaking, he charged that opponents of broad federal programs for the people "are pretending America is divided into 50 separate countries—an idea as out of date as the dinosaur."

Late Friday, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, youngest brother of the late President John F. Kennedy, was injured seriously in a plane crash near Southampton, Mass. The pilot, Edward Zimny, of Lawrence, Mass., was killed. A Kennedy aide, Edward Moss, died of injuries received in the crash.

Also injured in the crash were Sen. Birch Bayh,

D-Ind., and his wife. Sen. Kennedy was en route to the Massachusetts Democratic Convention being held in Springfield, Mass., when the private plane crashed.

THE U.S. Supreme Court also rewrote American history by ordering that both houses of state legislatures must allot their seats on an equal population basis. This meant that in the future more political power will be deposited in cities and suburbs in states where geographical lines have given rural legislators control.

The legislative set up in 22 states will be affected at the outset though all 50 may eventually have to recast their representation. The court's split decision holding malapportionment unconstitutional was read by Chief Justice Earl Warren. "Legislators," he said, "represent people, not trees or acres. Legislators are elected by voters, not farms or cities or economic interests." Earlier this term the court had decreed that congressional districts must be as nearly equal in population as possible.

IN ANOTHER far-reaching edict, the tribunal ruled 5 to 4 in a Connecticut case that the states—as well as the federal government—cannot abridge a man's right to take refuge in the fifth amendment against self-incrimination. The decision overturned a 50-year-old constitutional precedent. It followed the recent trend of the bench in safeguarding individual rights at the state level.

In other news spheres, it was disclosed that Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy had offered to serve "in any capacity" in Communist-besieged South Viet Nam. But Johnson said he wanted him to stay in his present job during the current racial rights conflict.

The Warren Commission investigating the assassination of the late President Kennedy concluded examination of scheduled witnesses. Johnson meantime gave the navy permission to name its newest Forrestal-class attack carrier the U.S.S. John F. Kennedy. A destroyer bears the name of the late President's dead brother, Joseph, a flier killed in World War II.

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover reported that crime in the United States jumped 19 percent in the first three months of this year, more than 2½ times as much as the increase reported a year ago. Hoover said the increases were nationwide and in all population groups.

RAINBOW OF WORDS

They Learn to Read by Color

By PATRICIA PLATT

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Twenty-six adults filed into the classroom. None could read or write. But within nine hours they discovered a world is filled with such wonders as road signs and Shakespeare.

They were semi-literate when they arrived but after three sessions in an "Instant Literacy" experiment, they could read words in a newspaper.

Many had signed up for the course the only way they knew how—with an "X." They couldn't read the registration forms they marked.

The course they took was a rapid reading method called "Words in Color." It was demonstrated at a National Conference on Literacy at the U.S. Office of Education here.

THE INSTRUCTOR for the program, sponsored by Encyclopaedia Britannica Press, was Dr. Caleb Gattegno, a former University of London professor.

The key to the program is "Words in Color," a system developed by Dr. Gattegno, to teach Amharic, the complicated language of Ethiopia, while he served there on a UNESCO mission in 1957-58. He has since adapted it to six languages.

The demonstration here produced surprising results among the students, none of whom had had reading instruction beyond the second grade. Their ages ranged from the teens into the 40s.

After an hour of instruction, all could read the sentence, "Pat Possesses Pets." By the end of the course, many knew what it meant to browse for the first time in their lives—to read as well as look at pictures.

DR. GATTEGNO uses color as the basis for remembering words. The word "fun," for example, is "spelled" grey, yellow and lavender.

The students were taught to associate a color with each of the 47 separate speech sounds in the English language. Then they were drilled on the 271 spelling variations of the sounds. But color is only a gimmick for remembering. It is abandoned after the students memorize the speech sounds (phonemes) and written spellings (graphemes). The text materials are black and white.

The Gattegno method is currently in use in about 1,000 classrooms in the United States, mostly on an experimental basis. Gattegno also has developed a quick-mathematics course along the same lines, using color.

He maintains that the color method for teaching English simplifies the job for beginners because it makes basically unphonetic English become phonetic.

U.S. Due for Vicious Hurricanes

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Hurricanes this year are practically certain to aim some vicious blows at the U. S. coast.

But the ill winds of the 1964 season—June through November—may also blow some good, the weather bureau said Saturday.

FOLLOWING UP CLUES gleaned from thousands of weather satellite cloud pictures, scientists hope to reap "unique new data on the earliest stages of hurricane formation."

Basic information of this kind is needed for improvement of storm forecasts and for possible future attempts to kill hurricanes in their infancy.

In addition to new research on tropical storm origins, 1964 will see in operation the most advanced and the most extensive system ever put together for spotting, tracking, and warning of hurricanes spawned in the Atlantic and Gulf of Mexico.

For two years, now, no major hurricanes have crossed the coastline of continental United States. Maybe none will this year.

"BUT," said the Weather Bureau, "the odds against a third quiet season for this country are astronomical."

FOR ELEMENTARY PUPILS

A, B, C, D, F Grading Gets L.B. Parents' Support

By BOB WILCOX
I, P-T Education Editor

Parents have said they prefer an A, B, C, D, F system for grading elementary school pupils in a survey conducted by the Long Beach public schools.

The school system, wrestling with the problem of re-designing a report card issued three times a year to 35,000 grade school pupils, quizzed parents at six specially selected Long Beach schools.

The replies showed that 31 percent of the parents favored the A, B, C, D, F system while only 13 percent advocated the present E, S, N (excellent, satisfactory and needs-to-improve) answers were widely divided among other possible grading methods.

The questionnaire was authorized by a school-public committee which will recommend changes in the report card to take effect in the fall of 1965. However, the new card is expected to be used on a trial basis in several sections of Long Beach next year.

The parents agreed largely with the system's teachers who had been quizzed earlier. More than 50 percent of the instructors recommended a five-point grading scale (such as A, B, C, D, F) while the present three-point scale was backed by only 20 percent.

The parents overwhelmingly supported the current grading system for such non-basic subjects as art, music and physical education. The teachers were almost evenly divided between a two-point scale (such as satisfactory and unsatisfactory) and the current system.

More parents (28 percent) and more teachers (40 percent) felt it is preferable to grade a pupil on his individual achievement according to his ability, rather than in competition with other members of the class.

The parent sampling was taken from schools representing a wide range of social and economic background. The schools were Whittier, Kettering, King, Cleveland, Burbank and Madison. A total of 376 parents replied. The teacher survey drew 260 answers.

Comment in the teacher quiz varied from one who said "I find it extremely difficult to reduce a child to a series of meaningless squiggles on paper" to another who remarked "I like the present system."

The 19-member report card committee, headed by Mrs. Helene Rose, principal of Cleveland School, has voted to recommend that separate cards be used for the primary grades and grades 4, 5 and 6. A single card is in use at present.

The committee will report its recommendations to W. Odie Wright, superintendent of schools. Actual designing of the proposed cards will be done this summer. Similar committees are re-designing the junior and senior high school report cards — both of which use the A, B, C, D, F system.

Good-Will Flier Off for Japan

Henry Ohye, a 54-year-old Japanese-American, took off from Santa Monica Saturday for Oakland in a second attempt at a transpacific good-will flight to Japan.

Ohye, a Los Angeles car salesman, made an earlier attempt from Long Beach Municipal Airport in May but was stopped at the last moment by bad weather.

Ohye, in a 1962 Piper Comanche, plans to fly to Honolulu, Johnston Island, Wake Island and Iwo Jima, where he will pay respects to the unknown soldiers of the United States and Japan.

IN JAPAN he will carry greetings to various Japanese cities, including Yokkaichi, Long Beach's sister city.

He obtained his pilot's license in 1931.

During World War II he was interned in a war relocation camp.

In 1952 this frustration was partially relieved when one of his flying students, Ens. Harvey Kataoka, became the first nisei to win wings in the U.S. Navy.

Miss Randolph, 5-7, 120 and 36-24-36, topped the finalists in what senior judge Sterling J. Bemis, assistant managing editor of The Independent, Press-Telegram termed "by far the toughest contest any panel of judges ever had to decide."

Bemis' remarks were echoed by the other judges, William Totten, managing editor of the Huntington Park Daily Signal; Don Bazemore, publisher of the Long Beach News, and James Graeme, editor of the Wilmington Daily Press-Journal.

FOR WINNING the title, Miss Randolph received a surf and sand wardrobe and will reign over special events during the coming year at the ocean front family amusement park.

By JERRY WYNN

For recreation, some men play golf. Some enjoy going out to the ballpark. Others flip television dials.

Ray Gise climbs mountains. No Signal Hill mountaineer he, the affable, pipe-smoking auditor of The Independent, Press-Telegram has scaled the 14,496-foot summit of Mt. McKinley 10 times.

The last time was last year, and while Gise will scoff, it is a lofty feat for a man who stopped counting his age at 49 several years ago.

Why do you climb mountains, Ray?

"To get away from civilization."

But what's wrong with civilization?

"I'm not anti-social. It's just that getting out among natural wilderness and wildlife is the greatest tonic anyone will ever know. It prepares you to come back into civilization."

How long have you been mountain climbing?

"I made my first trip to Yosemite 30 years ago. I had just come to California from Illinois, and never had seen a mountain before. Then I saw those cliffs in Yosemite, and wanted to see what was above them. Thirty years ago, Yosemite was worth going to. Today I don't know."

What's wrong with it today?

"The theory on conservation in the government is to make as much of the wilderness accessible to as many people as possible. They now have roads in Yosemite that are like freeways. They have bulldozed geological formations to build parking spaces for people who look out of their cars and ask, 'What is there to see?' These are the same people who boast how they saw three national parks in one day — Yosemite, Kings Canyon and Sequoia. In 30 years, I haven't begun to see just one of them."

What is your theory on conservation?

"If the wilderness is worth going to, then it is worth the hardships of getting there."

Does Southern California have any wilderness areas?

"There are two spots, San Geronimo and San Jacinto, which can be called wilderness even though there are many people. Both are near Palm Springs."

Are you in favor of opening San Geronimo to accommodate skiers?

"No. There are skiers in there now, but they are the cross-country skiers and they are conservationists. But if you put in ski tows, you will have another Mammoth Mountain resort area."

Can El Dorado Park be turned into a wilderness as many conservation enthusiasts here are proposing?

"It is pretty hard to build a wilderness area from scratch, but anything is better than nothing. Cities are always too quick to cut down trees and not quick enough to plant them. As for El Dorado Park, I'm afraid you would have more wild people than wilderness."

What mountains do you enjoy climbing the most?

"Since I discovered the Sierras, I've seldom been able to get away from them. To me, they are what John Muir called them, 'The range of life.' They are rugged peaks, and yet very friendly."

What was your most difficult climb?

"I'm not a rope and piton climber. I started too late for that. I use my hands and feet. My most dangerous climbing was in the Minarets. They have a different type of rock formation that can break off from under you. The Sierras have good granite."

Have you ever been lost?

"Once, temporarily. Only thing to do when you are lost is to sit down and think it over. When you can't get any bearings, you can always get out by following streams downward. It's funny that the one time I was lost in the Sierras, I was on horseback. They always say a horse can find his way back, but this one was more lost than I was."

Which is harder, going up a mountain or coming down?

"Coming down is actually tougher. Carrying a load, you have added weight and every step drives your toes down to the front of your boots. Also, you are no longer experiencing the thrill of going up."

Do you prefer being alone in the wilderness?

"Yes. Most people have a herd instinct. I'm a screwball who likes to be alone. But you aren't really alone at all in the wilderness. It is always alive with sounds of water, bird life and animals. I've had animals come up to me as if I belonged with them in the wilderness rather than just passing through. Another reason I like to be alone is that I like to keep moving. I can carry a pack of 50 pounds and it can comfortably keep me on trail for 15 days or more."

Bears Stroke to IRA Title, Huskies 2nd

Washington Snares JV, Frosh Races at Lake Onondaga

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (UPI)—California's undefeated Golden Bears swept to a 1½ length victory over Washington in the varsity final of the 62nd Intercollegiate Rowing Association regatta Saturday although Washington won the trophy for the best overall performance in the regatta.

A crowd of about 15,000, watching under sunny skies in 90-degree weather at Lake Onondaga, saw Washington capture the junior varsity race and Wisconsin win the freshman title.

Washington thus took the Jim Ten Eyck Trophy for the best overall performance with 16 points, followed by California with 13 and Cornell with 12.

But in the blue-ribbon varsity event, there was no denying coach Jim Lemmon's Bears of California. They took the lead after the first 550 meters of the finale, after early pacemaking Navy faded out, and led the rest of the way.

HEADWINDS, as much as 15 miles per hour at various times, slowed the crews and made Saturday's times much slower than in the preliminary trials Friday, Cal, which posted the meet's best time when it took its heat Friday in 6:05.4, was clocked in 6:31.1 in the final over the 2,000 meter Olympic distance.

Actually, the victorious Washington jayvee had Saturday's best time, 6:14.9. Wisconsin's winning time in the freshman race was 6:29.4.

The victory was Cal's ninth in the varsity event, its first since 1951.

At the finish of the varsity event, Cornell was third, Princeton fourth, MIT fifth, and finally Navy.

Lake Washington Crew Beats 49ers

OAKLAND (Special)—Lake Washington's Rowing Club scored a half-length victory over Long Beach State's varsity eight Saturday on the Oakland Estuary. Lake Merritt was third.

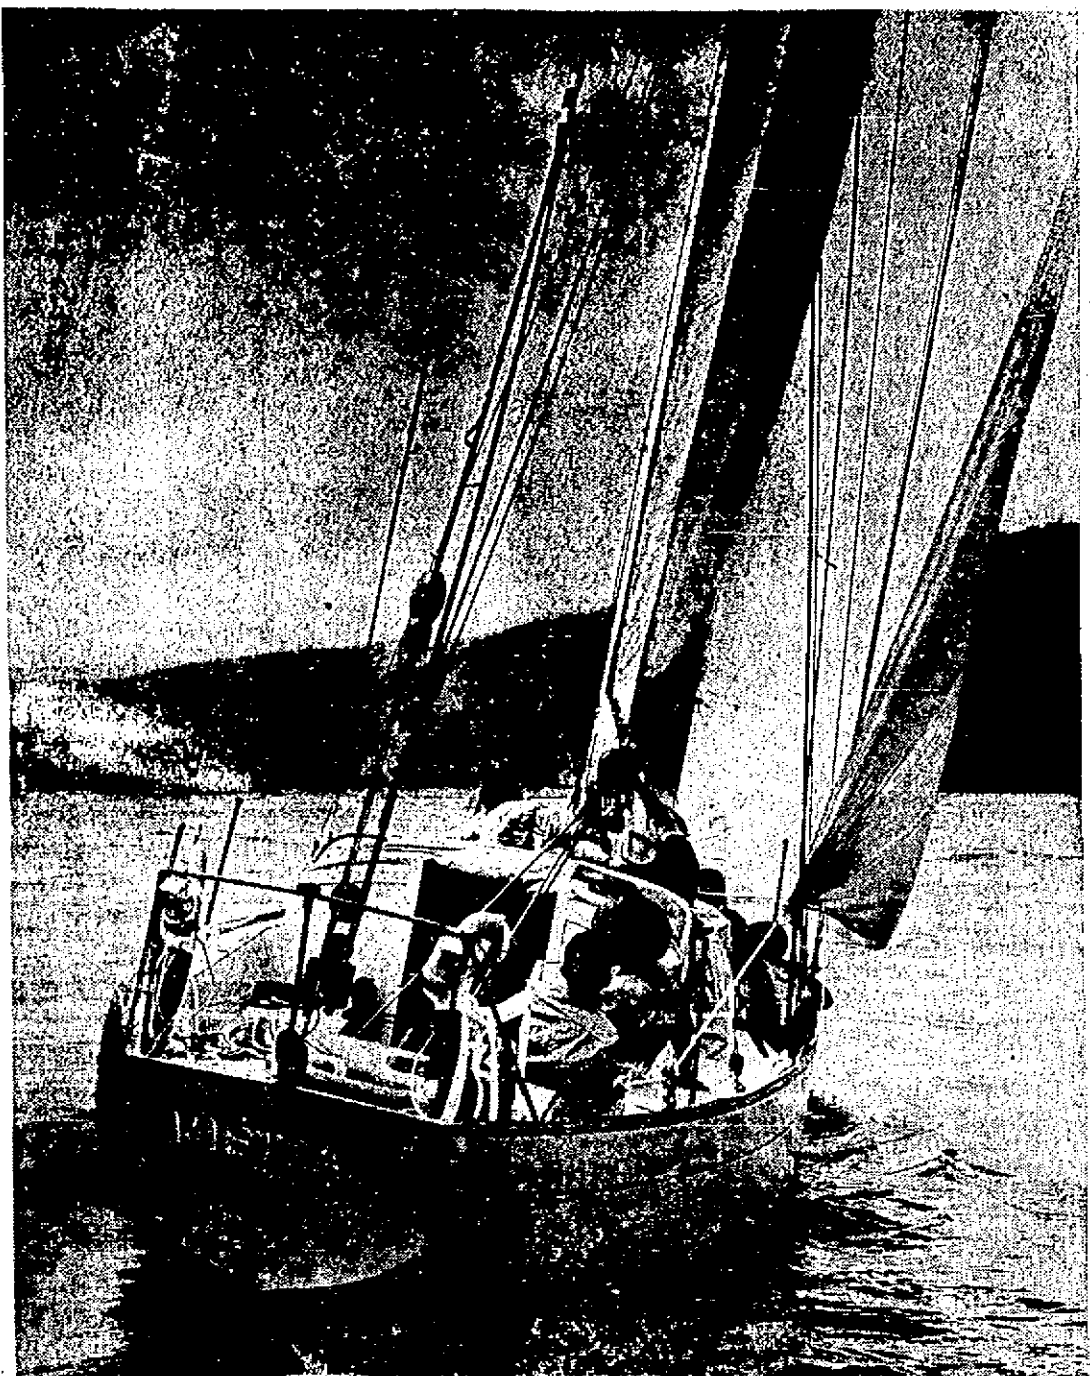

Lake Washington's crew was timed in 6:18 over the 2,000-meter course. LBSC was second in 6:20 while Lake Merritt, five boat lengths back, was clocked in 6:40.

YACHT RACE TO TAHITI FINALLY ON

Seven sleek yachts, twice delayed in starting by light winds, left Los Angeles Harbor Saturday on a 3,571-mile race to Tahiti.

In a dead heat in first position as they crossed the starting line were the sloop Mistral from Balboa and the yawl Orion from San Francisco.

Others are the ketch Ticonderoga, the schooner Diablo from Long Beach, the ketch Novia Del Mar from San Diego, the yawl Kiraivan from Balboa, and the sloop Rascal from Santa Barbara.

Ralston Leads SC Net Win

EAST LANGSING, Mich. (UPI)—Southern California, led by temperamental ace Dennis Ralston, Saturday swept the finals to capture its third consecutive NCAA tennis championship.

Ralston, the moody defending singles champion, won his second straight title by whipping three-time big ten champion Marty Riessen in the finals, 6-4, 6-4, 6-1.

Ralston then teamed with Bill Bond to defeat the UCLA duo of Arthur Ashe and Chuck Pasarell, 6-2, 6-3, 6-4, for the doubles championship.

The victories enabled the Trojans to nip UCLA, 26-25, for the team championship and retire the Bennett Bowl with 51 points accumulated since 1951. The trophy was donated by Northwestern University in honor of its tennis coach Paul G. Bennett.

RALSTON, top-seeded in the tournament and fifth-seeded for next week's Wimbledon tournament, finished with a flourish to foil Riessen's finals bid for the second straight year.

Riessen had two opportunities to make the match closer in the second set but failed twice to break the champion's service, although he had three opportunities for the decisive point.

USC 26, UCLA 25, Northwestern 17, Arizona 9, California 9, Stanford and Rice 8, Texas 5, Texas A&M, Western Michigan and Michigan, Louisiana State 3, Georgia Tech, Indiana, Miami, Michigan State, Pennsylvania, Toledo and Washington 2, and Army and Bowling Green 1.

Emerson Tops Russ in Finals

LONDON (UPI)—Margaret Smith and Roy Emerson, favorites for the Wimbledon singles titles, retained their respective London Grass Court Tournament titles Saturday but Emerson had to work mighty hard before he did so.

Emerson beat Russian star Tomas Lejus, 12-10, 6-4, while Miss Smith completed the Aussie double by beating Britain's Miss Ann Haydon Jones, 6-3, 6-3.

Lejus was the first Soviet player ever to reach the final round of a major international tournament.

WILDERNESS WANDERER

Ray Gise pauses in hike through High Sierras to contemplate nature's wonders. His views on conservation are given in "Man-to-Man" above.

Wimbledon Play Opens

King McKinley Plays 2nd Fiddle

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI)—Chuck McKinley of San Antonio, Tex., forced to play second fiddle in the seedings and the odds to Australia's Roy Emerson even though he is the defending champion, aims to win the first and last matches in the Wimbledon Tennis Championships starting Monday.

McKinley heads a 26-member U.S. delegation in men's singles in the 65th renewal of the tournament regarded by many as the unofficial world championship.

And, as reigning king of the court, he has the honor of playing the opening match in the tourney against South Africa's Tim Ryan, a player who had to come through a qualifying tournament to get a berth in the main event.

Last year, McKinley won the men's crown by beating Fred Stolle of Australia, 9-7, 6-1, 6-4, in the finale. But it was one of the strangest Wimbledon victories in history, because he was the first man who ever played all the way through to win the title without even once facing a seeded player.

THAT'S ONE REASON why Emerson, the reigning Australian champion, was seeded No. 1 by the tournament committee and also named the betting choice by the bookies at 3 to 1.

McKinley was seeded second and second betting choice at 4 to 1. In his favor, however, is the fact that the draw has once again been favorable for him and he does not figure to run into tough opposition until perhaps the quarter-final.

Emerson has drawn an American first-round foe, former Yale University captain Don Dell of Bethesda, Md.

McKINLEY

Ed's Note—This is the second entry in the personal log of 17-year-old Bill Lilly aboard the 12-meter Columbia undergoing trials for the America's Cup Race at Newport, Rhode Island. Columbia, out of Bahia Corinthian Yacht Club, is the first West Coast entry in the history of the America's Cup classic.

By BILL LILLY
Special to I.P.T.

The crew of the Columbia arrived in Newport today after completing the June trial series at Stamford, Conn., in Long Island Sound.

At the end of the first series of trials the new American Eagle leads with six victories and no defeats while Columbia, Constellation and Nerfertiti are tied with a score of two victories and three defeats each.

The selection committee figures to have a long summer ahead as each of the boats, besides American Eagle, has a victory over the others as well as a defeat by each other. The fact that American Eagle has remained undefeated is due mainly, I feel, to the greater amount of practice her crew has had than the crews of any of the other boats.

And American Eagle has certainly had more than its share of luck to boot.

DISASTER really lowered the boom on us last Sunday in the race between Columbia and American Eagle. The race started with American Eagle holding a slight lead on us. This lead was lengthened on the first half of the weather leg, but Columbia gradually started closing in when all heck broke loose.

Columbia had just come around onto the starboard tack when I heard what I thought was an explosion. I was standing about three feet in front of the mast when I heard the crash and looked up to see the mast falling. Then I saw crewman Don Vaughn going overboard. I tried to throw him a line, but by the time

I got to the mast we were too far from him, and skipper Podolak threw him a life ring.

Don suffered pulled muscles and tendons on his left side as a result of having his hand on the shroud when it gave way. When it went he was jerked by the tremendous force it was supporting. But he was the only one injured in the accident.

Apparently neither of the sails in use at the time were damaged much, but it took the crew about half an hour to get the mess cleaned up and the mast in position for towing.

It looks like a new mast will have to be built as the old one was completely sheared off at a point about 20 feet off the deck, right at the lower spreaders.

We now have two weeks to get the boat ready for July trials, but the loss of practice forced by the lay-off while the mast is being replaced could hurt the chances of this first West Coast crew in America's Cup competition.

MARINE STADIUM EVENT

Speedboats Race Today

Two Long Beach area world champions, Bob Ellis and Chuck Stearns, will be out hunting for more glory in today's final elimination heats of the sixth Regatta of Champions at Marine Stadium.

Stearns, of Bellflower, many times national champ and twice a world ski title holder, will be competing against two world, Rick Fowler of Sun Valley and Butch Peterson of Los Angeles.

Ellis, twice a national boat racing champ and driver of Rudy Ramos's world record drag boat "Golden Thing," will be twice a world ski title holder, after two shares of the $4,500 purse put up by the sponsoring Los Angeles Boat and Ski Club.

The feature drag duel of the eliminations will pit Ellis in "Golden Thing" against its arch rival, Barry McGown's "Banzai." Ellis also figures as a top contender in the speedboat circle racing competition.

In addition to drags and SK class circle races, the elimination program will include three classes of ski races, a special "grandfather's" race and a powder puff duel for "women drivers."

OTHER champions in the field include current national champion Don Towle, eight-time national champ Ed Olsen, world record holder Tony Marichich, "Crackerbox" national champion Leroy Penhall and hydro champ Marion Beaver.

In the drag skiing event, world champion Butch Peterson will be shooting at his own 117-mph quarter-mile time record.

Racing today begins at noon. Marine Stadium gates open at 8 a.m.

The 16 top contenders in today's main event circle course race from qualifying heats Saturday are:

Fregosi All-Star

Angel Shortstop Makes American League Team

NEW YORK (UPI)—American Leaguers cast sentiment aside and put most of their faith in the batting averages by picking such first-timers as Tony Oliva and Jim Fregosi for the All-Star team that will meet the National League July 7 at Shea Stadium.

The New York Yankees and Minnesota Twins each placed three men on the team, chosen by a vote of the players themselves.

The 23-year-old Oliva, who has been running 1-2 all season long for the league batting title, was the only rookie selected. He beat out Al Kaline of Detroit for the starting right field position.

FREGOSI, one of the few bright spots for the Angels this season, won the shortstop job rather handily. He drew 161 votes to 72 for runnerup Luis Aparicio of the Orioles.

The 22-year-old Angel shortstop has competed with Oliva for the league's batting leadership virtually since opening day and, although he isn't quite as gifted with the glove as Aparicio, he is out-hitting the Baltimore speedster by some 40 points.

The voting (first two places only were announced):

Catcher — Howard, New York, 217; Freehan, Detroit, 29.
First base — Allison, Minnesota, 82; Siebern, Baltimore, 50.
Second base — Richardson, New York, 133; Lumbo, Detroit, 36.
Third base — Robinson, Baltimore, 227; Maloney, Boston, 31.
Shortstop — Fregosi, Angels, 161; Aparicio, Baltimore, 72.
Center field — Mantle, New York, 255; Hall, Minnesota, 47.

Those Salmon Still Hanging Around

Sometimes this business of writing a column leaves the writer questioning himself like a housewife, who asks, "What will we have for Sunday dinner?" Well, I know what we will have for Sunday dinner, fresh salmon from the outer harbor. And writing a column for this Sunday is no chore at all, in view of the cast of characters that I am about to present.

After writing about the strange visit of northern salmon to the harbor for a week, I decided that I was tired of being low man on the totem pole and hustled down to Pierpoint Landing where general manager Mac MacClintock felt the same way. We decided to do something about it.

It wasn't hard to convince Pang Wheaton and B. J. Buchanan, who own a 26-foot boat named the Buckwheat, that the four of us should give the salmon a real try. Mac previously had learned that more salmon were taken the preceding day. That was the day that I wrote that apparently the fish had migrated.

Off we went toward San Pedro light where Helen Evans operates the bait receiver Alzina, just a short distance off San Pedro Breakwater. It was no problem to catch a few bonito in that area, plus numbers of white croaker (call it tomcod if you wish but that's not the proper name).

WE WERE FAIRLY CLOSE to the Alzina and occasionally we saw boils and swirls that certainly were not caused by bonito. We had seen Helen take one salmon, so I suggested that we tie up to the Alzina and talk to her.

Just as we pulled alongside and she threw us a line, her reel on the opposite side of the receiver started singing. She ran and grabbed it and screamed, "Somebody get the net!" I almost fell in a bait tank, but I got the net and successfully netted it for her.

It was a beauty and that really started things humming. We had been on the verge of heading for home. Instead we really started fishing. Mac was the first to hook up and that fish caused the biggest comedy of errors I've ever seen.

In the first place, the salmon ran under a skiff that was tied to the receiver. Mac extricated himself from that predicament, but then the salmon headed for the anchor chains and lines, of which there were several.

Helen, Buck, Pang and I started pulling lines and Mac kept reeling. In the midst of all this confusion, another boat pulled up alongside for bait. Three men in that craft got out and boarded the receiver and they, too, tried to help. No one was working harder than Helen, who said, "We'll get that darned fish if we have to pull up all the anchors."

MAC WAS USING 12-POUND-TEST monofilament but it held and finally enough of the chains and lines were brought up so that the fish could be netted. It, like the one I brought home, weighed exactly eight pounds, brothers no doubt.

Helen had got rust over most of a white sweat shirt. "I'm a mess," she said, and disappeared into her one-room home to get another. She stays aboard 24 hours a day except on rare occasions when somebody relieves her.

"When we have squid in a tank, I have to baby-sit with them," she said.

Wheaton, who makes fresh foods, bread and pastries at his plant at 1345 W. 14th St., and Buchanan, who manufactures air devices, weren't lucky enough to snag a salmon but they had a rip-roaring time with bonito.

We saw several hookups on other boats in the area, but most of the anglers lost their fish merely by losing their heads and tightening drags or thumbing reels. Ocean-run salmon are powerful fish that leap and take long runs and one must play them well.

One man who boarded the receiver to help in that seven-man and one-woman assist to Mac, lost a salmon off the stern of his boat. He never gave the fish a chance, just tightened down and naturally the line broke.

I, for one, am not going to make any more predictions as to when the salmon will disappear from the outer harbor.

FURTHERMORE, THERE WILL BE no more mention of dirty water, even though virtually all fishermen refer in such a manner to water that isn't clear. Frank H. Black, director of public information for the Port of Long Beach, takes exception to a paragraph in last Wednesday's column in which I said I couldn't see why the salmon and steelies would chase anchovies in dirty water.

Frank says it is true that much of the water in the harbor is discolored, but it's muddy, not dirty. He says dirty water leads readers to the conclusion that the water is contaminated.

He is afraid that my statement was misinterpreted by many readers to mean that Long Beach and Los Angeles Harbors were being negligent in allowing all kinds of waste and junk to be dumped into the area.

And the muddy water, he says, is caused mostly by the construction of Pier J. The dredge south of Pier J is moving one million cubic yards of sand and silt a month.

Now that that is settled, here's Wayne Deardon's favorite way of cooking a salmon such as we brought home. Fillet the fish, leaving the skin on. Cut in pieces, lay on foil, skin down, butter, salt and pepper and place in 350-degree oven until done. Remove with spatula, the skin sticks to the foil and you have a juicy piece of fish. I know because I tried it. Ummm!

ARNIE AT REST

Arnold Palmer seems dejected and tired as he bows head on 18th green during third round of National Open Saturday. He wound up tied for fifth in the classic.

CITY WOMEN'S PLAY

Donna Gilliam a Threat to Harriet

By JIM McCORMACK

A rapidly rising dynasty could be brought to an abrupt halt this week during play in the Long Beach City Women's golf tournament at Skylinks.

Harriet Featured in Southland Article

Some of the reasons why Harriet Glanville has won the Long Beach City women's golf championship the past two years are explored in "She Comes to the Fore at a Tee Party," by Rich Roberts in today's Southland Magazine.

Mickey Wright in Carling Tourney Lead by 3 Strokes

SUTTON, Mass. (UPI)—Reigning women's pro golfer Mickey Wright pulled three strokes away from the field Saturday by matching par in a rain-drenched second round of the $10,000 Carling Eastern Open.

The 29-year-old Texas blonde held her four-under-par pace with a 144 total for 36 holes though the last four holes of her campaign were delayed for 70 minutes and finished in rain.

Virginia Tee Honors to Marino, Skidmore

Dr. Charles Marino and Chuck Skidmore tied with 206 totals in Virginia Country Club's U. S. Open Pro-Member Tournament Saturday.

Dr. Howard Mefford finished third with a 207 total. Fourth was John Cone (209) and fifth Bill Collins (210).

Semi-Pro Football Back L.B. Entered in Seven-Team League

By AL LARSON

Semi-pro football returns to Long Beach this fall.

The Long Beach Falcons will bump up against the Orange County Rhinos, San Pedro Marauders, Chino Wolves, San Diego Sabers, Costa Mesa Raiders and Valley All-Star Eagles in the newly organized Western Football League.

McCormick L.A. Champ

Skylinks' Bill McCormick defeated Curtis Sifford of Griffith Park, 1-up, in Saturday's final match of the 47th annual Los Angeles City golf championship at Griffith Park.

Miss Harriet Glanville, the victor the past two years and three of the last four, must withstand the impressive challenge of Donna Gilliam.

Donna has burned up the California links this year, rattling off titles in the Southern California Publics, California State, Palm Springs Invitational and L.A. City championships.

Harriet's primary claim to fame this year is her sixth successive victory in the Meadowlark women's club tourney.

THE TORRID duel between the two, which starts with a round of medal play Monday and then goes to match play through Friday, could overshadow several other impressive performers.

Included in the darkhorse list would be last year's runner-up at Recreation Park, little Norma Deebie. Norma's clutch shooting in the quarter and semi-finals pushed her past top players into the finals with Harriet.

Youngsters Susan Lance who led the L.A. City play for two days before falling to Mrs. Gilliam and San Diego's Jan Mosley, a highly competitive southpaw, could throw the show into confusion.

Also on the darkhorse list are Griffith Park's Jan Wood and Filmore's Donna Caponi.

Andreason Joins So-Cal PGA Field

Dale Andreason, the husky long-hitting former Long Beach pro, has entered the $10,000 Southern California PGA golf championship at Recreation Park, July 9-12, host pro George Lake announced Saturday.

Andreason won the tourney in 1942 as a novice pro from Lakewood, and has been a contender several other times.

Pre-season tickets, costing $1 for all four days, are on sale at all golf shops in Southern California.

Amateur Qualifying Under Way at Pebble

PEBBLE BEACH (UPI)—Qualifying rounds for the state amateur golf championship will get under way on Pebble Beach and Cypress Point Monday.

Veteran shotmaker Dr. Paul Travis of Downey is the defending champion, but a flock of youngsters rate the favorites' roles this year.

Venturi Winner of Open and methodically that when he came to the 16th tee there was not a player in front of him.

The triumph heated a lot of heartaches and made up for a long series of frustrations, dating back to 1936. Then the California star, a brilliant amateur of 25, blew the Masters championship when he had it in his grasp.

He had a comfortable lead going into the final round only to blow to an 80 and lose the title to Jack Burke Jr., who made up eight shots.

IN 1960, Venturi appeared again to have won the Masters. He was in the clubhouse being fitted for the traditional green victor's coat when word came that Palmer had birdied the last two holes to take the crown.

In 1962 Venturi suffered a pinched nerve that paralyzed his right side. His career lit rock bottom. He won less than $7,000 in 27 starts in 1962 and collected less than $4,000 in 1963.

"I lost my confidence and really became discouraged," Venturi said.

This year his prestige suffered a new low when he failed to get an invitation to the Masters. He had to beg his way into the Thunderbolt Open two weeks ago in Rye, N.Y., but he finished fifth to see his comeback on the way.

L.B.'s Small Wins NCAA Golf Crown

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP)—Terry Small of San Jose State survived an afternoon rally by Kansas State's Jim Colbert and won the 67th NCAA Golf Tournament, 2 and 1 Saturday.

Small, who attended Poly High in Long Beach, had a 6-up lead at one time during the morning but saw the margin shrivel to a single hole after the 31st.

The 20-year-old youngster then won the 32nd with a 12-foot birdie putt and closed out the match with a one-foot par putt on the 35th.

For the day Small was even par over the 7,112-yard Broadmoor course. Colbert's three-under-par round in the afternoon left him three over for the 35 holes.

Saturday's final match ended a week-long tournament most notable for the elimination of favorites in early rounds. Houston won the NCAA team championship, its seventh in nine years, in the two qualifying rounds Monday and Tuesday.

SISK CALLED UP BY BUCS

PITTSBURGH (UPI)—Pirate pitcher Don Cardwell, who has been plagued with a sore arm since the season began, was sent to the Pirates' Columbus, Ohio, farm team Saturday.

Righthander Tom Sisk of Long Beach was called up from Columbus to replace Cardwell.

Sisk was optioned to the Jets on a 24-hour recall basis May 13 after recording one win and two losses.

Critic Cards: Raves to Poison Pen

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Director Gene Nelson talks about sneak preview cards: "You shoot your picture. Then you stand out in the lobby on preview night and the audience shoots at you."

Cards, no matter how good or lousy the movie, run all the way from raves to poison-pen letters, says Nelson.

"The director is a bum," says Nelson. "I get a lot of those."

Another favorite: "My wife couldn't come, but oh how she would hate this movie."

Once Nelson got a card about an actress in one of his pictures.

"She is a great actress but very homely."

Nelson said that one flabbergasted him because the girl was exceptionally beautiful but couldn't act her way out of a telephone booth.

Humor, Mystery Combined in Play

By SAMUEL A. BOYEA

In "Remains to be Seen," Community Playhouse's new production, playwrights Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse—the "Life with Father" duo—throw everything into the plot of this 'potluck' play.

Mystery, comedy, a copy of Fanny Hill, Unalutia (a common language), a disputed will, a curvy mistress, Norma Messerschmitt (Valeska Chavvel), who slips in and out from behind a built-in library of 'erotic books, a gay singer with a pop band, jazz drums, a doctor who kills his patient to avenge a wronged sister.

and a cop (Hal Slatton) who is out to pinch a banned book (from the dead man's library) which hits a "sexual bullseye on every page."

IT'S ALL cut-rate corner drugstore melange until along comes a redhead girl named Lorrie Richard (Jody Revere)—reluctant heiress to her murdered uncle's elaborate estate.

Destined to put the word 'cute' back into respectable currency, Miss Richards consistently hits the bullseye of human delight better than any book in the Park Avenue apartment library of the late Travis Revercombe. She is a bundle of deftly rationed joy when she is in bed feigning sleep as one of her suitors, brilliantly played by Lee Rhoads (Waldo Walton), reads her a selection from Fanny Hill's memoirs. Miss Richards also has great fun—and that's the secret of her appeal—when she dances, sings, plays the trap drums and sends seductive shivers up the spine of lawyer Benjamin Goodman, expertly played by Larry Worth with Bob Mitchum deadpan earnestness.

With Miss Richards in the cast, nothing needs updating but director John McNamara—more assertive in this production—drops in items like the Peace Corps, although this play was done on Broadway many years ago.

SUCH "UPDATING" leads to confusion in the minds of the actors and probably accounted for some blown lines which were "heats," the usually efficient and amusing Bruce Harrington (Lieutenant Morris Rosenberg) being one of the chief culprits. Bart Fields (Dr. Charles Gresham) probably knocked out by his own whiff of helium—or was it Gresham's law?—was the other.

As the cop with a love for banned books, Slatton (Patrolman Miller) is perfectly cast in this one. Katherine and Charlotte Shuman set designed.

Miss Richards and the chief supporting players mentioned make the production stand up as a clever, laughable mayhem of melodramatic farce—far beyond its actual contents.

WINTER DRIVING ahead. Be safe, be comfortable, be smart. Check the Classified Ads to find the better car just right for you.

'SOME GLORIFY EVIL'

Willson's Glad He's a 'Square'

By EARL WILSON

BEVERLY HILLS—"Meredith Willson, are you ready for the questions?"

"Meredith, a lot of the sophisticated, the hip people—the hippies—think you're a square."

"I hope they do!" Meredith Willson banged the table. He was in a smart striped sports jacket he'd had to send home for, for he'd been working at the CBS studio in an open-throated shirt and slacks.

"We have believers today and non-believers," he said. "There are people with faith—and 'faith' to the non-believer is a word to be held up in scorn. Do you know there is a very strong element in the public press that is wilfully destroying our younger generation?"

"Is it really as bad as that?" I asked in surprise.

"They are eroding the core of our country," he said, banging the table again. "There are people—adults—who are 'pushers' of pornography in films and books, I don't mean slovenly, sneaky little sidewalk guys, but famous producers and critics who are glorifying evil for the sake of evil. These adults are procurers for evil."

Q: You don't think you're being rather severe?

A: NO! Did you see that picture, "Bare Skin—Black Satin"? How about those pictures of Sophia Loren undressing in the ads for "Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow"? And there is this rage of 'art films' where the motif is evil... just evil.

Q: Do they really hurt anybody?

A: Our teen-age kids are influenced by these pictures where evil is glorified and they run down and kill old people on the streets. You've read of it happening! And it always seems to be the avant garde who likes these pictures, and it's the avant garde who says that the basic American sort of things are 'corny' or 'vulgar.'

Q: You're suggesting...

A: I don't know. But it happens that the attitude of these avant garde people does coincide with the attitudes of people who are too far to the left. There is an element that takes violent exception to religion, morality and any kind of restraint—and yet you can say any unsayable word on the stage—and they do—and they praise that to the skies!

Q: Have they picked on you?

A: One lady said I was vulgar. Another thing they do is tear away at any authority. At policemen, for example. If it's possible they ridicule police. What would we do without policemen? I shake hands with every policeman I meet and say "Thank you for being a policeman." A square. Yes, I guess so, but I like it that way.

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: About the only thing women put aside for a rainy day (says King Curtis) is the dress that's been worn three times.

WISH I'D SAID THAT: The best way to see the World's Fair, claims David (Hello, Dolly!) Burns, is in an old pair of comfortable shoes.

REMEMBERED QUOTE:

"To keep your friends, always give your candid opinion."

EARL'S PEARLS: A fellow at the Jade Palace complained that his son was at the awkward age—"he's too young to be replaced by automation and too lazy to go to work."

"It's better to have loved and lost," says comedienne Caroline Richter at the Living Room, "—than to get stuck doing 30 pounds of wash every week."... That's earl brother.

CONSTRUCTION DUE TO START IN AUGUST

Work is slated to start in August on this 12-story Plaza Tower to be built in Orange County Shopping Center at Brookhurst Street and Chapman Avenue, Garden Grove. Builder of $2.5 million project is Donald H. Shanedding of Beverly Hills. Restaurant and banquet rooms will occupy penthouse floor. First floor will be for banking facilities, others for offices. There will be three high-speed elevators.

Booming City Speeds Civic Center Buildings

By BOB BAUGHEY

Still out in front as Orange County's fastest growing city, Fountain Valley this week was matching needs with deeds as its new civic center began to take physical form.

Framework now is up for the new city hall and library on the five-acre site to be developed as the center on Slater Avenue east of Brookhurst Street.

Entailed is an outlay for both buildings of $263,929 in construction and site development. Other municipal facilities, including a police building, are in the offing.

THE CITY HALL, of concrete slab, brick masonry, glass, redwood siding and steep construction, will have 10,743 square feet of space.

In addition to the council chamber it will house the administration department (which includes the offices of the city administrator, the personnel director, the fire chief and the parks and recreation director) and the departments of finance, planning, building and engineering and public works, with their sub-agencies.

The library building, erected by the city and to be leased to the county as a branch of the county library system, will have 5,200 square feet of space.

NORWALK — Affiliate members of the Norwalk-La Mirada Board of Realtors not only will be seen, but will be heard at the Tuesday breakfast meeting.

Affiliates will be given the chance to speak briefly if they wish, at the breakfast session, to be held at Pioneer Bowl, 16511 S. Pioneer Blvd.

Mesa architectural firm of Jordan & Erdley, AIA, the city hall's modern features will include a "floating slab" type of foundation in which the structure's floor level will be approximately two feet above the level of the land.

An atrium (a skylighted area for daylight illumination), embellished with plants, is situated in the center of the building.

The site of the new civic center may seem incongruous to the passerby as it is located in the heart of one of the city's still prospering truck farms. But not for long — the way Fountain Valley continues to develop.

SINCE establishment of the city's Building and Safety Department 21 months ago permits have been issued for the construction of 3,019 single

$100 Million Complex to be Built at Orange

By BOB GEIVET

ORANGE — A $100 million shopping center, motel — apartment complex and hospital facility will be developed on 167 acres west of Orange County General Hospital, near where the county supervisors had suggested building a multi-story jail.

Anticipation of this big project, it was learned Saturday, is the reason the City of Orange recently rejected consideration of any proposals to build the jail structure on Manchester Avenue (formerly Placentia Avenue) due west of the recently completed six-story 360-bed hospital.

The Holiday Inns, which has a string of motels across the country, will build a 200-room motel on 10 acres north of Chapman Avenue, across the street from the 157-acre property once designed as "international marketland" for stores and shops for the world's products. It will be an eight-story structure.

INITIAL SEGMENT of the development will be a 70-acre shopping center at Garden Grove Freeway and Manchester Avenue. It will include a three-story department store of 225,000 square feet for J.C. Penney Co., and satellite stores.

James Moore of the Holiday Inns said that his company owns the property with Kaiser Aluminum, Great Lakes Carbon Co., and Rancho Palos Verdes Corp., among others supplying financing.

This combination, he said, has developed 900 regional shopping centers through the United States, including Oak Ridge in Tennessee.

Moore said that the ultimate plan, designed for a 10-year projection, is for 20 high-rise structures, for plush apartments and offices, and for a 200-bed hospital.

Survey Keys to Big Project at San Pedro

By VERN ANTHONY
Progress Editor

Hard on the heels of an economic survey by prominent San Fernando Valley developers which showed the Harbor Area to have high potentials comes announced purchase by Laurel Crest, Inc., of the 100 acre Park Western housing center at San Pedro.

A five-year redevelopment program reportedly includes high rise structures up to 12 stories, a shopping center and condominium apartments.

Purchase price was $5 million, it was said, John F. Firestone is vice president of the purchasing firm. Seller was Guy Bartlett and associates. Transfer of Laurel Crest property at Studio City was included in the deal.

Robert R. Falconer of Studio City was listed as owner of Laurel Crest. He has been an active developer in the Valley.

A canyon at the northeast corner of Park Western Drive and Western Avenue will be filled and leveled to gain some two acres for development. More will be filled later.

A 25-acre area north of Park Western Drive will be cleared for a thousand condominium units to be in structures up to 12 stories tall.

Park Western includes some 496 apartment units built during World War II for defense workers. It then was known as Channel Heights.

About 13 years ago, Jack Marantz and associates bought the center from the federal government on a bid of $1,111,111.

Marantz started the development of the 15-acre Park Plaza shopping center on the south side of Park Western Drive, and then sold his interest in Park Plaza to Ernest W. Hahn, Jerry Moss and associates.

Marantz about a year ago sold Park Western to Bartlett and associates of Beverly Hills.

GROUND BREAKING on the first unit is expected this fall, he said.

The Orange City Council will consider the development plans at its meeting July 7, according to City Planning Director George Kovatch.

Moore said that if the council approves, the deadline for groundbreaking can be met providing engineering plans progress on schedule.

$20 Million Contract Let to Matson

Matson Terminals, Inc., has been awarded a two-year military contract in excess of $20 million for stevedoring and terminals services in the San Francisco Bay area, it was announced in Washington by the office of Sen. Clair Engle.

Robert J. Pfeiffer, president of Matson Terminals, Inc., said the contract involves the handling of more than 3,000,000 tons of cargo during the two-year period.

It calls for stevedoring and terminals work at the Oakland Army Terminal and for stevedoring work at the Oakland Naval Supply Center and the Alameda Cold Storage Plant, a joint Army-Navy facility.

A small amount of stevedoring work also will be done at the Alameda Naval Station and the Mare Island Naval Shipyard.

2 Van Camp Posts Filled

Van Camp Sea Food Co., Port of Long Beach, has announced appointment of Robert L. Eskridge as vice president in charge of marketing and H. A. Garbanati as vice president in charge of sales.

Eskridge, director of Product Management and Advertising Grocery Products Division, Ralston Purina Co., St. Louis, will assume his position effective July 1. G. C. Van Camp Jr., president, announced.

Garbanati is presently national sales manager of Van Camp.

At the parent company in St. Louis, Warren Shapleigh, vice president in charge of Grocery Products Division, announced that product managers and others now reporting to Eskridge will report to Joseph V. Getlin, director of marketing.

Eskridge will be headquartered in Long Beach with responsibility for all product management, advertising, new product development, market research, and allied functions, Van Camp said.

The Van Camp Sea Food Co. became a division of Ralston Purina Co. upon its acquisition in 1963.

Estate Planning Program Slated

The Orange County-Long Beach Chapter of Chartered Life Underwriters will sponsor the annual Estate Planning Day Tuesday at the Mag-nolia Room of the Disneyland Hotel.

This year's subject will be "The Human Aspects of Estate Planning."

A panel of four speakers will consist of Judge Raymond Thompson, Superior Court judge in Orange County; Edward J. Mintz, C.L.U., vice president of the Million Dollar Round Table Foundation for 1962-63; John R. Suckling, attorney; and William S. McClanahan, United California Bank, trust officer and author of articles on estate planning.

Nuclear Power--for Peaceful Uses

Watson Co. Airls Plans for Industrial Center; Letters Go to Neighbors

Plans for a 600-acre, $150 million industrial center which "will bring countless benefits to much of the southern part of Los Angeles County" were announced Saturday by Watson Land Co.

The development, to be known as the Watson Industrial Center, will be located about one mile west of Long Beach. The site is bisected by the San Diego Freeway and lies about midway between the Harbor and Long Beach freeways.

Watson, in an unusual gesture for major land-owners, coupled its official press announcement of the new Center with a letter to the more than 3,000 residents of the area immediately surrounding the site, describing the company's plans and the benefits the Center will provide.

THE CENTER "will mean thousands of new job opportunities and millions of new dollars in local payrolls, purchases and property taxes," according to William T. Huston, president of Watson Land.

He noted that the development and construction program alone—estimated to cost at least $150 million over the next several years—"will pump several million dollars into the local economy, and when the Center is completed, the companies in it will pay at least $3 million annually in local property taxes."

Huston also emphasized that the Center will be "one of the most attractive industrial centers in America."

"There will be wide streets, deep setbacks and extensive open area around each building; loading areas will be screened, and every lease will contain landscaping requirements."

PLANNING, development and sales will be directed by the Williams J. Morgan Co., 100-year-old, nationally known engineering, development and construction firm in Los Angeles.

Construction of improvements already has begun. These will include a drainage system which the owners claim will be "unsurpassed by any in the state," underground utilities and streets.

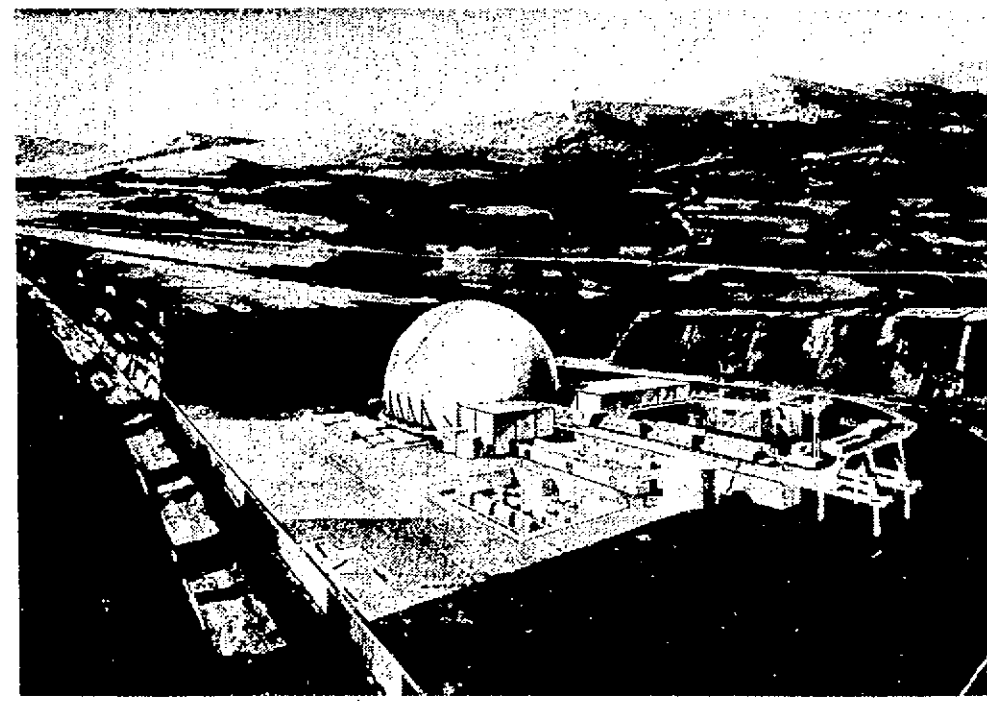

Hustons said the developers currently are negotiating with several prospective tenants, but declined to identify them.

The Watson property in the Center will be leased, not sold, Huston said. In addition, the Moran Company will erect buildings to tenant requirements, for lease.

THE CENTER has been master-planned for a "balanced mixture of light, medium and heavy industry," Huston said. "At this very early stage, we are anticipating more than 100 different tenants."

The Center will be developed in several phases, Huston explained. Site preparation for the first phase includes installation of the storm drain system — "at a cost of $750,000"—placement of nearly 200,000 cubic yards of fill, laying of trackage for rights-of-way and construction of 60-foot-wide paved streets.

The land for the Center is one of the last remaining parcels of a Spanish land grant that is still in the hands of descendants of the original grantee, Huston said. It is part of a 70,000-acre grant made in 1784 to Juan Jose Dominguez, a Spanish soldier who participated in the Portola expedition.

Edison Sets Up Home Modernization Center

By MILDRED K. FLANARY

100 Long Beach Blvd.

Most homemakers are "at home" in their kitchen—but is YOUR kitchen at home, a convenient one? If not, the following news is written just for you! You can now shop for a new kitchen, just as easily as you can for a lamb chop.

The Southern California Edison Co. has established a Home Modernization Center, designed to serve as a "one-stop-shop" for families interested in remodeling their homes. Edison officials gave us our first glimpse of this shopping "innovation" at a recent dinner and press party.

Sponsored by Edison, the center will be open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., and will provide complete modernization assistance from the idea stage through the completion stage including follow-up services. It is located in the Southern California Edison Building,

"IN LONG BEACH alone, there are nearly 100,000 homes 15 years or older," said C. R. Simpson Jr., Edison's manager of marketing. "This is typical of many areas in Southern California, and it is Edison's desire to provide assistance to families wishing to modernize their homes."

A trained modernization consultant will be on hand to offer personal assistance as well as to implement a carefully planned remodeling program.

Featured at the modernization center will be a model kitchen where the newest models of major electrical appliances will be displayed in an in-use situation. In addition, there will be modern kitchen cabinetry showing various styles and illustrating storage ideas as well as a showcase for new trends in lighting.

A REFERENCE library will include up-to-date copies of national and regional shelter magazines, booklets on complete or specialized remodeling, as well as pertinent related housing product information. In addition, persons may browse through a variety of brochures and specification sheets on all current models of electrical appliances and products.

Follow-up services, if requested, will include a home call by an Edison home economist to acquaint the family of the proper use of new electric appliances.

"Future plans call for Edison to construct Modernization Centers in other areas of its 65,000 square-mile territory," Simpson said.

Next center to open will be at Inglewood.

Mrs. Sharon Gilbert will be counselor at the Long Beach Center, and Miss Alice Cully will be counselor at Inglewood.

Bids Due on New Harbor City P.O.

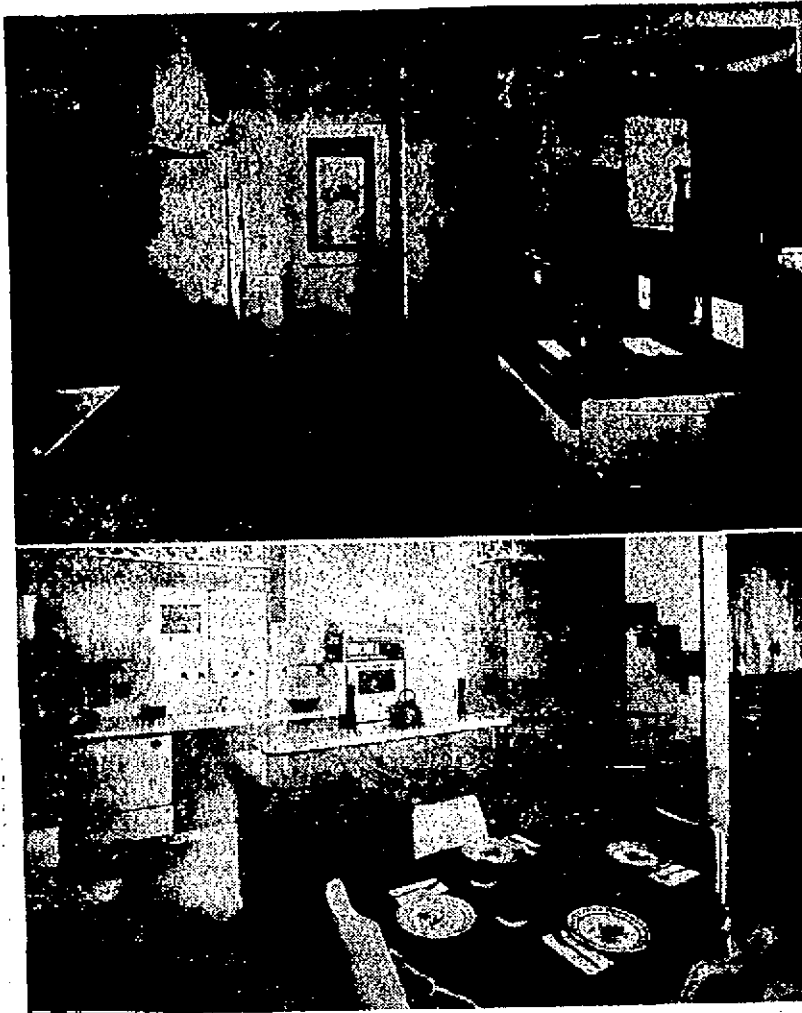

The San Francisco Regional Office of the General Services Administration has announced that bids are being solicited for the construction of a new one-story Federal Building and U.S. Post Office in Harbor City.

To be located on the corner of Frampton and 257th streets, the building will have simple, modern lines, and a brick exterior. The main entrance will be on Frampton Street.

Bids will be opened in Los Angeles on July 3. Additional information is available from GSA's Business Service Centers, 417 S. Hill Street, Los Angeles.

Two New Officers

Frank Wade, chairman of the board of Coast Bank, Long Beach, has announced election of two new officers. Harris C. McFerrin was elected executive vice president and director, and Paul A. Jones vice president and cashier.

Pen Company Buys Bendix Aircraft Plant

Sidney "Lindy" Linden, president of the Lindy Pen Co., has announced acquisition of the 85,000 square foot Bendix Aircraft plant, located at 7250 Laurel Canyon Blvd., in North Hollywood.

The new building will house the entire Lindy Pen operation which is presently spread into seven separate buildings in Culver City.

The purchase, which includes nine acres of land, will allow further expansion of plant facilities and will enable a consolidation of operations. Lindy plans to be completely installed in the North Hollywood plant by mid-summer.

Educational

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The National Education Association reports public school teachers this year will average $5,963 in their pay envelopes.

Underwriter Association Has Election

At the recent June meeting of the Long Beach Association of Life Underwriters, the annual election of officers and directors for the year commencing July 1 took place.

Lloyd B. Confer (Pacific Mutual) was named president; Donald M. Tippet, CLU (Massachusetts Mutual) first vice president; James V. Evans (Manufacturers Life) second vice president and Orland L. Ford (State Farm Life) secretary-treasurer.

Others to serve on the executive committee will be Robert G. Lindgren (Washington National) immediate past-president, and James E. Miller, CLU, National committee-family dwellings, having a valuation of $54,801,875.

Permits for construction of 15 duplexes and 19 apartments, with a combined valuation of $995,000 also have been issued.

City Planning Director Stanley R. Mansfield issues "growth" statistics every month—when he finds time.

Excerpts from his latest bulletin (June 1) show the city's current population as 7,552. The total population expectancy upon completion and occupancy of dwelling units on recorded final tract maps is given as 13,944.

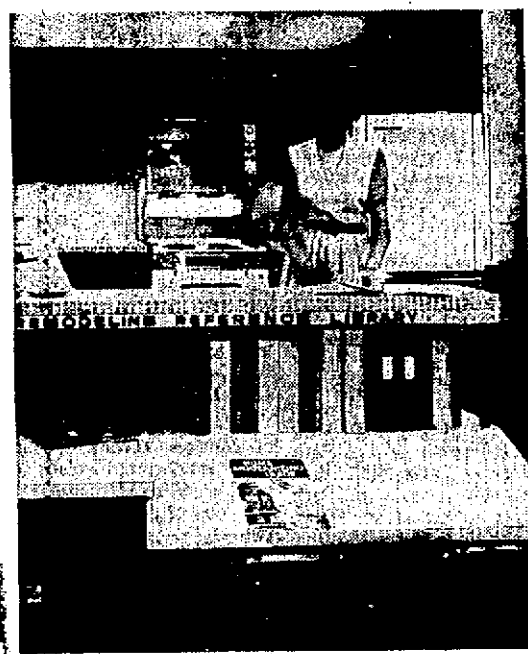

BUILDERS recently predicted a total of 20,000 homes housing a population of 55,000 in the not-to-distant future. There now are 22 developers active in Fountain Valley.

The imminent population figure, incidentally, based on completion and occupancy of existing dwelling units under construction, reflects an increase since the April, 1960, federal census, of 620 per cent. The increase since the first new tract was under construction in July, 1962, is 580 per cent.

Bottled Up

NEW YORK (UPI)—The United States is using glass-packed products at the rate of 70.5 billion bottles and jars a year, reports the Glass Container Manufacturers Institute.

Some of the containers, such as food jars, make only one trip. Others, like milk bottles, make many. Products packed in glass for consumer use range from foods and beverages to drugs, cosmetics and household chemicals.

Cargo Hauling Costs Reduced

NEW YORK (UPI)—Pan American World Airways new Boeing 707-321C jet freighters are flying at the lowest ton-mile cost of any all-cargo aircraft ever operated, according to Harold Graham, vice president, cargo sales.

Analysis of Pan Am's jet freighter operations showed cost per available ton-mile of 8.9 cents—approximately half that of the DC-7F, the aircraft which the jet freighter succeeded. Pan Am opened the jet age in freight last June, making the first trans-Atlantic and trans-Pacific flights with the new Boeing freighter.

Rossmoor Theater to Open July 15

A new Fox theater, with a tint design and accents the unique drive-through entryway, will open July 15, with a premiere in the Rossmoor Shopping Center, Los Alamitos, according to J. Walter Bantau, director of construction for Fox West Coast Theaters, a subsidiary of National General Corp.

Burke, Kober and Nicolais, Los Angeles architectural and engineering firm, designed the 838-seat theater.

The entryway curves directly in front of the theater entrance, making it easier for patrons to disembark at the ticket window. For extra convenience, the architects added a "unique concrete canopy" which shades the entire building front, and the drive-in approach.

A SPECIAL metal fascia emphasizes the canopy's distinguished by white concrete columns, separated by brown-toned, oblong block fillers.

The interior will feature a large, carpeted foyer, with a complete concessions counter, vending machines, an open ticket counter, and rest-room facilities.

L.B. Firm Wins High Architectural Award

A Long Beach architectural firm was among those accorded recognition last week at the National Convention of the American Institute of Architects meeting in St. Louis.

The Killingsworth, Brady, Smith & Associate Case Study House for Arts and Architecture magazine was judged one of the 16 finest buildings in the United States in 1964.

This Award of Merit architectural recognition was given to just this one project in Southern California this year.

Only three projects were awarded prizes in California, and of the total list of 16, two of these were houses.

Other winners from the 439 in competition included schools, office buildings, an airport, an urban plaza development, a retirement community, an apartment house, and a university assembly hall.

Edward A. Killingsworth, F.A.I.A., partner in the firm, located at 3833 Long Beach Blvd., went to St. Louis to receive the award. He stated that this house, located at 82 Rivo Alto Canal in the Naples section of Long Beach, now has received five major awards.

THEY ARE: honor award from the Western States A.I.A. and Sunset Magazine; honor award National A.I.A. and House and Home Magazine; honor award from Southern California Chapter of A.I.A., and the selection of the house by the editors of Architectural Record as one of the 20 best contemporary houses in the United States in 1963.

The fifth and highest award was the one given in St. Louis.

The house, owned by Edward Frank, is unique in that it is on a 45'x80' canal front lot.

It features an entrance door 17 feet high to a two-story courtyard. The jury described the house as "An elegant, small house which makes space count to the maximum. The second floor and living and dining rooms open visually on the two-story central entrance. A sophisticated environment is achieved with simplicity of material and detail. The highly restricted site is imaginatively handled."

THIS IS the 29th A.I.A. award for the firm, now minus Smith in the partnership. Of these, six were from the national program. The firm also has won four other major awards for its work, including first prize at the Sao Paulo Biennial in Brazil in competition with 50 countries.

Current work in the Killingsworth-Brady & Associate office includes the completion of the new Kahala Hilton Hotel in Hawaii, the Cultural Complex for the California World's Fair, the New Religious Center for the University of Southern California at Riverside.

ONE OF THE FINEST IN U. S.

Two-story inner courtyard of this home at 82 Rivo Alto Canal is one of reasons for new architectural honors for Long Beach firm of Killingsworth, Brady, Smith & Associate. All major rooms face roofed courtyard.

Presiding will be the newly installed president, Al E. Hopkins, of the Bury Biscuit Division of the Quaker Oats Co.

As is customary at the last meeting before the summer vacation, all past presidents of the society will be honored, and are invited to attend. A social hour will be held at 6:15 p.m., with dinner at 7 o'clock.

Cliff Cailland, program chairman, announced that Walter Addison Watson, noted family financial counselor and investment adviser, will be guest speaker.

"What Wealthy People Know About Money" is the subject of his talk on how to organize and manage an individual master plan for financial security.

WATSON, who is sponsored as a community service by California Federal Savings and Loan Association, advises, "Manage your money wisely, and you have a crucial key to mental, emotional, and physical happiness—and to financial peace of mind." Woodstone Homes Are on Large Lots

A common complaint among small lots," says Graham. "This points up the land shortage in the Southland, and present trends indicate the situation will not improve. This condition does not exist at Woodstone La Mirada."

Woodstone La Mirada Homes are situated on generous lots of 1/4 or 1/2-acre. The development is located in the exclusive Blue Hills of La Mirada, representing a prime land choice, with room for custom homes of luxury dimension. The space available to residents is such that the area is zoned for horses.

WOODSTONE LA Mirada is a luxury residential community of 37 air-conditioned homes. Representing a total investment of over $1.4 million. The Balanced Power homes feature 16 exterior elevations with up to 2787 square feet of floor space. Prices range from $34,500 to $49,000 and trades are considered.

Graham announces that the homes can be purchased at a down payment of 5% of the total figure. Woodstone La Mirada is located on Imperial Hwy., between La Habra Road and Luitwiler Ave.

George A. Crum, 3432 Huntley Drive, Los Alamitos, former Long Beach district sales manager for Southern California Edison Co., has been appointed manager of customer relations for the company, according to an announcement by William C. Drewry, vice president.

Crum, who served as district sales manager in this area in 1959-60, has been associated with Edison for 13 years. His first assignment, in 1951, was as junior power consultant headquartered at the company's Whittier district office.

He was promoted to power consultant in May 1952 and served in that capacity at Whittier, Huntington Park and Vernon before being appointed district sales manager at Inglewood in 1956.

In February of 1959 he was transferred to Long Beach and served as DSM here until March of 1960, when he was assigned to Edison's general office in Los Angeles as commercial assistant. He has been area development consultant four years.

Over $14 Million in Land Sales Shown

Walker & Lee, Inc. land sales in escrow currently total over $14 million, it was announced by William Armstrong, head of the company's acreage department.

He said he attributes the company's record high volume to three factors: skyrocketing land prices coupled with increasing builder buying caution, and the services offered by Walker & Lee's marketing department.

"EVALUATING land prices has become increasingly complex, causing professional marketing help before they invest in land for large building projects," he said. "No longer is it feasible for them to guess on any given area."

He said Walker & Lee's marketing department is taking the gamble out of building as it utilizes the company's years of experience in real estate trends and price evaluation.

Another service this department offers is its marketing department's management team. For the company's builder clients appraises the area, gauges prices, and suggests merchandising sales for the builder.

About three-fourths of the American homes are built by the more than 40,000 members of the National Association of Home Builders.

Well-Planned Kitchens in Garden Park Estates

GARDEN PARK ESTATES KITCHEN

Kitchens at Garden Park Estates in Garden Grove were designed to honor important role of homemaker, officials say. They have great appeal.

Kitchens are the homemaker's "office" and should be planned for total efficiency, say the officials of Garden Park Estates in Long Beach.

"Here, we have tried to honor the housewife and her important position by creating a kitchen that would be pleasant to work in and ease the task of homemaking," a spokesman said.

The kitchen in all the homes at Garden Park Estates are done in colors that are relaxing and "easy to live with," — professionally coordinated by an expert.

Large, easy-to-reach natural ash kitchen cabinets, finished like fine furniture line the walls. All drawers are center-guided and ceramic tile covers large worktops.

GLEAMING modern built-in gas range and oven and hood with exhaust fan and light are placed near the worktops and kitchens have direct access to the main eating areas of the home. "These cheerful food preparation centers provide the busy homemaker with a room worthy of her role," the spokesman said.

Other quality appointments included in the handsome one and two-story dwellings are wood burning fireplaces in plans one through five, seven and eight—some with large mantels and gas log lights, colored plumbing fixtures in baths, cast-iron tubs, stall showers with glass doors and stunning colored mosaic tile.

THREE, FOUR AND FIVE—bedroom, two-bath plans are included in the attractive selection.

Welcome is extended to all prospective homeowners to inspect the furnished model display, open daily until dark, located at the corner of Knott Ave., and Garden Grove Freeway.

"Improved lots at the development have increased over $1000 in value since we opened. And our value-packed homes, in the heart of booming Orange County, are hard to match. All Dads appreciate this kind of value, a home investment value proven by our sales record, fast approaching a complete sell-out."

OFFERED ARE one and two-story plans, with up to 2,136-sq. ft. of living area, priced from $23,350 to $29,600. Big Stardust Homes Attracting

An award winning two-story, four-bedroom home with numerous interior and exterior niceties is proving a prime attraction for homebuyers at Stardust, luxury home community in Huntington Beach.

Builder-developer Robert H. Grant said the two-story house, the Belfontaine, is one of 13 one-story and two-story models available to potential buyers at Stardust, located in Huntington Beach at Garfield and Canery.

"The Belfontaine's numerous features include a secluded den and bath on the ground floor, easily convertible to a fifth bedroom, and a sunken living room with fireplace," Grant noted. "The raised hearth adorns one entire wall."

Consolidated Buys Morgan Drive-Away Consolidated Leasing Corp. of America purchase of the Morgan Drive-Away, Inc., mobile home transporter, Elkhart, Ind., has been announced by Tad Hankey, Consolidated president.

Price involved exceeded $2.5 million, according to Hankey. Consolidated has a California Rent Car, Inc., also headed by Hankey. A year ago, his company bought General Transport Equipment Co. of Chicago, which rents and leases tractors and trailers for "piggyback" service.

STARDUST'S uncanceled location—within 10 minutes of the Pacific Ocean—and emphasis on California-style "elegant living," are two other big reasons for the strong homebuyer interest in the big project, Grant added.

There are three basic floor plans with four elevations each in the one-story versions, and five in the two-story plan. Prices range from $23,950 with FHA, VA or conventional financing.

HOMES are on 72-foot wide estate-size lots, and all have two-car garages. Streetlights, sidewalks and sewers are installed and paid.

Cruises of Mediterranean or Aegean Sea in fully provisioned yacht may cost only $12.50 a day per person.

Europe by Yacht

BELIEVE IT or not, you can cruise the Mediterranean or Aegean sea on your own fully provisioned private yacht for as little as $12.50 a day per person including crew.

And "Europe by Yacht" is definitely the way to "do" the continent this year, according to Alitalia Airlines which has made available a complete selection of cruisers, motor-sailers, motor-yachts, and sailing vessels with comfortable accommodations ranging from four to 20 berths. Daily prices begin at $50 (4 berths) in the sports category and stretch to $352 (12 berths) in the deluxe bracket.

For the most discriminating, however, prices may run as high as $1,000 a day for a 138-foot motor-yacht complete with radar and berths for eight crew members including a waiter and cook.

Surrounded by sunshine and color, Europe would be discovered outside, in. Time may be devoted to fishing or just leisurely sightseeing from port to port. The tourist picks his own ports. Picturesque Italian fishing villages, hamlets perched by the sea with names that roll off the tongue, await visitors and there are historical Greek isles, along the colorful North African coast, or around the enchanting Riviera.

Easy Touring

The Republic of Lebanon has an area of some 4,000 square miles, and a highway network of 4,000 miles. The farthest point in the country can be reached by car from Beirut, the capital, within two-and-a-half hours.

AROUND THE WORLD WITH DELAPLANE

PARIS the harbor. Very elegant dining rooms and bar.

"We will rent a car in England. But because of the left-hand drive wonder if we should hire a driver..."

THE FIRST three days are the hardest. You have to keep your mind on it all the time or on empty country roads you find you drift to the right from habit. But I find after three days I'm O.K.

If you go to the British Tourist Office in St. James's Street, they'll give you a pretty car sticker that says "Visitor to Britain." This gives you a little edge with the police if you park in the wrong place.

"We are two secretaries planning a trip to Hawaii. Is Waikiki too crowded? Would we have a better time on another island?"

I THINK the island of Maui, near Lahaina town, has the best swimming beach. But the gold mine of lone men is at Waikiki. (There a small air service flies you to Lahaina in half an hour. You could look at it on a lunch stop.)

"Have made five trips to Mexico and am convinced that I would like to retire there. But where do you think is the most inexpensive place with most for the money?"

I'D SAY in the Guadalajara area. Advantages are supermarkets, Sears and other places to American tastes for daily buying.

"Do we need an International Driving Permit for Europe?"

SOME COUNTRIES will pass you on your American license. But some don't. So it's easier to get the International Permit—$3, two passport-size photos and your local state license.

"Do you have a good guide that would help us in camping in the West, carrying our own equipment?"

THE MOST complete I've seen is Sunset magazine's "Western Campsite Directory." Gives you the state and national parks and a number of private camping spots. I don't have the price at hand—something like $2—but you can write Lane Magazine Company, Menlo Park, Calif. Has maps, descriptive and reliable.

"Could a single woman live somewhere in Europe on a retirement income of $200? Charm rather than luxury would be important."

I THINK you could do it in Portugal. But I'd certainly do a trial run first. An hour north of Lisbon, there is a completely walled city of Obidos. Narrow streets. Hotel built into a towered castle. Moonish baffle gates. And a small tourist traffic to make things interesting.

There are several small pensions. And since Portuguese hotels run about $5, I would think you could get room with family meals for even less.

There are some fine, warm beach towns in the south of Portugal you should look into, too.

"Please suggest a first-class hotel in Hong Kong."

THE MANDARIN, right at the foot of the Star Ferry on the Hong Kong side. Most modern rooms overlooking

Appointment of Chaim Glezer to the newly created post of West Coast regional sales manager has been announced by El Al Israel Airlines. Headquartered at 9350 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles, Glezer will work closely with Jerry Linkin, district sales manager, to coordinate the airline's sales activities in 11 western states.

1964 Campsites

Is there laundry service at Kickapoo State Park in Illinois? What route is taken to reach Noisy Creek National Forest in Washington? Are there tent sites at Moosehorn National Wildlife Refuge in Maine? Is firewood available at Writing-on-Stone Provincial Park in Alberta, Canada?

These and other important questions are answered for the outdoor enthusiast in Lincoln-Mercury Division's comprehensive guide to family camping enjoyment.

The 1964 "Mercury-Comet Campsite Directory to Outdoor Family Fun" was prepared exclusively for the Division by Rand McNally & Co. The 236-page directory is available from Lincoln-Mercury dealers for $1.50 a copy.

This valuable reference contains a wealth of travel and recreation information and full color Rand McNally road maps for each of the states and Canadian provinces and territories. More than 8,000 campgrounds containing more than 175,000 individual campsites are included.

The directory was prepared with the aid of hundreds of park and forest supervisors, as well as owners of private campgrounds.

Roofed Road

The Great Saint Bernard Tunnel, a $35 million project, linking Italy and Switzerland, is the first all-weather road through the Alps. Roofed roads, protected from snow and avalanches, lead into the tunnel on both sides at altitudes of over 5,000 feet. Toll charges, say Pan American Airways, range from $2.10 to $4.65 depending on the size of the vehicle and the number of passengers.

HOW ABOUT A SWIM or working up a sun tan? Either comes naturally at Phoenix—as Marsha Seibella, Miss Phoenix of 1964, well knows. Practically every motel, hotel, resort, and even apartment house in the Arizona capital has pools for year-around swimming.

Dancers to Tahiti

A group of dance students from Southern California are off on a tour of the South Seas. Leaving Los Angeles July 4, on U.T.A.'s (Union de Transports Aeriens) DC8 non-stop flight to Papeete, the dancers will visit the Polynesian islands of Tahiti, Moorea and Bora Bora. They will learn and perfect some of the intricate dance steps of the Tahitians and will visit Tahiti during the "Bastille Day" celebrations July 14.

The "Fete" lasts for two weeks in Papeete, even though there was never a guillotine there. The Tahitians need only a small excuse to celebrate joyously. Groups come to Papeete, the capital of French Polynesia, from many islands to compete in contests of dancing, spear throwing, rowing, sailing and horseracing. The colorful throngs dance in the streets all night and the excitement is incredible.

AMONG Southern California dancers are members of a professional club the "Aloha Islanders" in Cheviot Hills. Their leader Eleanor Lee also teaches Polynesian dancing at Rancho Park playground and the Pacific Palisades playground.

From the Dorothy Jo Dance Studio in Corona del Mar, Mrs. Lura McKenzie will be accompanied by her troupe including Phyllis Madon of Long Beach, Anna Dare and Olli Foster of Whittier, Tana and Burr Sherdick and their daughters of Newport Beach. Tana and her daughter Tareta are the featured Tahitian dancers now appearing at the "Mariner's," a restaurant-nightclub in Lomita.

KIMO MANSFIELD, featured Tahitian dancer at the "Hawaiian," a supper club in Long Beach, and the "Mariner's" in Lomita will also accompany the group.

SUPER EXPRESS... UP TO 159 M.P.H. IN TRIAL RUNS

Tokyo's Bullet on Rails

By Fred Taylor Kraft
Travel Editor

AMERICANS who flock to Japan this fall—many of them to witness the Olympic Games—are certain to be tremendously impressed at the modernity of the vast new transportation system in and around Tokyo, world's largest city.

Tokyo's astounding increase in population—slightly more than 6 million in 1950 to 10.6 million today—combined with traditional Japanese pride in presenting its best side to visitors, have generated transportation improvements so sweeping that they are attracting the attention of the entire world.

Foremost among the several costly projects now being rushed to August completion is the new Tokaido Line of Japanese National Railways on which electrically-powered super express trains eventually will cover the 320 miles between Tokyo and Osaka, the nation's second largest city, in three hours.

ON COMPLETED sections of this new line, trains already have been clocked at 159 miles per hour in trial runs. However, at the start of service the trip will take four hours. The time will decrease as speeds rise to the eventual target of 130 miles per hour.

The new line will virtually parallel the present Tokaido double-track route which, while serving 40 per cent of Japan's 90 million population, carries 240 to 260 trains both ways daily.

Every modern safety device that engineering can conceive is being installed to make the super expresses safe, including wireless telephone, automatic route setting, and automatic train control.

Wave pulse radar will be used to detect obstacles on the track several miles ahead. Conventional level crossings are being eliminated altogether as the trains thunder through 66 tunnels and over scores of bridges from one metropolis to the other. The tracks will be guarded, where necessary, by fences to keep off trespassers.

JAPANESE National Railways has placed orders for 360 cars for the super expresses. Sixty of these will be bullet cars containing the driver's control panel and driving cab.

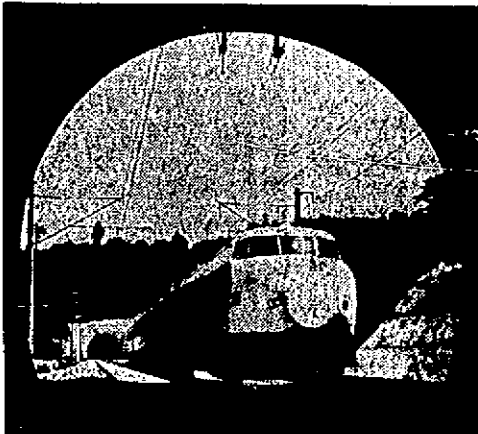

Each train will consist of a bullet car, two first-class cars, eight second-class cars and two buffet cars.

Expansion of the already vast transportation facilities is also getting top priority in the Greater Tokyo area. When extension to present facilities are completed in 1965, Tokyo's subway will total 110 miles, longest of any city in the world, and are expected to carry 4.5 million commuters a day. Some of these trains—four to six cars with a capacity of 140 passengers each—will use three-storied underground corridors, paralleled with underground automobile lanes.

MEANWHILE, miles of super-highways (freeways) are knitting through and around the city. One of these, now virtually ready for use, will reduce travel time between Tokyo International Airport and the busy downtown area.

A new monorail, to be completed in August, will make it possible to be downtown 15 minutes after stepping off carriers such as Japan Air Lines Jet Couriers and clearing customs.

320 MILES... THROUGH 66 TUNNELS!

TRAVEL TALK

Casino Special

DAILY TRAIN service by the Las Vegas Holiday Special between Southern California and the Nevada casino city began last week with departure from Los Angeles at 9 a.m. Stops are made at East Los Angeles station—where passengers may park free—and Pomona, Riverside and San Bernardino.

A Union Pacific streamliner 10-day return limit package of $20 is offered. It includes round-trip transportation, chuck wagon meals and reserved coach seat. Beverages are available in a club car.

Family fares, applicable on Monday-through-Thursday departures, enable a couple to make the round trip for $34. Return from Las Vegas may be made any day.

In addition, UP also offers a Las Vegas Holiday Package which includes reserved rooms, meals, cocktails and floor shows at varying prices, according to the hotel selected.

IF YOU LIKE IT wild, the Heart of the Rockies Circle Pack Train, sponsored by six leading working/guest ranches in northern Colorado and southern Wyoming, is offering three 200-mile circle rides this summer through wilderness country in the heart of the Rockies.

The rides will leave the Two Bars Seven Ranch (Virginia Dale, Colo.), on the Colorado-Wyoming line June 30, July 28 and Aug. 18.

Participants may join for anything from four days to the full 12 days. Some overnight camps will be in the wilds while others will be at or near one of the sponsoring ranches, and riders may join at one ranch and leave at another—ranch transportation will be waiting at time of departure.

The cost? Everything except personal effects—even foam rubber mattresses and sleeping bags if you wish—is $270 for the full 12 days, or $25 a day for a shorter period.

IF YOU'VE cruised Long Beach-Los Angeles harbors, liked it, and would like to take similar trips of other interesting harbors on the West Coast, it's easy. Each has sightseeing boats. For instance:

San Diego: major points of interest include Navy carriers, atom subs, jet planes, cruisers, fishing boats, sea animals, old Spanish lighthouse. Star and Crescent Boat Co., foot of Broadway, downtown. One and two-hour cruises year-round. Rates: one-hour, adults, $1.50; children 5-12, 75 cents.

San Francisco: Golden Gate Bridge, Alcatraz Island, Bay Bridge. Harbor Tours boats leave Pier 43½ at Fisherman's Wharf, starting at 10 a.m. Prices: $1.25 for adults, 60 cents for children.

Portland: Combination land and water cruise includes Columbia River Gorge and Bonneville Dam, Horsetail Falls, Multnomah Falls, fish ladders and salmon hatcheries. Gray Line, Broadway and Stark; leaves 9 a.m. daily. Cost, not including lunch, $9.35.

Seattle: Combination 2½-hour land and water tours include Salmon Bay, floating bridge, Elliot Bay and downtown docks. Four departures daily to September. Cost: $6.25.

A PLAN which allows more than a million American Express credit card holders to charge travel with Delta Air Lines on an extended payment basis has been approved by the Civil Aeronautics Board and is now in force.

Under terms of the agreement, the air traveler with a valid American Express card may charge Delta flights over a period of three to 12 months.

The plan is available to air travelers at all Delta offices and at more than 5,000 travel agencies, including all American Express offices worldwide.

Yellowstone Tip

In a cooperative move designed to make a visit to Yellowstone National Park more convenient, Greyhound and Yellowstone Park Lines, Inc. jointly announced that special summer service is now being operated direct to the center of this famous recreational area from Idaho Falls. The agreement provides for through Greyhound bus service round-trip between Idaho Falls and the Park terminus at Old Faithful Inn via the West Yellowstone Gateway.

As an added public benefit, the Yellowstone Park Line will assign a Yellowstone Park guide to each entering bus at West Yellowstone.

The through-service buses are timed to connect at Idaho Falls with expresses from and to Salt Lake City.

Dwarfs 'Em All

One of the world's largest, oldest and most-photographed trees dominates the rolling countryside near the South African spa town of Tschipise in the northern Transvaal.

It's a huge baobab whose trunk has a circumference of 76 feet and whose age has been estimated at over 4,000 years. According to the South African Tourist Corporation, this botanical wonder dwarfs everything in sight including the inevitable group of sightseers busily taking snapshots of each other at its base. In age, at least, the old baobab may outrank most of California's giant sequoias for whom a mere 30 centuries is considered a full lifetime.

Tax Break

The Internal Revenue Service has liberalized its view of business-and-pleasure travel overseas, reports Pan American Airways. All expenses incurred on international travel of fewer than eight days may be deducted under the new law. The business traveler may also deduct all international travel expenses if the vacation portion of a trip does not exceed 25 per cent of the total time out of the United States.

'Gag Fair'

Berlin has added a laugh test to its calendar of 1964 summer events. The "gag fair" is part of the Festival Weeks program, Sept. 13-Oct. 4.

The program, produced by cabaret owner, will be held in the Haus am Luetzowplatz. According to the Berlin Tourist Office, American and French cartoonists will display their work; gag routines such as the magician who fails at every attempt of magic will be performed; and poet-novelist Guenther Grass ("The Tin Drum") will also participate.

"And I Plight Thee My Troth"

The wedding is over. The hectic weeks of parties, planning and preparation are past. The marriage vows have been said. The bridal pair has received the congratulations of their family and friends. Now, unexpectedly, amid the gaiety of the reception, they share the first private moment of their new life together . . . the beginning of a marriage. Above, Mrs. and Mr. John Fowler Schaefer (the former Geraldine Marie Case) silently re-affirm their vows, following their wedding at St. Barnabas Catholic Church. Also pictured, 14 other beautiful brides who have chosen June, the traditional month, for nuptial celebration. For accounts of their weddings, turn to page W-4.

Among Other Things, A Fistful of Spades

By Iola Masterson
I, P-T Women's Editor

THE B17s OF WORLD WAR II were a hardy lot, but how was one to know that part of its anatomy would be called on to serve and serve, not in battle smoke but spewing forth the mists of dry ice and the aroma of heady brews.

With a happy skol, may this bubble never burst!

Pictured above are Dolores and Van Hickman filling the "bubble" of a B17, which wound up its years of glory as a punch bowl. It was used by Young Californians for annual progressive dinner, beginning at the Hickman's for the brew hour. The bowl has been used by the group for at least five years for all big occasions. It is the property of Colleen and Keaton King.

The bubble-bowl holds ten gallons (enough to satisfy the most avid fan of the sun-is-over-the-yardarm hour). Young Californians fill it with a standard concoction of cranberry, pineapple, lemon juice, Seven-Up and firewater which has no name, but plenty of authority. Why not "Flame Thrower?"

Party, to honor prospective members, went merrily along for dinner at Shirley and Bob Benson's home, wound up at Nancy and George Hanania's for dancing, yacking, late buffet.

ALTHOUGH close friends have known about it, the news, in general, is just beginning to circulate that Sophie Bernstein and Irving Solomon slipped away to Las Vegas to become Mr. and Mrs. After wedding date last month they honeymooned on a Caribbean cruise.

IMPOSSIBLE—but it happened. The perfect bridge hand—13 spades—was dealt out, and no hanky panky about it, during a duplicate bridge game session of a group of regular bridge club players.

The gals looked up the chances of such a hand ever being flipped out and discovered it was one in a billion. First to play the hand was Beth Humphries and she bid a six, partner raised it to seven. Next to get it was Myrtle Denny. She bid a two spades, with partner's help got it to a seven. Third and final player of same hand, as it goes in game of duplicate bridge, was Pearl Goedde who bid a seven straight off. Not a one of the players could get anyone to double them.

Wild Waves Say...

All this phenomenon occurred at Myrtle's home during potluck luncheon Monday.

CHEESE TESTING, wine tasting and music made the night a gay one when "Phil" and Bill Norris entertained. They studied about all kinds of cheeses and wines in preparation. Then had signs posted at each table, to inform all who sipped and supped their way past, the names, background, proper serving temperatures and times for which they all enjoyed so much.

Main honoree of night was "Phil's" sister, Florence Fisher, visiting from Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

A MISTY tropical shower, produced with the aid of an artfully hidden garden hose, sprinkled over the pool at Betty (Mrs. Irving) Dumm's home on Tehachapi Dr. and, nearby, a float bobbed, piled high with gifts. That was the scene when Lee (Hastings) Higman walked into the patio at Betty's. Instantly, voices from the den yelled "surprise" and the party was launched.

Lee was on her first visit home to see her parents, Jo and Dr. Orville Hastings, since she became the bride of Dennis Higman in Las Vegas. He is the son of the Chester Higman of Seattle. Currently, the newlyweds are residing on Bainbridge Island, Wash. Party was a gasp first, smile later and catch-totally-surprise affair.

THESE ARE the swirling, whirling party days for Assistance League's debs, who make their bow on July 25 at the Lafayette.

Yesterday the smart young gals and their mothers were entertained by Jeanne Moore at a luncheon in her home. Another luncheon and swimming party Tuesday will be followed by a luau Sunday for debs, escorts and stag line fellows at home of Nell and Dave Thomas being co-hosted by Marjorie Peek and Kay Nesbitt. More parties next week... and week after!

YOU CAN take the citizen out of the U.S. but you can't take the American out of the citizen, to paraphrase an old saying.

Gingi Kadvany arrived home from the American College in Paris. Her parents, Luba and Dr. Alex, were overcome with her Parisian fashion plate appearance on arrival by plane.

One day home, however, and Gingi was back in "high style" blue jeans and sleeveless sweatshirt—happy as a lark with casualness here—after her freshman college year in gay Paree.

She DID have a wonderful time in France, let me haste to add, including going with the couture look, et al. She'll go back in the fall for sophomore year, then finish her collegiate days in a California university.

Incidentally, she spent holidays abroad on many ski trips and won medals of awards. For instance, at Kognisse, Germany she won a silver medal for prowess and then, to top all other wins, at Val D'Isere in the French Alps she took the Trois Etoiles (three star) medal—one of the highest given internationally to amateur ski buffs.

WITH LUGGAGE well stocked (bulging is the word) with clothes for fishing, lounging, dress up or camping, Joni and Bill Ferguson left this week. They're auto-ing it on a leisurely trip, first to Las Vegas. Bill, former manager of E. F. Hutton here, wants to check up on investment possibilities there—but don't think he had ticker tape in mind so much as going for brokerage in other ways. Truly, he does have customers to call upon, and not the one armed variety, either!

He and Joni will stay at a guest lodge in Western Colorado which has its own private trout fishing stream. Later, they'll visit with friends and relatives in Denver. Return trip will find them touring the Grand Tetons and Yellowstone area.

LONG DISTANCE phone bills have piled up—and to heck with the cost—as Fern and John Kelly have kept pace with news of son, John Jr., and his wife, Ann. Kelly Mrs. took off Wednesday. They left Washington, D.C., where he has been with the Defense Department, for Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, where John will be assistant economic attache to the American Embassy. Stint of service in Africa is to be for a two year period.

PARTY JETS were fired up for an evening of high flying conviviality in the Officers' Mess of Los Alamitos Naval Air Station last Sunday.

That was when officers and their wives of 2479th Air Force Reserve Sector and 8646th Air Force Reserve Recovery Group—both based at LB Municipal Airport—had a blast-off in salute to three fellow officers.

Honored were Major Eugene Zechmeister and Capt. Jack Whitaker, who are scheduled to retire end of the month, and Major H. D. ("Hank") Gordon, who is being transferred to Holloman Air Force Base, New Mexico.

Assuring "Hank" he'll LOVE duty in NM, and firmly demonstrating why, is Lt. Col. Joseph Herrmann, exec officer of the 2478th, left, below, as he presents a king sized broom to transferee. It is guaranteed, Joe said, to be of great help in keeping part of New Mexico's dust out of the new quarters at Holloman.

A few of the officers and wives present to do joyous justice to occasion were Louise and Col. Glenn Eagleston (CO of the 2478th), Lucille and Col. Jim Norton (he's CO of the 8646th), Col. and Mrs. Les Stockton, Dorrie and Lt. Col. Herrmann, Betty and Lt. Col. Tom McRay, Elvise and Lt. Col. Bill Hoyt and Louise and Lt. Col. Kenneth McCloud.

As a grounded civilian, I'm shaking in office mufti, hoping I have the COs, execs, escorts, groups and numerical titles in proper sequence!

Colonel gives the major some heavy artillery!

Every Dad Has His Day?

By SHERM WILLIAMS

Today is the day when fathers of this nation are treated like Old Dog Tray.

In home after home, merry families are trooping into the old man's bedroom and shouting, "Happy Father's Day. They are going to Be Real Nice To Him."

The fact that the old man might have been out the night before enjoying the Father's Day Eve of his choice makes not one whit of difference. This is Dad's Day and he is going to enjoy it.

No one is going to growl at him at 7 a.m. and shout, "Get up you lazy lout, you are late to work." No, indeed. They are going to wake him up at 6:30—because they can't wait to be good to the old duffer. They will feed him breakfast in bed.

CONTRARY TO popular opinion, this annual reminder that the man once ruled his home was not invented by the nation's wallet and tie clasp manufacturers.

It came as a kind of afterthought to Mother's Day—which was first observed in Philadelphia, Pa., in 1908. Father's Day was whipped up by a lady named Mrs. John Bruce Dodd of Spokane, Wash. The idea first jolted her in 1909 and within a year she had talked the Spokane Ministerial Assn. into setting aside the third Sunday in June just for father.

The same lightning struck in Chicago in 1911 and the patronizing tone of the day was set by Miss Jane Addams. In cheering for a special day for papa, she said, "Poor father has been left out in the cold. He doesn't get much recognition. But regardless of his bread-earning proclivities, it would be a good thing if he had a day that would mean recognition of him."

By 1920, Harry C. Meek, president of the Uptown Lions Club of Chicago cranked up another Father's Day—on the third Sunday in October.

FROM THEN ON, it was inevitable. There was considerable haggling about just who started it all, and who should get the credit.

And October, obviously wouldn't work half as well as June when the leftover socks, wallets and neckties from Christmas could be unloaded on laps across the country.

There was even some controversy over what should be the official flower for the day.

Members of the Martin W. Calender Bible Class of Wilkesburg, Pa., chose the dandelion in 1924, saying, "The more it is trampled on, the more it grows." That idea passed into oblivion.

But Father's Day burgeoned and even became an export. It is now celebrated in parts of Europe and South America.

The old man is King for a Day, which means he gets to pack the family into the car, fight the traffic and go on an outing.

Such is the price of royalty, albeit brief.

Second Presbyterian Church, Long Beach, was setting for the marriage of Suzanne Kelso, daughter of Cmdr. and Mrs. Stanley Kelso (USN, ret.), and Frederick Gregory, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Gregory.

The bride wore a sheath gown of silk organza and Alencon lace with chapel train.

Attending her were Sylvia Kelso, her sister, maid of honor, and Mrs. Harry Eastlick, Judy Ecklund and Mrs. Donald Bauermeister, bridesmaids.

Peter Cooper was best man and Joe Weirick, Jim Bradley and Pat Bradley were ushers.

EVALUATION SESSION

Results of recent job clinic are checked by (from left) Edna Myers, employment specialist at the Bureau of Public Assistance; Jean Ford, placement supervisor at California Department of Employment; and Bonnie Greenfield, adult program coordinator at the YWCA. Miss Ford was chairman of the clinic for mothers in the Aid to Families With Dependent Children program.

YOUNG MOTHERS AT JOB CLINIC

Hear Advice of Experts

By ELISE EMERY
Forty young women are "thinking realistically about work" as a result of a recent job clinic.

The 40 are mothers who receive funds in the Aid to Families With Dependent Children Program administered by the Bureau of Public Assistance.

Selected from women in the greater Long Beach area, they were chosen because they show special potential for employment.

They are motivated, too, by legislation enacted in 1950. This requires that a mother in the AFDC program, whose youngest child is over 3, seek employment or work training if she is physically, mentally and emotionally able to enter the labor market.

AS A RESULT of the job clinic, four women are now employed, one is enrolled in the licensed vocational nurses training program at Long Beach City College Business and Technology Division, six are in El Cerrito Hospital's nurses aide program, five are training in other fields and all are having special counseling.

The job clinic was planned by Jean Ford of California Department of Employment,
Edna Myers of Bureau of Public Assistance and Bonnie Greenfield of the YWCA.
Altrusa Club and Belmont Shore Lady Lions assisted.

WITH THEIR pre-school age youngsters in an adjoining nursery room at the YWCA, the mothers listened intently during the four weekly sessions as experts presented these programs:
Training and Re-training, Preparation for Work, How to Apply for a Job and The Right Job for You.

Speakers included Esther

Caldwell of Long Beach City College Business and Technology Division; Juanita Wood, selection and referral officer at the Department of Employment; Dr. Robert M.
Newhouse, director of the Mental Health Center at El Cerrito Hospital; Fred Jer-dan, personnel director of Community Hospital; Bea
Olson, personnel director of Woolworth's, Lakewood; and Macie Harrington, supervising social case worker with the BPA.

J. C. PENNEY CO. supplied fashions for a style show, "Appropriate Clothes for Work," and the AFDC mothers modeled. William W. Pope, investigator with the District Attorney's office, discussed the responsibilities of absent fathers.

Throughout the clinic, the advantages of learning job skills and gaining work experience were emphasized.

"A mother who goes to work never has less money than if she stayed on the AFDC program," Mrs. Myers pointed out. "If her expenses of working and child care cut her budget to an amount less than she was receiving on the program, BPA will supplement her pay. Her income always goes up when she goes to work."

MOTHERS who have no work experience may take part in training classes.
These must be BPA approved and will be endorsed for a maximum period of one year.

"It is necessary to be realistic about employment," said Miss Ford. "Some people are qualified for one type of work, others are not.
For instance, a person with the general ability to complete high school could not be a social worker which requires six years of college.

One of the primary factors which influences choice of work is the kind of employment available."

MRS. CALDWELL stressed the need for basic skills in arithmetic and grammar. Without these, she said, it is impossible to qualify for many vocational training courses. These skills also are required by most employers who give on-the-job training.

Child care facilities and available dental and medical services were described to the mothers by Mrs. Harrington.

"If you can work," she said, that is the best thing you can do for your child.
You give him the image of a person moving forward, not just being visited by a case worker. There is a feeling of pride when you are working or preparing yourself for work."

"No one is fully grown and developed as an individual unless he has a job that enables him to use his maximum potential," Dr.
Newhouse noted.

IN THE Long Beach Harbor area, 78 percent of the jobs are in these four classifications: wholesale and retail trades, manufacturing, government and services.

Each mother is advised by a counselor at the Department of Employment and a plan is worked out to help her find a job which will make best use of her abilities.

At the final job clinic session, the 40 young women proudly received certificates of attendance, proof of their interest in the program to help them help themselves.

Painted 'Lady' Good for a Hearty Laugh

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

I am 11 years old and mother says I am too young to wear eye makeup. The other day I put some on anyway, and when I walked out where she was talking with my girl friend, they both started laughing. Now, other people keep looking at me to see if I have eye makeup on!

I think that was real nasty of Mother, don't you?

—DULL EYES

DEAR DULL EYES:

After reading your letter,
I laughed too! I bet you looked positively ridiculous!
Can't you see how wrong you are about eye makeup —even your friend laughed when she saw you.

You have a wonderful mother; it's a wonder she didn't lay you low and punish you for disobeying. Instead, she laughed — she's marvelous! And you'd better remember it. M. M.

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

Another girl and I are learning to drive (we are 14) and do pretty well, but we need practice on country roads and our parents won't let us. How will we be able to get our license when we are 16, if we aren't allowed to practice now?

—TWO GOOD DRIVERS

DEAR DRIVERS:

Of course you know, don't you, you must have a licensed driver in the car when you practice. Since you can't get your license for over a year, you have lots of time; when it is convenient for your parents, you will get to practice.

I didn't know they issued learners' permits to 14-year-olds — seems pretty young to me.

I have a suspicion you girls are looking for more excitement than practice!

—M. M.

NOTE TO CONFUSED:

The possible marriage you speak of should in no way harm your church or its members. Unless your faith is one that explicitly condemns divorce, you are being very unfair to the deacon. If marrying a divorced woman is his greatest fault, just try to be as good a Christian as he. —M. M.

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

Two years ago (after 12 years of married life) my husband told me he loved another woman and left me and our five small children.
He provides for us and pays the bills but shows us no love. My minister and my

Dear Molly
Mayfield

lawyer tell me to divorce him, but I can't — all of us adore him in spite of everything.

I was an old-fashioned woman before he left, but now I am trying all kind of beauty tips—it is getting me no where! I've asked him to come home and try again but he only laughs and says "maybe!"

Please tell me what on earth to do besides divorce him. I'm about to go crazy cooped up in this lonely house way out in the country.—LOVE MY FAMILY.

DEAR LOVE MY FAMILY:

My dear, I don't see anything left for you but a divorce. It's possible in some distant future, he might return but in the meantime, you are trying to raise five children while he is free as a bird and having a ball.

It's a choice only you can make—stay as you are (and "slowly go crazy") or make a clean break and start a new life for yourself preferably in a small community where you can have more companionship and make new friends.—M.M.

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

I would like to know if the caretaker of my apartment house has the right to enter an occupied apartment when the tenant is out? I have seen him do this. Some say he is looking for beer and whiskey (he is a drinker).

What can we do? Change locks? Each apartment has more than one door so we would have to change at least two.—PERTURBED.

DEAR PERTURBED:

Legal advice is out of my line but I doubt if your caretaker has a right to enter without permission.

Talk to the landlord and if that doesn't bring satisfactory results, I would change the locks. It is my belief that your (house, apartment or what have you) home is your own and no one has a right to enter uninvited.—M.M.

Rogers Coeds Score in 'Fashion Finals'

By MARY ELLIS CARLTON
I, P.T. Fashion Editor

Sure, any teenager knows you don't wear the same outfit at the beach as in the ballroom.

That's elementary. But there's a group of young fashionables at Rogers Junior High School who are well schooled in the secondary formula: what to wear when WITH what.

The 18-member Rogers team was first runner-up among junior and senior high schools in the area who participated in a "Well-Mannered Look" study course and fashion quiz co-sponsored by DuPont and the Broadway Stores.

For the "fashion finals," students—during a teenage style show in Los Angeles—were asked to correlate a variety of costumes to the appropriate occasion.

Additional questions tested their fashion eye with the accent always on suitability. Each indicated her choice on forms supplied for the purpose.

Winner of the county-wide competition was Rosemont Junior High in La Crescenta.

MUCH OF the credit for Rogers' good showing in fashionology goes to home ec teacher Jane Whitney, a tawny blond with cool classic beauty and wardrobe know-how who designs and makes her own clothes.

During sewing classes, she endeavors to help students "grow up" in their clothing tastes, putting the accent where it belongs—on dressing suitably for the time, the place and the occasion.

Says she: "Learning and accepting standards of behavior—and dress as well—is part of the teens' orientation course to the adult world they'll be entering."

She believes that good manners in dress are directly related to personality development and to performance in scholastics.

She advocates, further, that being well-dressed depends less on the amount of money than on the amount of taste expended.

Ninth graders at Rogers who participated include Leslie Bradshaw, Wendy VanHoughton, Christine Wlezorek, Chris Greg, Chris Kenny, Mary Johnson, Tish Cadwallander, Lynn Gilmore and Mary Linville.

So goodbye, Sloppy Joe. So Long Lady Beatnik. It looks like the well-mannered look is taking over in the classroom.

They're Scouting Hawaii

They baby sat, held bake sales, delivered hand bills, sold scrub balls, did house cleaning and ironing.

And today they are in Honolulu at the Reef Tower on glamorous Waikiki Beach, starting an eight day holiday.

The 21 members of Girl Scout Troop 443 have been working and saving for an adventure in travel since they were second graders. They had hoped to go to Europe, but no one seemed disappointed at settling for the tropical island.

They were greeted with leis and alohas at Honolulu by Hawaiian Senior Girl Scouts, who also will entertain them at a Hawaiian feast the last night of their stay.

INCLUDED in a very heavy schedule of activities are plans for hula lessons and a date for a mud slide in ti leaves.

Troop 443 is a general troop with three patrols. The Wing Scouts will find the plane travel of special interest, the Mariners are looking forward to a Pearl Harbor tour and the Trail Blazers will have a new experience—a jungle hike.

Leaders of the three patrols are Noreen Kirchoff, Lynn DeMorest and Karen Zimmerman.

Chaperoning the group are Mrs. Harry Zimmerman, the leader; Mrs. Wayne Bagwell and Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Wyant.

His Ribs Take No Ribbing

By MILDRED K. FLANARY
L. P. T. Feed Editor

His modus operandi has steam roller proportions. Today's Chef of the Week, Attorney Ralph P. Gordon, has sticktiveness, too.

Result? the Long Beach rookie police training program, the professional division of the United Fund Campaign's highest total on record, and the Town Forum, a half-hour program which he has conducted for five years. Oh, yes, he folk dances, too.

Gordon was born in Chicago, and is a graduate of the Chicago Kent College of Law. He had been a member of the Chicago bar two years when World War II started, and he joined the Navy. He was sent to Hawaii to head up the Signaling School at Pearl Harbor.

KNOWING that he would have to start from scratch after four years, and having a yen to return to California, he and his wife did just that. They had spent their honeymoon in Long Beach, and he had done shore duty here aboard the USS San Francisco. Too, they had friends in Burbank.

Having minored in personnel management at Kent, and with some extra credits chalked up at the University of Hawaii, he decided to make that his vocation. But he hadn't anticipated the turmoil pursuant to peacetime recovery. He ended up a salesman for the Young's Market Co.

He never forgot his law, however. He crammed a bit—and studied more, then took the California Bar Examination. He was admitted to the bar just three years ago this week.

The Gordons have a son, Harold, 19, a student at Cases Institute of Technical Training at Cleveland, Ohio, and a daughter, Andrea, 14, a graduate of Hill Junior High School.

Chef of the Week

all comparable cities in the state regarding training, wages, etc., and took that information to the council, the mayor and the city manager. He also conducted a public service program on radio, which made a great contribution, not only to that cause, but other civic needs, as well. The Long Beach training program, his since, been adopted in other cities.

Gordon is treasurer of the Long Beach Council on the Enlightenment of Alcoholism, serves on the Council of Human Relations and on the Community Welfare Council. He was also a member of the Mayor's Youth Program under former Mayor, "Chef" Raymond Keeler.

A spectator in most sports, he's a worthy foe at tennis.

There was a time, quote, when he used to be very handy around the kitchen, unquote, but no more. He does excel at barbecuing, however.

BARBECUING BACK RIBS

Marinate ribs in soy sauce, ginger and pineapple juice for about 3 hours. Just before placing on fire, sprinkle ribs with seasoned salt and a light amount of barbecue salt.

Prepare hot charcoal fire and place damp oak chips in fire just prior to putting on ribs. Place close to fire for about 2 minutes on each side, then raise barbecue grill to farthest point and allow to barbecue for another 25 minutes, turning ribs every 5 minutes.

A LIFE MEMBER of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, he was chosen Man-of-the-Year in 1953 by the Long Beach group. He also belongs to Elks Lodge 888.

When the Junior C of C realized the need for a rookie police training program, it was Gordon who chaired the committee. He contacted

District CCPT to Meet

Thirty-Third District, California Congress of Parents and Teachers, will have its first meeting of the year Monday in Starr King Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. Anthony Gamboa, president, will conduct the business meeting at which time appointment of committees, presentation of the 1964-65 budget, programming and other plans will be discussed.

PRESIDENTS of the 21 councils which comprise 33rd district met June 15 with Mrs. Gamboa. Combined membership of these councils for 1963-64 was 273,082, making the district the largest in the state.

Members of 33rd District serving on the California Congress of Parents and Teachers Board of Managers are Mmes. Leonard Hummel, of El Segundo; Everett Findlay, Long Beach; C. F. Rees, Inglewood, and Edward G. Kemp, Hermosa Beach.

Slow Pass Is Usually a Signal to Partner

Theodore Lightner of New York invented a convention around 1935 that is known by his name in expert circles all over the world.

Specifically the convention is that when a player not on lead doubles an adverse slam, he is asking his partner to make an unusual lead.

In most cases, the unusual lead will be the first suit bid by "dummy," other times it will call for some other suit bid by either dummy or declarer. In any event, it is up to partner to figure out the proper lead after the double is made.

When North jumped to seven diamonds, East thought for some time before passing. He was pretty sure that if he doubled that seven diamonds, his partner would figure out that he wanted a heart lead. He also felt that a double would lead to a bid of seven no-trump, and he did not think he could beat that contract.

He was quite right about seven no-trump. North and South had bid rather clumsily. Probably the trouble started when South responded ed one heart only. ANYWAY, East passed and West opened a heart against seven diamonds. East ruffed and it was all over except for a slight argument between the opposing partnerships.

North and South claimed that East had indicated his heart void by his slow pass. West agreed that the huddle made it rather easy for him to lead a heart, but said that he would have opened that suit in any event. He pointed out that he held six hearts and that there would be no way to beat the hand unless his partner had a void in that suit.

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

It's Leap Year, You Know

DEAR ABBY: Here are the facts: Ten years ago a very attractive 19-year-old girl divorced her husband shortly before her baby was born. She then proceeded to support herself. She is now almost 30. Two years ago she met a well-to-do, 42-year-old bachelor who became interested in her immediately. He occupied every spare minute she had, took her on trips and bought her expensive gifts. But he has never mentioned marriage. This young woman does not want to go with him indefinitely, and if he will not eventually marry her she doesn't want to waste any more time on him. What advice would you give this woman?—CLOSE FRIEND

ABBY

DEAR FRIEND: I would advise her not to give him up until the 4th of July. If he still hasn't mentioned marriage, she should put a firecracker under him in the form of a direct question. And if he doesn't marry her by Halloween, she should find herself another spook.

DEAR ABBY: I am a woman, 44 years of age. I was married but my husband died. I own my own home and have no children. My brother, 36, has shared my home for the past four years. He is a rather shy person and doesn't go out much. My problem is this: For the past two years I have been keeping company with a gentleman of whom I am very fond, and he insists it is morally wrong for my brother and me to live together. We argue constantly about this and it makes me very nervous. My brother and I both work and I can't for the life of me see what's morally wrong in our living together. It's a very large house and there would be no reason for my brother to take a room elsewhere when I own this empty house. He also takes care of my lawn and I don't have the worry of living alone.—QUESTION MARK

DEAR QUESTION: Your friend should get his mind out of the gutter. Could it be that your brother's living with you has cramped your friend's style because he'd prefer that you be completely unchaperoned? When one sees dirt, it's sometimes in one's own eye.

DEAR ABBY: I happen to be one of those STINKERS who has been a heavy smoker for over 40 years, and I have enjoyed every puff. I got three clippings in the mail of your column where that person wrote in to say that people won't quit smoking because of the lung cancer fear, but they might quit if somebody told them that all smokers just plain stink! I never knew that I stank. How can I find out who sent those clippings?—D.S.S.

DEAR D.S.S.: It's hardly serious enough for the FBI. Just assume the clippings were sent by someone who NOSE you very well.

DEAR ABBY: Speaking of odd names, I named my daughters Rose, Violet, Gardenia and Camillia. Our son was named Jonquil, but we call John because that's his Daddy's name. People refer to them as the Cavallo Bouquet. Feel free to use my name. Sincerely, —MRS. CAVALLO, THE BLOOMING IDIOT: MEMPHIS

MOLLY BEE

For Molly Bee It's Country Music, Yippee!

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Molly Bee, the sweet-faced teenager who gained fame singing hillbilly songs, is 24 years old now and has returned to the kind of music that made her a star.

For the past three years Molly had turned sophisticate in nightclubs and television.

But somehow the image didn't jibe with her wide-set eyes, youthful voice and blonde coiffure. Even now she must carry proper identification in her bag to be served a drink.

So Molly has forgone the tight gowns, spike heels, fancy hairdo and throbbing pop tunes in favor of simple dresses, full skirts, wide belts and wholesome country music.

"THAT'S HOW I started out back in 1955 on the Tennessee Ernie Television show," she said. "And when rock 'n' roll caught on I started singing that, too. It was comfortable and fun."

"But the chic costumes and pop songs just didn't suit me somehow. Now when I play a club I sing about six minutes of popular tunes and then sing country music the rest of the time."

"Country music tells a story instead of repeating the same phrase over and over again."

Molly returned to her old formula this season on the Jimmy Dean television show. Public response and her own kicks at fashioning the old hoedown spirit convinced Molly she will never be another Dinah Shore.

"So it's back to country tunes for me," she concluded, "and I couldn't be happier."

Bert's Eye View

By BERT RESNIK
TV and Radio Editor

YOU WATCH the man before the camera and you know there stands an actor.

There is an ease of performance and the man is comfortable—comfortable and confident.

A skillful actor is Fred MacMurray. He makes it look so easy, so natural, that you forget he's acting.

You forget he's acting even when he's surrounded by klieg lights, cameras, a director and a mike on a lowered boom.

He makes it look easy but you know it's hard work.

From scene to scene he goes, not in continuity, but like playing hop-scotch on a giant jigsaw puzzle.

Not once in the two hours I watched him on the "My Three Sons" set did MacMurray refer back to his script. No need.

Just once did he flub a line—rather, a word. He said "grandfather" instead of "grandmother." For that, he apologized to the director.

I complimented him afterwards on his acting. "Thanks," he said. "Mostly I'm just being myself."

BEING HIMSELF, in MacMurray's own opinion, means he's poor copy.

Put in his own words: "I've always known I'm a poor interview. I don't have any profound outlook on politics. My family and I lead a simple life."

It was said without an iota of false humility. It was said sincerely.

Fred MacMurray now is a man who is faithfully watched by millions of television fans every week. He's an actor who started in movies in the late 1920s and has worked in them steadily since. He's an actor who, in the late 1950's and the current 60's, cultivated a new generation of movie fans with "The Shaggy Dog," "Absent Minded Professor," "Bon Voyage," and "Son of Flubber."

All of which should give him the right to lead a simple home life without having to go Hollywood in order to provide sensational interview fodder.

AND MacMURRAY is not about to go Hollywood. I put my pencil down and stuck the paper in my pocket. We just talked.

I told him about the first time I saw him when, with his wife, June Haver, and their children, they had gone to spend a day at Knott's Berry Farm.

The MacMurray family sat down to dine in the steak house there and I'm not sure whether Fred ever had a chance to even start that meal.

There was a procession of autograph seekers and MacMurray didn't turn down a request. For the most part, they were adults who wanted autographs "for my son and daughter."

In MacMurray's opinion, not mine, there was nothing so wrong with the autograph seekers' behavior.

"As a matter of fact," he said, "I went to a party some time back at Bob Hope's place. There were a lot of sport greats there, Casey Stengel, Jack Dempsey."

He grinned and tamped the tobacco in his pipe. "I got a lot of autographs," he said. "Told them they were for the children."

WE TALKED some more. About his ABC-TV series—

"It's the type of show that could continue on for quite a while if we get the right timeslot and they don't throw 'The Beverly Hillbillies' at us."

And raising children—

"It would be nice if all the problems could be solved in a half-hour every week the way they have me do in the series."

About golf—

"There's no use getting sore at yourself. I used to. Now, well it's just wonderful to be out there."

About Father's Day—

"We're not planning anything special that I know about. We're just going to spend the day at home."

A simple life. A fine guy. A highly proficient actor. And really, contrary to his own opinion, not a bad interview.

WHAT'S HAPPENED TO LOVE STORIES?

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ And How About Jazz Series?

By RICK DU BROW
HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Arrows in the air:

When will the public see some practical results of Congress' year-old investigation of television ratings?

When will the networks offer a good jazz series?

Will the theme song of next year's television award ceremonies be "Once in Love with Emmy"?

When will the public see some practical results of Congress' year-old investigation of television ratings?

Have most video producers forgotten how to make love stories, or don't they remember what they are?

IN ALL of television's talk about protecting that good old family audience in that good old living room, has it ever occurred to anybody that bachelors and single girls are people too?—not to mention husbands and wives without children, and the vast number of oldsters who live alone?

And would advertisers really care about protecting the good old family audience if it didn't represent the biggest spending market of viewers?

And is simple-minded pap really "protecting" anybody

'Sophia' in Rome

The same producers who turned out Elizabeth Taylor's tour of London for television have now set their second similar project, "Sophia Loren in Rome."

It is scheduled to be broadcast on ABC-TV for an hour on Nov. 5, and to be aired in color by the network's five owned-and-operated stations.

anyway, or is it, in the end, an invitation to mental retrogression?

Why aren't there more female broadcasters in television? Answer (partly): Have you ever listened to the voices of most American women?

Will television have to wait for Barbra Streisand's next video appearance before it has another entertainment moment as memorable as her last?

NANCY KULP

Love on Last Lap as Nancy Meets Rock

By JOSEPH FINNIGAN

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Nancy Kulp, the efficient secretary on television's "Beverly Hillsbillies," has landed a man—right in her lap.

She's been limping ever since.

Miss Kulp, self-described as "kind of boney," rarely is involved in motion picture romances. She's never been described in studio press releases as ravishing.

Her beauty, she says, might better be compared to "a prototype of the female intellectual, the Vassar Phi Beta Kappa type."

Recently Miss Kulp was the envy of the town's starlets and leading ladies. She was cast in the movie "Strange Bedfellows" with Rock Hudson and Gina Lollobrigida.

In the picture, Hudson keeps bumping into Miss Kulp, sometimes violently. For one scene he landed in her lap. That's fine, the first few times. But Hollywood has a habit of refilming scenes.

"IT HAD all sorts of complications," Nancy said. "He sat in my lap about 15 or 20 times. We did that many takes. After about 10 times I wasn't able to move. He'd sprained some of my ligaments and my leg is still purple."

A high price to pay—even for Rock Hudson.

Hudson, being a considerate fellow, was not one to dismiss Nancy lightly. After all, a man just doesn't go around tearing up a girl's ligaments, moving picture or no moving picture.

Miss Kulp revealed that he sent her a gift, something to remind her of their picture. "He gave me a beautiful cane," she said.

WHAT YOUR NAME MEANS

Send your name to La Reina
Rule in care of Southland
Magazine, 604 Pine Ave.,
Long Beach, Calif., 90812, for origin and meaning and brief genealogy, for reply only in this column.

DEAR MISS RULE: Would like genealogy on SIN-
CLAIR—A. H., Lakewood.

A. H.: SINCLAIR traces to Woldernus, the Count of St.
Clair in Normandy, France.
This nobleman entered England with the 11th century
Norman conquerors. His descendant William de St. Clair obtained the baronial estate of Roslin in Midlothian, Scotland, in 1150. Other descendants lived in Norfolk, England. The town and estate of
St. Clair was so called in honor of Saint Clair, a third century bishop whose name meant "illustrious one." The surname "St. Clair" was shortened to Sinclair in medieval English dialect speech.
Sir William Sinclair of this lineage died in 1329 fighting
the Moors in Spain while en route to the Holy Land. The Sinclair shield is blue, emblazoned with a ship at anchor with furled sails.

DEAR MISS RULE: What is the genealogy on HOW-ELL—D. H., Santa Ana.

D. H.: HOWELL is from the ancient Welsh word
"Hoewel" meaning "alert one." This name became famed through the 10th century Welsh Prince Howell the Good, son of Cadell, King and "Glory of all the Britons." The records of Henry
II of England list an ancestor, Howell, son of Oeni, in 1161. The Howell shield is red, with three triple-towered
silver castles as emblems.
Edward Howell was a founder of Southampton, Long Island, in 1640.

DEAR MISS RULE: Kindly
analyze BREWSTER.—E. C.,
Long Beach.

E. C.: BREWSTER was the old English title for a "brewer of ale and beer." Records of 1273 list Emma La Breustere
of Buckingham. The Brewster shield is blue, decorated with an ermine coated chev-ron between three silver stars. The elder William Brewster, one of the founding fathers of New England, arrived there on the Mayflower in 1620.

DEAR MISS RULE: Please
inform on Boone.—M. M.,
Seal Beach.

M. M.: BOONE gained lasting fame in our country's frontier history through Daniel Boone whose father emigrated from Exeter, England,
to North Carolina in 1750.
Boone was celebrated in Europe centuries before America was discovered. The ancestor was Humphrey, the Sire de Bohun, whose estate
was at Carentan, Normandy, France. "Bohun" meant "messenger and protector." After the Norman English conquest
Bohun obtained the large

OUR COVER

Harriet Glanville is something of a paradox —she teaches school, is unmarried and is a golf addict. And calling her paradoxical is complimentary because she is not at all like the many concepts of a spinster schoolmarm or the popular idea of a woman golfer. Yet two consecutive Long Beach city championships attest to her ability as a competitor and she'll start in quest of her third city title, starting Monday. She plans a summer campaign in the National Open, the Broadmoor Invitational and the U. S. Amateur tournaments. Southland presents this fine golfer on today's cover and there is more about her golfing interests on Page 7.

NEXT WEEK

In these days of a little down and a little a week or month, many persons give too little thought to their credit ratings, sort of taking credit for granted. But the careless ones come up short and find themselves in hot water. Moving to another community won't help, because there exists a nationwide system of credit rating that keeps tab on just about everyone and it's a hard system to beat. "How's Your Credit?" is the title of an interesting article on this important phase of modern economy. Watch for it in next week's Southland Magazine.

WORLD'S MOST EXCITING HOME IMPROVEMENT SUPERMARKET

Romance of the Rancho Era

By Hortense Hoffman

FEW OF the thousands who throng Santa Anita in the seasons of racing or who visit the state-county Arboretum realize, probably little care unless they are history minded, that the whole of the intriguing area once belonged to a beautiful Indian woman — held under Mexican land grant.

She was the wife of Hugo Reid, a Scotch paisano, who wrote the first history of her people in 1852 with her help in interviewing old Gabrielinos. Would you have believed that out of two worlds these two would become one if you had seen them meet in 1934?

She sat in the driver's seat of the creaky oxcart to which he brought bolts of fustian and drill, silver spoons and a wooden platter that Senora Eulalia Perez y de Marino had purchased at his tienda in the pueblo of Los Angeles. He lifted the 100-year-old Mexican Dona beside the Indian beauty, as she casually invited him, "Take cha (Mexican tea) with us some day, Senor Reid, a ride in the open air will do you good."

"Gr-racias!" His Scotch burr never left his Spanish, French, English or Indian. Blue eyes twinkled at the girl's eyes — hers were like black velvet — and he stroked his pointed red goatee.

REID later banged at the massive gates of the Rancho San Pascual in spite of having learned that the Indian girl, a neophyte of San Gabriel mission, was married to an Indian 28 years older than herself. She was proud of their sons, Felipe at 12 and Jose Maria, his shadow, two years younger, both like their father, and their adored little daughter, Maria Ygnacia, a miniature of herself. They all lived with the old Senora in San Gabriel on the ranch which she was given because of many years as house-mother at the mission. Bartolomea lifted the iron bars, reproving him gently, "This is the hour of siesta. Let us sit in the patio until the Senora awakens and then we will have cha."

About two years later, after her husband had died of smallpox, and their fourth child, Carlitos, had been born, Reid, aged 27, returned from Mexico to court the young widow, aged 29. He fulfilled every legality, becoming a Mexican citizen and a Catholic. He took the name of Perfecto Hugo Reid and gave her the name of his queen, also the name of the fickle lass for whom he had left a promising career at Cambridge University to seek adventure in the new world.

She became Dona Victoria Reid. Padre Tomas yoked them in holy matrimony with a scarf around their shoulders and gold rings on their wedding fingers, as they knelt before the altar. Her white lace mantilla cascaded from a high Spanish comb, in her coronet of black braids, over her long white lace dress, down to white satin slippers, like doves resting in the courtyard.

Singing choir boys led the bridal carretta drawn by white oxen garlanded with roses. The whole world came to a three-hour dinner at Senora Eulalia's. They danced to music of guitar, violin, triangle and drum on a newly built pavilion enclosed on three sides and decorated by ribbons and flowers. At dawn Senora Eulalia stole behind Reid calling "Cascarones!" as she broke an eggshell full of confetti everybody joined the fun and were all spangled and drenched with scented water. The wedding fiesta was held during the week of the harvest in 1837.

REID BUILT his first home in San Gabriel, two-storied, although Victoria declared, "Never will I leave the earth's floor. One of the seven giants holding up the world might move." So a living-room was used as their bedroom. In

ANTIQUES

By Helen Gillum

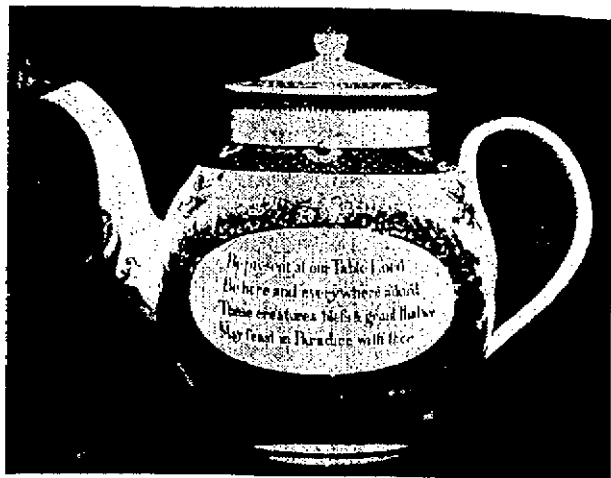

ONE OF THE pleasures of studying antiques is learning of interesting and unusual circumstances which often surround certain pieces. For instance, who would think that a uniquely styled teapot would be an important memento of a famous pottery maker and a great religious leader?

Such is the case with a John Wesley teapot cherished by Mrs. Stephen R. Hemmi of 3366 Cerritos Ave. The teapot, made in 1908 at the English Wedgwood factory, is a 7-inch-high copy of the original gallon teapot made especially for John Wesley by Josiah Wedgwood in 1761.

Wesley, founder of the Methodist Church, and Josiah Wedgwood, founder of the establishment bearing his name, became fast friends when Wesley was preaching near the early English pottery factory.

THE pottery maker became so impressed with Wesley's sincerity and his natural religious zeal, that he grew very fond of the preacher. One day as Mr. and Mrs. Wedgwood served tea in the beautiful garden, Wedgwood commented on Wesley's liking for tea (he usually drank 20 or more cups per day), and offered to make Wesley a teapot that would hold a gallon!

John Wesley's Teapot

This teapot is a quart-sized copy of a gallon teapot once owned by John Wesley and made by Josiah Wedgwood.

When Wesley was asked what design he would like, he bowed courteously to Mrs. Wedgwood and said, "The design on your charming blue calico dress and the flowers of this garden."

Thus a pretty wreath in delft blue, combining the rose of England, the thistle of Scotland and the shamrock of Ireland, was made to encircle each side of the teapot. And, because Wedgwood so admired Wesley's strict adherence to prayer before and after each meal, he had a blessing by Wesley printed within each wreath.

ONE SIDE of the teapot, with its blessing, is illustrated in the photo accompanying this article. On the other side are these lines:

We thank thee Lord for this our food
But more because of Jesus (sic) blood

Let manna to our Souls be given
The bread of Life sent down from Heaven

The original gallon teapot, now in the Wesley Museum in London is valued at $10,000.

In 1908, Mrs. Anna Onstott, wife of a Methodist minister, in Maine, sought to raise money for worthy religious causes. Reading the fascinating story of the gallon teapot, she wondered whether the Wedgwood factory would produce it in the quart size, so that money from the sales of the teapots could benefit her church. The Wedgwood people were happy to comply with her request, and the sales of the small teapots soon soared beyond her expectations.

Mrs. Hemmi came into possession of her teapot years ago, when an old friend sent it to her from Illinois. The friend, a former Long Beach resident, received the teapot through an uncle, a bishop in the Methodist Church, who acquired it when in conference in Maine about 1908.

She Comes to the Fore at a Tee Party

By Rich Roberts

HARRIET GLANVILLE teaches school, is single and spends all of her spare time with clubs.

But she hardly fits the image of the spinster school marm; nor does she approximate the popular idea of the woman golfer.

The clubs she's most interested in are the kind numbered one-through-nine.

While other ladies might be reaching for a tea bag, Harriet usually is reaching into her golf bag for a tee.

When she says she has a lot of ironing to do, she means she's going to be working on her short game.

And when it comes to putting around, don't look for her in the garden; she'll be on the practice green.

She is not only vivacious and intelligent but also the best woman golfer in the Long Beach area. Her two consecutive Long Beach City women's championships say so.

"I THINK it's a wholesome ambition for a girl to become a good golfer," Harriet says. "I was always interested in golf. My mother got me started. My father was real non-athletic.

"Mom wasn't especially good but she liked to play and encouraged me to play. She would even shag balls for me when I practiced. I guess I always knew how to swing a club, but I couldn't really take it seriously until I got out of UCLA. I couldn't play and graduate, too."

Harriet's schedule as a girls physical education instructor at Paramount Junior High School leaves her free to play only on weekends when school is in session. Then she hits the course both Saturday and Sunday.

"I play to a 5-handicap most of the time, except in the summer. Then I play all the time and it comes down to a 2."

FIRST ON HER competitive list this summer is defense of her Long Beach women's title starting Monday.

"If I can win this year I'll be up with Alice Bauer. She won three in a row and four altogether."

Alice is only one of the past Long Beach women's champions who went on to successful professional careers. Others include her younger sister, Marlene, and the original champion, Betty Hicks.

"Of course, my real ambition is to play in the national open," Harriet says with a girlish sigh. "It's being held at San Diego this year (in July) so I feel I have a good chance."

If Harriet qualifies to compete against the likes of Mickey Wright and other lady pros, she figures it would give her valuable experience for ensuing women's amateur tournaments like the Broadmoor Invitational at Colorado Springs, the Canadian Amateur at Calgary and the U. S. Amateur at Hutchinson, Kan.

"I've been to the quarterfinals twice in the national amateur, and I'm going to give it a real good shot this year."

HARRIET IS TOILING toward that aim with the best kind of competition she can find on a weekend.

"I enjoy playing golf more with men than women because of the competition," she says.

She notes that the males' instinctive superiority complex is forgotten when it comes to a friendly Nassau wager.

"They don't give me any strokes. I play them on even terms. I don't out-hit the long hitters but I'm usually up with them.

"Like most women players, my short game and putting used to be the best part of my game. But now it's getting necessary to hit the ball. I've added about 15 yards carry to my tee shots so I'm getting 215 or 220. You have to have that extra carry in most tournaments because the fairways are such that you don't get much roll."

As one can see, Harriet is considerably beyond the general run of women golfers. But she remains very much the woman in defending her sex's intrusion upon one of man's last sanctuaries, the golf course.

"There are women who are slow and don't know the rules," she admits, "but there are men, too. It's like the old joke about women drivers. A man can do the same thing and another man won't think anything of it."

AUDREY BROWN, president of the Meadowlark Women's Club, of which Harriet is a member, adds, "Girls who belong to women's clubs are usually more conscious of the rules than men. We make a point of it."

"And many women's clubs have a maximum handicap to prevent play from getting too slow. We feel that the place to learn the game is on the driving range with a good instructor—not on the golf course with some friends."

Harriet has won the Meadowlark women's title the last six years, but Audrey insists that the 85 members don't resent the monopoly.

"She's a wonderful person and we're glad she's with us. We're just proud of everything she does."

Nor does Harriet apologize for her prowess.

"Women's golf is a wide-open field for competition," she says, "even for women amateurs. As for the pros, there are only about 30 playing the tour."

"It's more of a glamorous sport than it used to be, too—and still very feminine. That's what I try to prove."

Harriet Glanville, ever a gracious champion, hugs runner-up Norma Deeble after the 1963 Long Beach City women's tournament.

The sea anemone may look like a lovely flower, but it isn't

Death Trap of the Deep

By Frank L. Remington

Dahlia anemones are brightly colored sea creatures with their arms arranged in five rows around mouth in center.

LURED BY the beauty of the sea anemone, other denizens of the deep discover their fatal error too late to escape. With the speed of lightning, the lovely assassin ensnares its victim, pierces the creature's skin with barb-like cells and shoots poison into the wound. Stupor or death ensues and the anemone feasts on its latest catch.

Popularly termed "sea flower," the anemone in reality is a low form of animal life. The tentacles resemble the petals of a flower. Some species are called dahlia anemones and daisy anemones because of their similarity to those plants.

Gorgeously tinted in shades ranging from bright crimson to dark purple, these flower-like animals usually attach themselves to rocks. Although they are capable of slow creeping movements, they depend mostly on ocean currents and the waving of their tentacles for locomotion. The tentacles, covered with numerous thread-like cells, capture and paralyze the prey and conduct it to the slit-like mouth in the center of the waving arms. Food, as well as air, also comes from the constant stream of water passing through the creature's body.

TO APPEASE its hearty appetite, the anemone gobbles most anything unfortunate enough to come within range of its death-dealing tentacles, although its chief items of diet are fish, crabs and shrimp. Sometimes it bites off more than it can chew! But its surprisingly elastic mouth usually manages to engulf the food.

When dining on shellfish, the anemone digests only the soft part of the body, later dispensing of the shell through its mouth. An ambitious specimen once swallowed a large scallop shell, which lodged between its mouth and stomach. All efforts to eject the obstruction failed, so the versatile anemone, unable to swallow, developed a new mouth at the base of its body.

In shallow water, dahlia anemones often attract venturesome bees with their beauty. Trapped in the creature's tentacles and fighting frantically but futilely to escape, the bee finally succumbs and is then eaten by the treacherous dahlia.

WHEN THIS beautiful assassin of the sea wishes to escape notice, it hides beneath overhanging rocks or camouflages itself with shell fragments attached to its tentacles. Some specimens, especially the plumrose anemone, flatten themselves to barely the thickness of a playing card. In this form they spread over an area of five or six inches. By taking on water, they can, within 15 minutes, again swell their bodies to normal.

Many anemones form peculiar partnerships with other inhabitants of the ocean, but these associations usually benefit both participants. For instance, some sea flowers acquire their own private limousine and chauffeur by attaching themselves permanently to the hard shell of a hermit crab. The chauffeur carries his passenger about from place to place, and even shares his food with the rider. For its part, the passenger discourages any prowler who might cast hungry eyes toward the crab. Experience has taught such would-be diners to keep safely away from the anemone's poisonous tentacles.

Another crab, the melia, found only in the tropics, enters into an even stranger relationship with some forms of the sea flower. This devoted creature carries two anemones, one clutched tenderly in each pincher. And if he should lose the guardianship of either of his charges, the melia displays the nervousness and concern of a worried mother over a lost child.

THE MOST amazing partnership of all exists between a giant tropical anemone measuring some two feet across and a small fish called amphiprion, about three inches long. These little creatures live comfortably within the body cavity of the huge sea flower, usually three of the fish sharing the stomach of a host. This furnishes an excellent hiding place, and the tiny lodgers pay their rent in a unique manner. Venturing from their cavern-like residence, they swim about until a larger fish, with visions of a tempting dinner, gives chase. About the time the hungry fish closes in on the amphiprion, it darts into its strange home and the chaser finds himself helplessly trapped in the anemone's tentacles, where instead of dining he is dined upon.

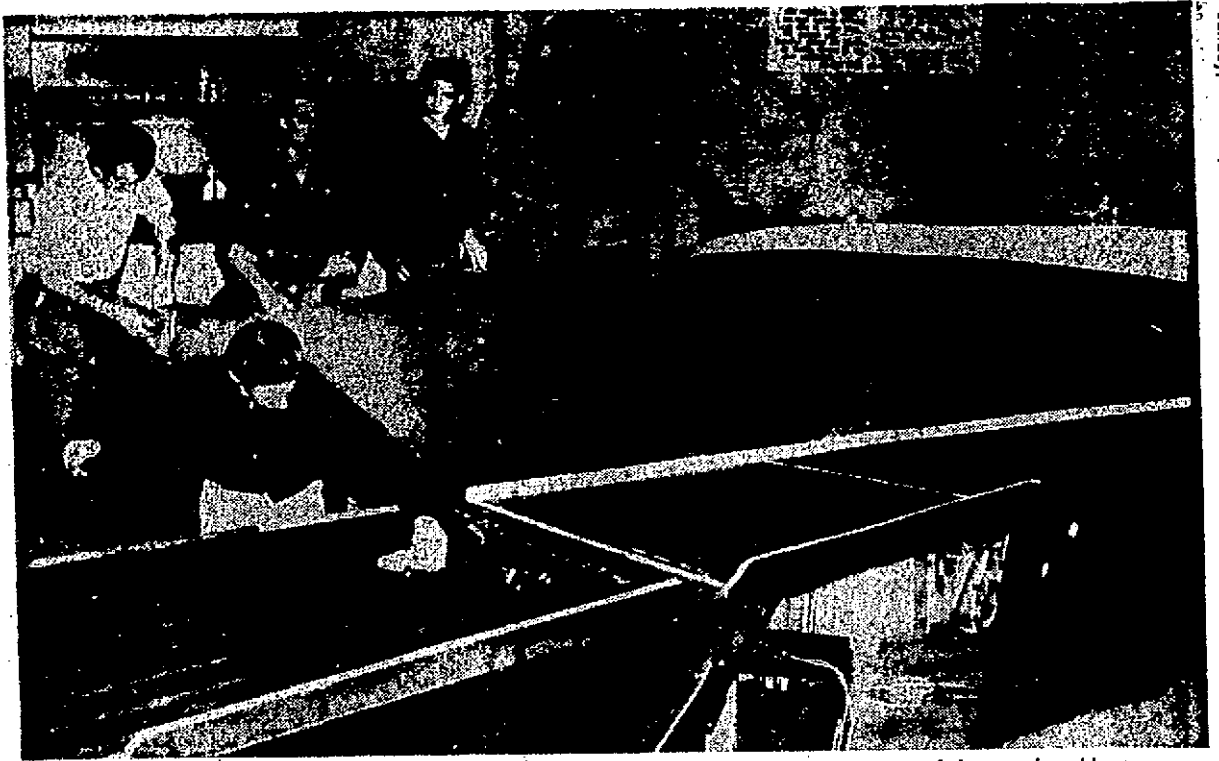

Truly one of the strangest inhabitants of the ocean, the sea anemone strikes terror into the hearts of many denizens of the deep. But just the same, its beautifully colored body is pleasant to look upon and some creatures, who closely associate with it, find the sea flower not such a bad companion after all.

The widowed sea anemone, spending its life in solitary manner, resembles an exotic tropical plant. Its delicate tentacles seize smaller creatures.

Slot Car Racing:

Tiny, electric-powered cars spin around oval or figure 8 "slot tracks" in newest game of the speed world. Sport takes name from slots that guide the cars as operators use remote control units to "drive" the cars.

Newest Adventure in the World of Speed

By Robert Hazelleaf

IF SOMEONE could lower the price of a $30,000 race car to less than $20, reduce the track from 2½ miles to 110 feet, and still retain the thrills of an Indianapolis race, that someone would make a mint.

"This year," says Jack Tate of Model-Rama, a Compton model car components plant, "the hobby industry expects to hit $27 million in sales on model cars alone."

"There's a good reason for it," he continues. "You can begin with an over-the-counter, snap-together kit for

$4 to $6. From there, you can modify, rebuild, scrap and begin again with a more sophisticated model built from available components, or even from scratch with only tires and motor to be bought.

"With every step, the hobbyist is learning and having a ball at the same time. And the big companies? We love 'em. A youngster buys a kit or two, and soon graduates to the hand-built jobs. There's room for both of us."

A TRIP to a model racing setup, better known as slot

car racing, can be quite an adventure. Usually, it's a hobby shop with plenty of room.

There will be competitors ranging from kids barely tall enough to see the track, to adults who have long collected pension checks—all interested in seeing how fast a car can be made to go and still keep to the track.

On race night, qualifying runs determine placement in later events. A few evenings ago, at Compton's Model-Rama Pit Stop, a new record of 4.20 seconds was set on of 100 feet. The tiny car, 1/24 or 1/25 the size of its larger relatives, raced on a 1/24 half mile track. The speed? Just under 18 miles an hour, magnified by the figure eight layout. Translated to normal car size, the pace would be a fantastic 432 miles per hour.

The Compton installation has a figure eight, two road courses (one of them called the Riverside) and a drag strip about to be re-opened. The strip, a scale quarter-mile, is 55 feet long. On the former track, one little bomb was timed at .995 second. That's about 37 miles per hour from start to finish, a scale speed that's almost unbelievable.

DURING THE DAY and non-race evenings, patrons drop a dime in a slot to energize their racing lane for 15 minutes or thereabouts, depending on the shop.

On the big nights, though, entry fees cover track time and trophies awarded for trophy dash, semi-main, main event and other achievements.

LeRoy Higgins, an enthusiast from South Pasadena whose wife and son are also devotees, has more than 100 trophies, all collected in less than a year. Competitors take pride, just as big-car drivers do, in "wiping out" all comers at tracks throughout the Southland and even in national events.

Says Higgins, "Races are won by staying on the track, as well as by speed. There's a knack to it."

One doesn't simply stick a car in its slot and push a button. The driver either nurses a "go" button provided by the track, or brings his own plunger affair that works like a gas pedal. Some drivers even have brakes by using the motor as a generator through a special, hand-held switch.

A CRASH on a turn during a hot race is nothing less than spectacular. A car mis-cues and spins, another car immediately slams into it, while a third vehicle rams through and into the air for several feet, leaving a trail of parts on the track.

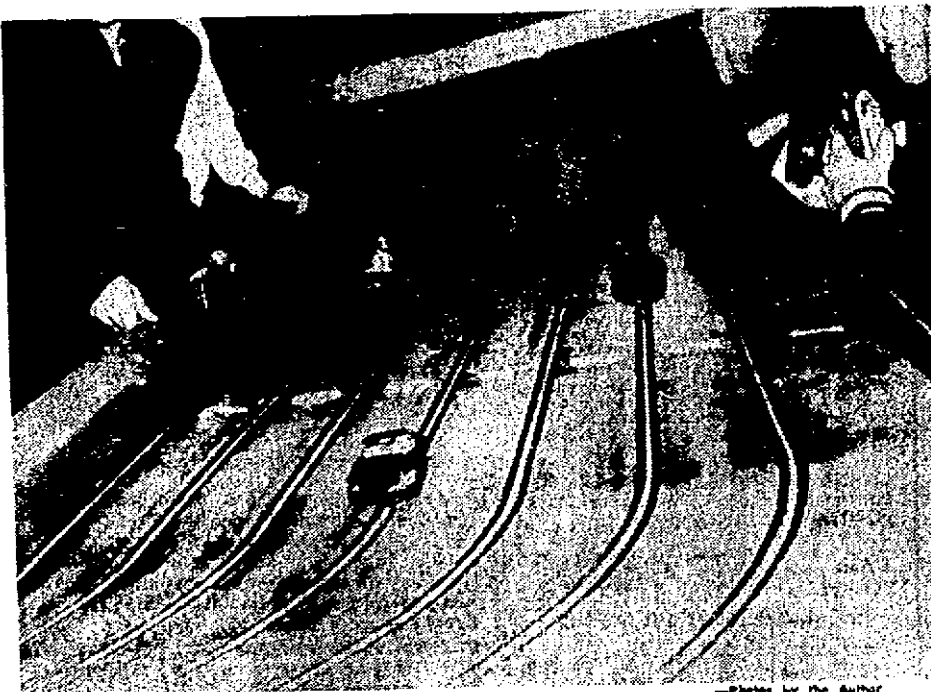

The car is much too fast to be brought into a turn wide open. Power must be slacked off at the curves, turned on again at just the right point. Like their big brothers, cars win when they can gain a tiny fraction of a second before braking, accelerate quickly and down the straightaway. A miscalculation results in a sure spin-out. Danger to life, limb and pocketbook may be less than with Grand Prix cars—but a hobbyist soon learns about centrifugal force.

The new sport has a longer history than many persons realize. A British military officer hybridized an electric train motor with a model car body, and chassis about 16 years ago. He was captivated by his efforts and went on to refine the idea. Others soon took up the hobby, and about 11 years ago interest crossed the Atlantic.

ABOUT 1957, model building in the United States picked up a bit, going through about five years of off-and-on activity, until it really boomed in 1961.

"Apparently, everyone had the idea at once," explains Jack Tate. "I suppose buyers for the big department stores simply reached decisions simultaneously. One Christmas, slot cars were 'in' and that was it, as big companies

Whirling around the slots at unbelievable speeds, the little cars require considerable skill from the operators to keep them on the turns and yet maintain highest speeds.

AT A GLANCE the accompanying photograph appears to be that of a modern kitchen. Actually, it is a picture of the outside patio adjacent to the kitchen and den in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence DeCarlo, 1602 9th St., San Pedro. Included are a barbecue, grill, and plenty of work area. A refrigerator is nearby. The fiberglass and lath ceiling shades the area by day, and protects it at night. drops of a favorite scent. It can be a bouquet in which to park some elusive pearl corsage pins.

Most of the trimmings were odds and ends left from "this-and-that" items, and you might search your own scrapbox for interesting subjects.

Materials are a seven-inch stick, one half inch or less thick, a three-inch styrofoam ball, a dime store red glass vase three inches tall and wide enough at the base to support the 12-inch height of the rose tree.

IN THE PROCESS of assembling the tree, the stick was slightly sharpened to a point and tipped with glue, then forced halfway into the center of the foam ball. A line of paste was spread down one side of the stick and strip of green tie ribbon was wound smoothly to within an inch of the end. Over the green ribbon was wrapped a strip of pale green net and a diagonal curve of gold tie lace for glitter effect.

The unwrapped bottom of the stick was pushed into a block of styrofoam wedged into and extending up the height of the vase. (When the foam was wedged too tightly, a shallow hole had to be cut for the stick to enter.)

The plastic roses in orange, yellow and red, were leftover party picks. The scraps of red net were folded in a square and all cut at once into two inch circles. The picks were cut short to an inch, pushed through a circle of red net, tipped with glue and stuck into the foam ball. Beginning at the top of the ball, the flower heads were set in rows down the curve of the sides. More roses filled in the open spaces, alternating the colors and 20 or more flowers were used. The number depends on the spacing.

ANOTHER ROSE was attached to the neck of the vase with a gold wire stem. Plastic leaves pushed inside the neck of the vase hid the foam.

Substitutions could be, instead of the dowel, a toy arrow shaft, a rod or metal tube.

For the rose picks, the flowers from several corsages.

In place of net, pin a series of ribbon twists into the foam so that V-cut ends will stand out with a perky effect.

SOUTHLAND HOMES

Modest Exterior

By Stella George

MODEST EXTERIOR OF the Long Beach home of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Mee and family, 5508 Flagstone St., belies the fact that the interior has a definite air of elegance. The former two-bedroom, one-bath, tract home has been remodeled to the extent that it is now an entirely different dwelling from its original. The work has been done so skillfully that it seems as if the structure was always this way. It is also difficult for an observer to believe that every bit of the remodeling was done by Mr. and Mrs. Mee (with the exception of the large plumbing fixture in the new bathroom). One unique feature about the remodeling is conversion of a former living room into a large formal dining room. A new and spacious living room—so comfortable in decor that it serves the purpose of living and family room—was added. In addition, the Mees built in a large master bedroom and bath.

AN ENTRANCE HALL was created by putting a wall on the right on the front entry; thus there is entrance to the hall and bedrooms to the left, the sunken living room directly ahead, and the dining room to the right.

Three wide steps lead down to the living room which is separated from the dining room above only by small white posts supporting a narrow top.

Budget was an important consideration in the new decorating scheme. The Mees purchased a used dining room set which was made of heavy walnut and which included a large buffet. They painted the set antique white flecked with gold, and covered the chairs with a rich royal blue fabric. They lowered the buffet and used the bottom legs as a base for a couch in the living room. Flooring in the dining room and adjoining kitchen is of black and white tile squares. The white posts which overlook the living room were a part of an old table (purchased for $2). Another portion of the table is now an ornamental piece in the entrance hall which, at a glance, seems custom made for the purpose. Shutters cover the front window in the dining room.

THE NEW living room is carpeted in thick wool turf of a neutral beige shade. A black fireplace in on the far wall, in full view of the dining room. Two sofas, which Mrs. Mee recovered, are at right angles along one wall and below the dining room area. Above one is an arrangement of original paintings, all done by Mrs. Mee. Nearby is a hi-fi set. Across the room are two occasional chairs flanking a small table. One is an heirloom piece more than 100 years old.

The kitchen and dinette seem larger because of new decorating ideas which have been put into effect. White brick wallpaper and a handsome mural surround the dinette. A plastic topped table is surrounded by four black wrought iron chairs. Overhead is a white lamp that hangs low.

THE NEW master bedroom is half again the size of the other two. Closets are ample. A glass wall faces the patio. The new bath has gold-flecked tile and a built-in dressing table. The other two bedrooms are tailored to the needs of a small girl and two older brothers.

This modest exterior fails to indicate luxury inside.

HOW YOUR CHILD LEARNS

A Boy's Book List

By Howard E. Kent

QUESTION: Could you recommend some summer reading—just for fun—for a boy of 13?
ANSWER: Yes, if you don't mind searching the remote, dusty corners of second-hand book stores. I recommend a series of books by Seckatary Hawkins (Robert F. Schul-kers).
They capture the spirit and adventure of boyhood more successfully than any books I know. Nothing comparable is being written in this dull, austere, plastic-covered era of children's "literature."

It's hard to explain the marvelous flavor of the Seckatary Hawkins books. But you get a good idea of it from the introduction to "Stoner's Boy":
"We boys have had some exciting times around this old river bank. The trouble started a long time ago, and the reason we organized our club was to figure out ways to steer clear of trouble. And that's how it comes about, too, that all the other boys in and around our town call me 'Seckatary' Hawkins. You see, when the boys in our club used to play together on the old river bank, right down off the main road, we would always get into a fight, somehow or other, with the boys from Pelham, which is just across the river from our town. And the Pelham fellows were pretty rough, too. They built shacks on their side of the river, in which they would meet every day and watch for a chance to 'get' us. Well, we didn't want to get into any fights, neither did we want to keep away from the river bank..."
Modern authors of "wholesome" books for children just aren't writing about the rough fellows across the river. So, from the 1920s, I recommend:
"Stoner's Boy."
"The Red Runners."
"The Chinese Coin."
"Knights of the Square Table."
"The Yellow Y."
"The Gray Ghost."
Good reading for the long, hot summer.

New Vitality on the Cotton Scene

Check and Double Check—Galey and Lord's bright navy and white checked Dacron and cotton makes up superbly in Hannah Troy's jacket dress. Picking up the check—stencil motif in the Lampshade—the high white hat of John Fredericks—style has new vitality.

The Galey & Lord cotton story this season in the world of fashion is one of textures, ribs, construction. The fabulous success of ottoman has carried on with many new fabrics in the ribbed theme. The look of cavalry twill or whipcord, the crisp hand of pique, the happy alliance of polyester with cotton makes for new vitality and excitement on the cotton scene.

The newest and most conversational is the bubble pique in tender romantic shades of mauve, buttercup, mint, hyacinth and the like. And in all forms of bubble and of ottoman WHITE continues as a high fashion color in the hands of America's foremost designers.

Fritters: Fun to Do, Fun to Eat

By Mildred K. Flanary

Southland Magazine Home Economics Editor

GOLDEN brown corn or apple fritters make a hit at any meal, either as a potato substitute or, in the case of apple fritters, as a tasty, filling dessert. For breakfast, they give the day a good start.

For simplicity, try using a package of prepared escalloped apples, or corn soufflé. Either will eliminate time-consuming advance preparation work, including peeling, baking or boiling.

Apple Fritters

- 1 12 ounce package frozen escalloped apples
- 1½ cup flour
- 2 tsp. baking power
- ¼ tsp. salt
- 2 eggs slightly beaten
- ½ cup milk
- fat for frying

Defrost escalloped apples, at room temperature for about 2 hours, or overnight in a refrigerator. Sift flour, baking powder and salt. Add milk. Stir in apples and slightly beaten eggs. Drop by heaping teaspoons into hot fat about ½ inch deep in skillet. Brown on all sides. Drain on paper towels. Serve with syrup as a vegetable substitute, or with lemon-flavored whipped cream as a dessert. Makes 16 fritters, serves 3.

Corn Fritters

- 1 12 ounce package frozen corn soufflé
- ¾ cup flour
- 1½ tsp. baking powder
- ¼ tsp. salt
- 1 egg
- fat for frying

Defrost frozen corn soufflé, either at room temperature for about 2 hours, or overnight in the refrigerator. Sift flour, baking powder and salt. Beat egg. Stir mixture into egg. Add defrosted corn soufflé. Blend lightly. Drop by heaping teaspoonsful into hot fat about 1 inch deep in skillet or French fry kettle. Brown on all sides. Drain on paper towels. Serve with syrup for any meal. Makes 16 fritters, serves 3.

Fritters made with apples or corn are welcome variation for potatoes or for dessert, or for a filling breakfast.

You Ask We Answer

By Harlin

Q. Why is the Red Danish Dairy breed of cattle so popular? M. H.

A. It is so well known for quantity of milk and butter-fat produced, as well as for being such a good all-purpose breed, that it has long been the most popular breed in Denmark. In 1958, the Danish cow with highest yield, a Red Danish Dairy, produced 19,634 pounds of milk, of 5.62 percent fat, and 1,247.75 pounds of butter. Heifers and bulls of the breed have been exported to many countries for breeding purposes in the past 25 or 30 years.

Q. Did the "finxed" steamship Great Eastern really have a skeleton on board?—R. I.

A. The ship did not purposely carry a skeleton on board, but when she was broken up, in 1888, wreckers supposedly discovered the skeleton of a workman who had been trapped and sealed into a compartment in the double hull during the ship's construction. Old sailors have been quoted as saying that the skeleton on board was responsible for all the Great Eastern's misfortunes. The mammoth, ill-fated ship was built in England in 1854-1858.

Q. What is "slack water" in connection with tidal waters? D.W.

A. "Slack water" is the period when no horizontal movement of water can be seen at the surface—when the sea level is neither rising nor falling. The term is generally used with reference to the time between flood and ebb currents. "High-water slack" is the slack period following high tide; "low-water slack" is the slack following low tide, before the turn of the tide.

Q. How far away can radar aboard a ship detect an iceberg? M. C.

A. The distance depends greatly on the nature of the iceberg's surface exposed to the ship. Average radar distance may be 8 to 10 miles. If the exposed surface is a gentle slope, and the day is clear, the iceberg can probably be seen visually long before radar picks it up. The large vertical-sided Antarctic icebergs can usually be detected by radar at ranges of 15 to 30 miles.

Q. What is the southernmost point of the Soviet Union?—H. D.

A. This is the town of Kushka on the Afghanistan frontier at latitude 35 degrees 30 minutes north. Kushka is at approximately the same latitude as San Francisco, Calif.

For well-exposed color movies at the beach, it's usually necessary to close your lens opening by a half or even one full stop from normal, because of the light sand and preponderance of light colors.

If you have an electric-eye camera, this is done automatically—but remember this situation can "fool" the meter. When you're taking a picture of a person sitting under a beach umbrella, chances are the meter will read all of the bright sand around the umbrella and the area under the umbrella would be underexposed.

If your camera has an exposure lock, move in close, take a reading of the person and then lock the aperture. Otherwise, use a manual setting.

Building this "treeless" treehouse is relatively simple and the finished unit will yield hours of fun for kids.

By Bill Meyerriecks

IN THE life of every youngster, there has to be a treehouse. You might think back to your youth and remember the fun and excitement of having a "headquarters" or clubhouse up high where you could imagine the world was yours.

Sketchbook this week makes it possible for Dad to become the hero of the hour to his youngsters with a plan for a "treeless" treehouse. The plan takes into consideration that your back yard may not have a wide spreading tree in which to build the house. It provides complete start from the ground up.

THE TREEHOUSE is not a difficult project. All you need is the Sketchbook plan and a moderate pile of standard lumber. Regular tools ordinarily found around home are sufficient.

Specifications on the plan call for a completely safe treehouse with a floor only five feet off the ground and the railings 7½ feet up. Height to the peak is about 12 feet. If you wish to use longer 4x4 corner posts, the treehouse could be moved higher.

Floor space inside the treehouse is 5 feet 2 inches square. Access is up a magic ladder through a trap door. This makes it particularly good fun. The imagination of the youngster soars as he climbs up the ladder to his "control tower," or "forest ranger station," or whatever the treehouse may be to him that moment of play.

TO HOLD down the cost of materials, the Sketchbook plan recommends use of insulation board as paneling material for the sides and the roof. If cost is no object, plywood can be used instead.

The treehouse design is S-165 and may be obtained by sending 50 cents with name and address to Building Editor, Southland Magazine, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach 12, Calif.

DEAR MISS RULE: May we learn about WHITTING-

TON.—J. S., Lakewood, J. S.: WHITTINGTON, a name famed from the English legend about Dick Whittington, was actually derived from the ancestral home-town of Whittington (meaning "estate of the fair one's family") in Worcestershire. Dick Whittington, a boy who came to London to seek his fortune, had achieved nothing and was en route home when church bells seemed to beckon him back to London. He followed his intuition and returned. Later he became prominent and served as lord mayor of London three times between 1397 and 1420. The Whittington family shield is red, decorated with a blue and silver stripe across the center.

DEAR MISS RULE: May we learn about GYSLER. — S. G., Anaheim.

S. G.: GYSLER is an old form of the German name Geisler. The archaic warrior-tittle source was "Gisil-Heri" meaning "soldier with a rod or wand of authority."

Utility Class are judged today under Herald C. Hylton of Long Beach, Margaret L. Foster of El Cajon and Howard E. Cross of Harbor City.

Junior Showmanship class judging time will be announced at the show. Judge will be Robert J. Mankey of Santa Ana.

EARLY THIS evening M. B. Godso will select Best in Show from the six group winners of both Saturday and today.

To enjoy a dog show, buy a catalog, visit the benches dogs, select your favorite breed and watch the judging. Don't forget the fun of the obedience trial. Take the youngsters but do not permit touching the dogs nor teasing them. Don't let children bring in balloons. Although a dog show is a busy place, the unnatural noise of a balloon popping can upset the most stable dog. Hot dogs and other goodies are available.

Chances are the youngsters will want to "practice dog show" on their own dog when they get home. With some help from you, this is good, for a dog loves attention. And you can make it really rewarding by adding a few tricks to his "lessons."

First teach the dog to "Sit." Put a leash on him, snub him near a wall on a table, and walk toward him holding a treat above his head. He'll sit, and as he does, command, "Sit." Reward him with the treat.

WHEN HE is sitting on command, go on to "Shake," "Beg," and "Speak." Sit him, then run a finger on the inside of his right leg or cover his paw with your hand. As he lifts the paw, take it in your hand, quickly say, "Shake," praise and reward him. Repeat often but don't tire him. Again, when he is sitting, lift his forepaw, say, "Up," praise and reward. Repeat often. Also, when he is sitting, hold a treat over his head and command, "Speak." Bark if you like. He'll catch on. Give him praise and the treat. Happily, a dog taught to "Speak" often becomes a dog that does not bark needlessly.

Southern California but her title was challenged because she was Indian. In 1841, Gov. Alvarado confirmed Reid's claim to Santa Anita, 8,000 acres, sold in 1846 to Henry Dalton for only $2,700. A small portion is now the Los Angeles State and County Arboretum, and another part is the Santa Anita racetrack. One of Reid's successors, "Lucky" Baldwin, is remembered in the famous coach house and the Queen Anne Cottage, wickiups mark the Indian dwellings and Hugo Reid's adobe the rancho period.

Overlooking the entire San Gabriel Valley the house has been restored. It was in 1839, The National Society of Colonial Dames in California furnished the ranch house in 1961. The trams carrying loads of visitors at the Arboretum in Arcadia bring thousands of young and old Californians to this historical area every day.

Reid became prominent in California life and his interest in the Indians led him to write 22 essays on their life and history. The writings are now part of his biography, "A Scotch Paisano" by Susanna Bryant Dakin. He died in 1852, leaving his family destitute. Dona Victoria died in 1868 and was buried on Christmas Eve of that year in San Gabriel Mission cemetery.

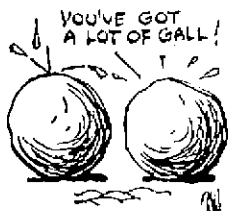

Gastric Freezing Curbs Urged

By Ben Zinser

Southland Magazine Medical Science Writer

TECHNIQUE of freezing the stomach to treat peptic ulcer should be considered experimental and confined to medical centers experienced in the procedure, a poll of famed medical experts recommends.

Says the AMA Department of Medical Physics and Rehabilitation: "There seems to be no justification for its widespread clinical use until evidence of its efficacy and safety has been firmly established."

Earlier, two doctors affiliated with the University of Texas Southwestern Medical School in Dallas made this comment in a recent AMA Journal report:

"Gastric freezing is not an innocuous procedure. Like any operation, it is subject to errors in judgment and technique, and may be attended with side effects and complications. This is particularly true when the method is utilized in poor-risk patients by overzealous or inexperienced personnel."

A REPORT that the drinking of certain spring water found on the island of Icaria, Greece, will dissolve gallstones has been rejected by a medical expert.

Dr. Franz J. Ingelfinger, Boston, in a report in the AMA Journal, says: "I know of no diet, mineral water or medicine that will bring this about (dissolution of gallstones)."

BAD NEWS for people who like to eat: The Food and Nutrition Board of the National Academy of Sciences-National Research Council has reduced its recommended daily calories allowances for adults.

For example, the calorie requirement for a moderately active man who is 25 years old and 145 pounds has been reduced from 3,200 to 2,900 daily. And for a 25-year-old, 128-pound moderately active woman the daily calorie allowance has been lowered from 2,300 to 2,100.

The decreased calorie requirements stem from the Food and Nutrition Board's concern that a considerable segment of the adult population is overweight and that today's average American exerts much less energy.

IT'S WELL KNOWN that more men than women smoke, but Jewish women are altering the smoking pattern among women, two Harvard University researchers report.

A new study discloses that Jewish women may soon have more smokers than the male sex does.

Other findings:

More Catholic fathers and sons and more Jewish mothers and daughters smoke. Fewer Catholic mothers smoke than do Protestant or Jewish mothers, and those who do smoke, smoke less.

Drs. Eva J. Salber and Jane Worcester report the research in the journal Cancer.

A NEW TYPE of sweet, one less likely to lead to tooth decay, is being investigated by the Royal Dental School in Stockholm, Sweden.

The preparation is a slowly fermentable carbohydrate made of treated potato starch, according to Dental Abstracts.

like Strombecker and Revell jumped into the field."

The idea is deceptively simple. Begin with a model car, usually to 1/24 or 1/25 scale. Mount in it a motor that turns in the neighborhood of 8,000-9,000 revolutions per minute on current from a car or truck battery.

The track has braided wire strips to give a power takeoff from the battery in the same manner as an electric train, through the track. A brush or swinging arm arrangement under each car gives contact, space between the metal strips forming the slot that names the game. A guide under the car travels in the slot, and that's it.

"THE INTEREST lies in the problems that must be overcome," says Tate, who spent about 14 years racing midget autos in the old Southland circuits. "Every change means a modification somewhere else—rewind the motor for more speed, and you compensate for it in weight distribution, suspension, gear ratio, the whole bit. In fact, any problems of weight in motion are there, just as in life-size cars.

"People don't believe it, unless they've seen a good race. But some competitors are actually pale and shaking before a race." Tate can prove the point at any good track.

As usual in the automotive field, slot racing is virtually headquartered in Southern California. In the hobbies of custom cars, sport cars, and drag racing, the rest of the country seems to learn from the Southland. Out of 130 tracks across the nation, 43 are known to be scattered from Santa Barbara to San Diego. Probably half that number are in Los Angeles County. Bringing it even closer, there's a concentration of tracks in the Long Beach, Torrance, Compton, Lynwood areas that runs the gamut from elaborate combination layouts down to the barest elements.

Models are available from the junkiest-looking jalopies to the smoothest Sting-Rays, Ferraris and customs—along with classics no longer around.

ALTHOUGH many hobby shops now in the sport began with a stock of airplane models and toys, it soon was evident that slot cars were becoming a "hot" item. Within a few months, stores began seeking room for expansion to accommodate track layouts.

On the other hand, men like Richard Hibben, with his Carson Hobbies in the 223rd Street-Avalon area, began from scratch with an empty store room and enthusiasm, plus a figure-eight layout. Now, it's going strong, with a road course added to the track and hobby shop.

Is it a fad?

Concludes Jack Tate: "If it is, it's a big one. The little cars are going to be with us a long time, I think. Remember, as much as 85 per cent of the more expensive cars are built by Dad, instead of Sonny."

Free Swimming Pool Planning Kit

If you are planning a pool this year here is your opportunity to get a free kit showing all phases of pool construction. Also included are tips on pool buying plus complete information on special equipment. Kit is packed with facts and ideas you will want to know before you build.

This free kit was put out by Anthony Pools, world's largest pool-builder.

Its authoritative information was developed by Anthony, based on the building of over 24,000 pools.

In the pictures and text it describes the way modern pools are constructed. The growing use of high-speed automatic equipment for excavation and gunite cementing has kept the price of Anthony pools low while prices in general have gone up. A modern pool is just about the biggest bargain you can get these days.

It is important that you choose a builder large enough to offer you modern speed and economy.

During the first four months of this year Anthony has built more pools in the greater Los Angeles area than the next three largest pool builders combined. This is a dramatic endorsement of Anthony's value, service, and reputation.

Kit also describes such Anthony exclusive accessories as Hida-Sweep automatic pool cleaner—it is never removed from the pool—and Antho-Pure, the automatic pool purifier that holds up to six months' supply of Gardex.

Other sub-assemblies and accessories manufactured in Anthony's 15 acre plant and sold direct to the pool buyer help keep Anthony's price low.

Anthony Pools' stock is listed on the American and Pacific Coast Stock exchanges.

For your free copy of this valuable kit, drop in or call Anthony Pools South Gate office at 5871 Firestone Blvd., phone SP 3-2210, TO 1-0381, or our Torrance office, 25412 S. Crenshaw Blvd., phone 882-5321 or our Anaheim office at 2050 So. Harbor, phone JE 4-3100.

THINK YOU ARE NORMAL? Probably so, but you also have king-sized neuroses as a cause—or a result—of being normal, say the husband-and-wife team of Gail and Snell Putney, authors of "NORMAL NEUROSIS" (Harper & Row, $3.95).

BOOK REVIEWS

The Seamy Side of Chicago

By Vera Williams
Southland Magazine Book Editor

BILL DOHERTY, one of the famed six Doherty brothers who in the 1940s and early 1950s covered crime news in Chicago, now is a Long Beach public relations man, living at 3420 Kaylor Ave.

In his spare time he has written a hair-raising autobiography, "CRIME REPORTER" (Exposition-Banner, $5), detailing his adventures and a long look at the seamy side of Chicago, than which nothing apparently is seamier.

All top-flight newspapermen, the Doherty brothers—Frank, Eddie, Martin, Jim, Tom and Bill—pulled no punches in the struggle for newspaper scoops, by-lines and headlines. Probably they were the only six brothers in the world who were crime reporters at the same time in the same city. Their roots were deep in law enforcement because their father was a Chicago police officer for 46 years.

Bill Doherty uncovered a witness who identified a mad killer who kidnaped a six-year-old girl, hacked her body into pieces and threw the pieces into different sewers.

He slugged it out with a hoodlum who threatened to wipe out Bill and his family.

One murder solution brought Doherty the Pall Mall Big Story Award. Another, "The Card Party Murder Case," related in his autobiography, was dramatized on television and radio.

HOW ABOUT a religion editor with a flair for Western history?

Dan L. Thrapp, religion editor for the Los Angeles Times, is the author of a carefully researched, intensely interesting biography of a renowned Arizona frontiersman, "AL SIEBER, Chief of Scouts" (University of Oklahoma Press, $6.95.)

Gen. George Crook planned and organized the Apache campaign in Arizona. Gen. Nelson A. Miles took credit for it—but Thrapp asserts that the man who really won it was Chief of Scouts Al Sieber.

How else, he asks, can one account for the fact that when Al was present, the army won, but when he was not, it lost?

Crook's philosophy of Apache warfare was to trap Indians with Indians. From the first, Al and his Tonto Apache scouts met with success, and when the long chase ended, deep in Mexico, it was Sieber and the Tontos who harassed the warriors into surrender with their relentless tracking.

Thrapp unearthed hitherto unknown and unpublished material, including several eyewitness accounts, to write the book.

"AHEAD OF us lay a great new land—"

Like latter-day Swiss Family Robinsons, the Short family cast their fortunes ashore on a lonely Alaskan island just after World War II. "THE CHEECHAKOES" (Random House, $4.95) is the remarkable story of a remarkable family narrated by Wayne Short, who shared with his parents and two younger brothers the unique experience of pioneer life in the 20th Century. They were "cheechakoes," Indian for greenhorns; they trapped, stalked deer, shot a charging brown bear with a .25-20, worked on an Alaskan mail boat in the dead of winter, and went to town once a year.

WINNIE MAE, Yankee Doodle, Lady Southern Cross, Miss Liberty . . . Wilkins, Earhart, Post, the Linderghs . . . Vega, Air Express, Explorer, Dirius, Altair, Orion.

The names conjure up headlines of the 1920s and 1930s.

The story of continents and oceans spanned. Polar regions explored, records set, broken and reset, all in single-engine airplanes bearing the winged-star insignia of Lockheed is told in "REVOLUTION IN THE SKY: Those Fabulous Lockheeds, The Pilots Who Flew Them" by Richard Sanders Allen (Stephen Greene Press, $9.95.)

The expert will be interested in the three-view drawings, specifications and performances.

The reader—aviation buff or no—will be caught up in the suspenseful account of Jimmie Mattern's solo junket around the world, "Hardluck Harold" Bromley's three tries to fly to Tokyo, swashbuckling Roscoe Turner and his "copilot" Gilmore the Lion, Jimmy Doolittle, Ruth Nichols and the rest.

"THE LITTLE BOOK OF BELLS" by Eric Hatch, with sketches by Eric Sloane (Duell, Sloan and Pearce, $3.50) traces the story of bells through the ages, from the ancient Crotal, ancestor of modern sleigh bells, to the electronic carillon. It includes a little history, information about the nature and manufacture of bells, and legends.

The reader learns about the largest bell in the world, the great Tsar Kolokol of Moscow, which never rang; the Bell of Port Royal, which now tolls under the sea; the Clog-an-eadhach, an ancient bell that may have been St. Patrick's "secret weapon"; the 20½-ton Bourdon Bell of Riverside Church, largest tuned bell in the world, and our own Liberty Bell.

A Chip Off the Old Block

"If you can describe it, I can make it," says Bill Kirst, a third generation wood turner, shown here checking out a lathe job in his well-equipped Long Beach shop.

IN THIS push button age of mechanization and mass production, wood turning is almost a lost art. But Bill Kirst, a rugged individualist who refuses to succumb to the forces of modern trends, is successfully practicing the ancient craft in his shop at 1921 Redondo Ave., Long Beach.

He is a third generation wood turner who plies his trade just as his father and grandfather did before him and refers to himself lightly as a "chip off the old block."

In the late 1800s, wood turners were as plentiful as garage mechanics are today. But gradually, modern methods reduced the demand for this type of work and Bill finds himself at the end of a diminishing line.

EVERYTHING is custom made at Bill's shop. "If you can describe it, I can make it," he claims with obvious pride. Anything can be ordered from a hitching post to a wassail bowl.

A year or so ago a Lake-wood woman brought him a picture of her parental home in Maine. She wanted a picket fence exactly like the one her grandfather had made 75 years ago. Bill drafted a pattern and in no time at all she had her fence. This is the kind of job he delights in because it gives him variety.

While most of his contemporaries are doing the same job over and over, such as in cabinet making, Bill is happier to be working creatively with some new and different. Yesterday he may have had an order for a turning to replace a broken leg on a Duncan Phyfe table or a new rung for a Chippendale chair; today he might be turning out moldings and tomorrow he may be working on a modern room divider.

"AS A CRAFT," Bill says, "wood turning is a creative release for an artistic bent. It's a medium of expressing one's own personality in an individual way and each new job is a challenge."

For centuries, man has made things out of wood but the invention of the lathe has been responsible for more beautiful work than was possible with only hand tools. It is difficult to say when the first lathe was invented but articles of furniture found in ancient Egypt show that it was in use as early as 400 B. C.

Although it has been greatly improved over the years, it hasn't changed much in the last century. Bill turns out most of his work on a 16-inch wood lathe he bought from W. J. Burgin who ran the first woodworking shop in Long Beach — it is more than 100 years old and still in excellent working order.

BESIDES the lathe, he has many other items in his shop that date back to the 1800s. One piece in his collection is an archway decoration consisting of 180 separate wood turnings assembled into an intricate design. It illustrates the creativity and patience that are needed to turn out a good piece of work.

Bill is enthusiastic about the way wood turning is being taught in the schools today. "I've seen some excellent samples of work being done by students with only one or two semesters of instruction," he says. But he is quick to remind that it takes many years to become proficient in all departments of the wood- (Continued on Page 26)

"Also, I have found it to be an excellent plan to plant a fresh full grown carrot with the tops intact, next to each dahlia bulb. If there are any wireworms in the area, the carrots will attract them before the bulbs do and will embed themselves in the carrots. Simply pull up the carrots every few days, remove and destroy the wireworms, and replant the carrots in the same spots. This action results in ridding your garden of wireworms cheaply and effectively and spares your dahlia bulbs."

Care of cymbidium orchids after the blooming season will be discussed by Paul Gripp, general manager of Santa Barbara Orchid Estate, at a meeting of South Coast Orchid Society at 8 p.m. Monday in Silverado Park clubhouse, 31st Street and Santa Fe Avenue. The public is invited.

at 3736 Falcon Ave. A garden tour will follow the breakfast and Joe Littlefield, garden writer and consultant, will be master of ceremonies.

"Readying Roses for Hot Weather" will be the topic of Joe Littlefield, garden authority, at a meeting of Orange County Rose Society at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at Sun Garden School, Trask and Newland Streets, Garden Grove. He will also answer questions on rose culture. The public is invited.

Father's Day will be observed by members of the Fuchsia Society with a pancake breakfast, to be served from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. today

Fuchsias 'On Stage' in July

FUCHSIA fanciers will have their heyday July 11 and 12 when the 10th annual Fuchsia and Shade Plant Show of the California National Fuchsia Society will be presented in Long Beach Municipal Auditorium. Amateur and professional exhibitors will compete and approximately 27 trophies and more than 60 blue ribbons will be at stake, along with a Sweepstakes trophy for the best display among branches of the society.

Garden clubs, other than Fuchsia Society units, and individuals displaying companion shade plants such as begonias, ferns, African violets, gloxinias, bromelads and orchids, will be eligible for awards.

Blooms of a wide variety of fuchsias will be displayed, each named and described, and source of supply identified. An educational booth will provide data on fuchsia and shade plant culture, with qualified personnel on hand to answer questions.

Webster Willeford of Downey is show chairman and Miss Cheryl Creel of Long Beach is "Fuchsia Queen of 1964," and her princesses are Joann Deden, Paramount, and Susan Harper, Westchester. They will be crowned officially at the Saturday show by Sandra Scarioffini of Paramount, last year's show queen, and with Joe Littlefield of Pasadena, garden writer and consultant, as master of ceremonies.

Tips on Gardening

Garden tips for the week . . . You can still set out new hydrangeas if you keep them in shady areas. Remember to water them often.

Sweet fragrances can greet you in your garden during those summer evenings if you plant Star Jasmine, bouvardia and osmanthus now.

Stake and tie tomato plants now to avoid the unkept look of sprawling branches.

For your vacation checklist include a list of specific instructions for your garden care while you're away. This will save time and effort. When you return your garden and lawn will be just as you want it.

Hurry and plant annuals for dashes of color in fall and winter. Check your local C.A.N. nursery for a complete selection.

Scale, aphids and ants are usually found on trees and shrubs in the same area. The reason for this is the ants' dependence upon other insects for some of its food supply. Ants are very attentive to any insect which will respond to care such as is given to these two insects.

Of course there are many other ways in which scale and aphids move from place to place but ants are responsible for the greatest migration. Tender foliage is a constant quest for aphids. The ants, being good farmers, are conscious of this need for greener pasture for both aphids and scale so they return the favor of obtaining from them the excretion that their own young need by moving the young aphids and scale constantly.

Ridding the area of ants is probably the easiest step in keeping the aphid and scale population down. This can be done with 6 per cent chlordane dust scattered at the base of trees or shrubs and in areas where branches of the plant are apt to touch against any object that would serve as a ladder for the ants.

The next step is to dislodge the aphids and scale and to destroy them both at the same time. This can be done with safety by using a super spray containing an oil emulsion combined with nicotine alkaloid

MIRRORS reflecting beauty and elegance... Luxurious carpeting and comfortable booths... Immaculate goblets and shining silverware... Candles burning calmly within holders designed like Grecian urns...

Those are just a few of the effects which make the main dining room of the Americana restaurant, Bellflower Boulevard and Carson Street, one of the most strikingly handsome places in Long Beach. Hosts Mike Comminos and Chris Foltin, who lavished time and money on the design and decoration of the room, are now reaping the rewards of their planning. Each day the Americana attracts new patrons who discover with delight that beautiful surroundings enhance the flavors and joys of fine food.

Many are astonished when they also discover that the Americana does not charge luxurious prices for its luxury. Numerous fine dinner entrees, prepared with painstaking attention to detail, are priced at $2.95, including a 10-ounce New York cut steak au roquefort with mushroom buttons; a 10-ounce top sirloin noted for its juicy flavor; roast prime ribs of beef sliced medium pink, well done or rare; and beef en brochette broiled with bacon and mushrooms and accompanied by scrumptious wine gravy. Also featured are special weekly entrees for $2.50, plus gourmet treasures like the lobster tail-top sirloin steak combination, $3.95. All are served with chilled relishes, glamorous tossed salad, baked potato, fresh cheese toast and beverage.

Sunday dinners are served from noon to 11 p.m. The Americana also has a coffee shop and cocktail lounge.

PAIN is the test that BAYER® meets best

What's more, here are some facts on how Bayer Aspirin meets the test of competition.

Reporting on a government-financed study of five leading pain relievers, an article in The Journal of The American Medical Association showed:

For speed and strength of relief, Bayer Aspirin was unsurpassed by any product tested, including the higher-priced product that claims to be 50% stronger.

Also, Bayer Aspirin was as gentle to the stomach as any product tested, including the higher-priced buffered product.

Furthermore, the two higher-priced combination-of-ingredients products tested upset the stomach considerably more often.

For fast relief from headaches, muscular pains, or the pains and fever of a cold, get Bayer Aspirin, the world's favorite brand of pain reliever.

PARADE'S SPECIAL

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

PRISON FACT. According to Chaplain George McKinney of Sing Sing prison in Ossining, N.Y., 3 out of every 10 felons are addicts or have some connection with narcotics. The chaplain has urged the death penalty for narcotics peddlers.

SWITCH. According to Soviet Russia, Communist China today is a police state which practices mass repression of its people. Izvestia, the Soviet newspaper, declares that life in China is similar to the worst aspects of Soviet life under Stalin.

LIKE FATHER, LIKE SON. The Commerce Department reports that 23% of the men in the U.S. between the ages of 25 and 64 are engaged in the same occupation as their fathers. Among professional and technical workers, 41% follow in their father's footsteps. But among clerical workers, salesmen and service employees, only 15% follow the paternal leader.

SUCCESSFUL MARRIAGE. Which are the most enduring marriages in the nation? A survey of 1,000 marriages reveals that more than 95% of the young Americans who married in their collegiate years are still married, compared to the national average of 75%. Reason: "There are no social pressures on married college students. They are not expected to buy new cars, smart clothes, better furniture to keep up with the Joneses, and in these first unpressured years they can really get to know and understand each other in a relaxed and carefree atmosphere."

SLEEPING MACHINE. The French have invented a device which uses a rhythmic yoga technique to induce natural sleep. The work of Robert Lasserre, a writer, the mechanism consists of a small TV-like set called a Somnidor. It's placed on a table seven feet from the subject. Switched on, it generates a cold, pale blue light on the screen. The light expands and contracts while the patient adjusts his breathing to the light rhythm. Six or seven breaths, and the subject slows down. Ten more and he's fast asleep. Lasserre plans to market the Somnidor in America later this year.

WALKOUTS. English motion picture theater chains have decided that the tradition of playing the national anthem, "God Save the Queen," at the end of each performance has outlived its usefulness. "About 50% of the audience escapes before the music starts," one theater executive explained, "so we've decided to discontinue the practice."

HIGH PRICES. If you're going to Japan this summer, be warned: prices there are high. A cup of coffee costs 25¢, a pack of American cigarettes 40¢, hotel rooms are 10% higher than the American average, a good night club dinner for two somewhere between $25 and $50.

TV RIGHTS. The TV networks are imitating the motion picture industry in buying up TV rights prior to publication of several books. Object is to get first crack at potential best-sellers.

Because of volume of mail received, PARADE regrets it cannot answer queries about this column.

Crown Chiffon facial tissue would be worth the price

But look how we've dressed it up!

See? We've clothed new Crown Chiffon facial tissue in flowers. Our box isn't a box any more; it's a beautiful bouquet. In fact, it's five bouquets. Take your pick of pink, lilac or aqua "mums," white or yellow daisies. Try them all. Here and there. Match them with bedroom, dressing room, kitchen and bathroom as you'd match a vase of flowers. And know something? These flowers never wilt.

HOLLYWOOD.

For the average young actress the toughest job in show business is breaking in.

To find an opportunity to demonstrate her talent the aspiring hopeful needs persistence, doggedness, resolution. More often than not her job-seeking generates depression, disappointment, discouragement. She loses faith in men, because agents and casting directors are almost always males, and frequently she loses her dignity, her enthusiasm and, if desperation drives her to capitalize on her charms, she loses even more.

Supposedly this experience builds strength of character and self-reliance in a young woman. Years later, if the trauma accompanying the experience has not been too great, she looks back on her first job-finding days with a feeling of pride and a deep self-satisfaction that she made it on her own.

In Hollywood these days there is a colony of young actors and actresses that will never share this experience. It consists of the sons and daughters of motion picture and TV stars who have decided to follow in the parental footsteps.

Think of any film or TV star, age 40 or over—Frank Sinatra, Glenn Ford, Bob Mitchum, John Wayne, Dean Martin, Loretta Young, Joan Crawford, Danny Thomas, Jennifer Jones, Maureen O'Hara, Henry Fonda, John Mills, Edmond O'Brien, Lloyd Bridges, Robert Montgomery, Martha Raye, the list goes on and on—each of these stars has at least one child working in show business, and whether they like it or not, trading on the family name.

Latest of the second generation to enter this favored group is Linda Hope, 23, willowy and tall (5-feet-8), blonde and hazel-eyed, beautiful and intelligent daughter of comedian Bob Hope.

In contrast to other members of the burn-with-a-golden-spoon colony, Linda readily admits that having a famous parent is a tremendous help in any profession or industry, but even more so in show business, where the competition is so severe.

"Let's face it," she declares candidly. "Unless you're a genius with a recognized skill, it's the contacts you know who really put you in a position to show what you can do."

"A few weeks ago I made my debut as a TV actress in one of my father's Chrysler specials, a comedy called School for Bachelors. Know how I got the job?"

"One evening I was sitting in the living room with Dad's secretary, Jan King. Jan was looking over Dad's schedule of future appointments. I saw that she had listed School for Bachelors to be shot at Revue Studios, which is only a few miles from our house."

"Do you think, Jan," I asked her, "I could get a part in that show?" Jan smiled and said, "There's someone around here who might put in a word for you."

Linda Hope THE BEST OF HOLLYWOOD'S YOUNGER GENERATION by Lloyd Shearer

"Just then," Linda continues, "Dad walked in, and I asked him right off if I could have a part. He told me to study the script carefully and to pick out something I thought I could play, and he would consider it. That's how I got the job. It wasn't much. I just had two pages of dialogue. But it was a job, and it gave me confidence and experience."

CHALLENGING PART

"I played a giddy pin-up girl, very effervescent and vivacious. I'm not that way myself, so the part was a challenge, and I was lucky to have someone like Agnes Moorehead, with whom I'm studying, to help me. I think I did passably well. Certainly I was no disgrace or disappointment to my father."

"If my name wasn't Linda Hope, if my dad was John Smith, I realize I would never have gotten that job so easily and so quickly. But still I can't go through life always being on the defensive just because Bob Hope happens to be my father."

The oldest of Hope's four adopted children, Linda is a graduate of St. Louis University, an English major who recently decided that she wanted to become a director. Last summer she visited three of Europe's top film men, Federico Fellini in Italy, Ingmar Bergman in Sweden, Tony Richardson in England, and observed their directorial techniques. A bright, perceptive, studious girl, she learns quickly, but her dad has warned her there's no easy road to success, no substitute for long, arduous apprenticeship.

"Every time we discuss my career," Linda reveals, "Dad makes a speech. He doesn't mind my going into show business, not one bit. But he wants me to know, all of his children to know, that just because we have his name, we can't achieve anything worth-while without a lot of hard work. He always explains how tough it was for him, how he slaved to get where he is. He constantly repeats that when you expect praise and financial gain from the public, you have to be prepared to repay the public with dedication and talent."

"Well, I've done summer stock at Ogunquit, Me. I'm studying acting with Agnes Moorehead. I'm taking guitar lessons and fencing. I've had a good background in English and drama. For awhile I studied clinical psychology, so I know a little something about people. Next year I plan to enroll at UCLA and take courses in film-making. I'm honestly trying to prepare myself to become a good actress and then through understanding and experience in the medium, a good director. I don't want people to hire me because I'm Bob Hope's daughter."

I don't want that to be my stock in trade. Maybe that's how I got my start. But I'm not going to end up that way. I'm going to contribute something in my own right or leave the business."

How come a girl like Linda Hope, well-bred, gentle, physically and mentally attractive, is considering a career at this point instead of marriage? Or is all of her career talk a façade, a stopgap until the right man appears?

A friend who knows her well says that as regards finding a husband, Linda has the special problem of the very rich. "Bob Hope," the friend explains, "is one of the world's wealthiest men. In addition to radio and TV stations, half a dozen different companies, oil wells and whatnot, he's listed among the largest landholders in California; he's worth millions in real estate."

"As a boy in Cleveland, he was raised in unbelievable poverty. Like many such self-made men, he vowed his children would have the advantages he lacked."

"When Bob and his wife Dolores adopted Linda and Tony from The Cradle in Chicago," the friend goes on, "and later Nora and Kelly, they brought them home to one of the most lavish estates in North Hollywood."

"The Bob Hope home is a showplace—swimming pool, beautiful gardens, pitch and putt golf course, hired help of every kind. Linda was raised in the lap of luxury, and it's a tribute to her parents that she isn't spoiled."

"Dolores Hope is a very devout Catholic. She sent Linda to parochial schools, Immaculate Heart and Mt. St. Mary's, and fortunately at those schools the Sisters make the students toe the line."

"Still, Linda is faced with the situation of finding a husband in her own league, not marrying beneath her station, and in Hollywood, that's not easy."

IDEAS ABOUT HUSBANDS

Briefed with this information, I asked Linda if she dated frequently and what sort of man she would like to marry. "Maybe," I suggested, "a comedian or an actor like your dad?"

"No," she answered quickly. "Actors are not for me. I think they're very nice on the screen but I would never marry one. I've gone out with several, and while they make interesting dates, I don't think they make very dependable husbands."

"Right now I'm sort of interested in doctors. I'd like to marry a man who is dedicated to whatever he does, someone in whose work I can share and in whose achievement I can take pride."

"At one time I thought seriously of going to medical school and becoming a doctor, but somehow I wound up majoring in English."

"When I got out of school a few years ago, I was looking for something to do. What can an English major do? Teach English. So I taught at Our Lady Queen of Angels in downtown Los Angeles."

Angeles, but later I decided that what I really wanted was to become an actress and then a director, because as a director I think I could combine marriage and career, while an actress finds that very difficult. When you're a director and you're off the job, your life is private. There are no public demands. You can spend time with your family, and ideally that's what I'd like to do."

I asked Linda if coming from her sort of background and being a child of creature comforts, she could possibly marry some struggling young man who was earning three or four hundred dollars a month or even less. "Would you buy your clothes at Ohrbach's?" I asked.

A POSITIVE REPLY

"Yes, I would," she said flatly. "I buy a lot of my clothes there now. I think that if you really love someone, it's possible to do anything. I wouldn't like to marry someone who had no promise or someone I or my dad had to support, but I think it's exciting to build something with the man you love rather than to start out with something handed to you or already established."

"As for this house," Linda added, "and these grounds—we do have a swimming pool and a few golf holes, and maybe you won't believe this, but you know my dad—the plain truth is that we don't live luxuriously. We live simply and informally."

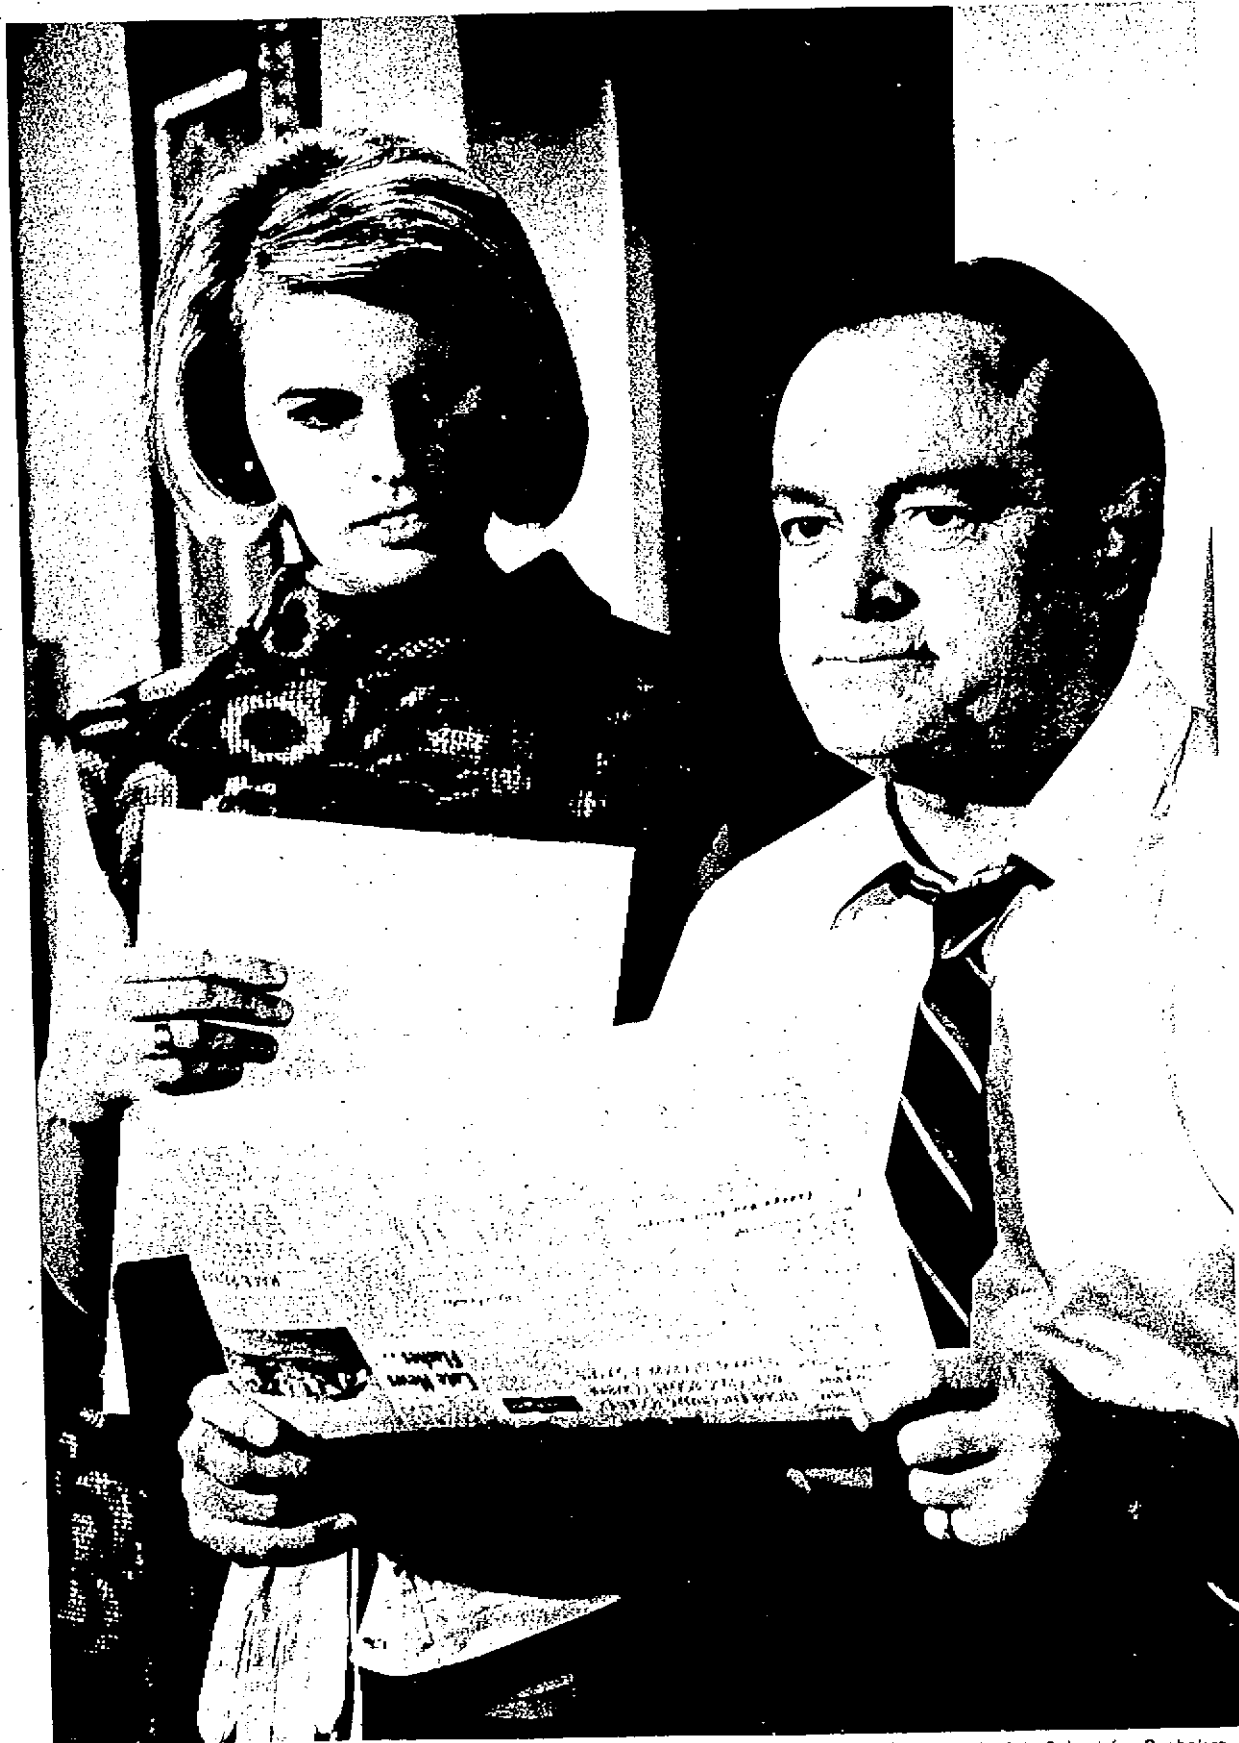

"When I went to school I lived in a dormitory with I don't know how many other girls. I didn't have my own room or bathroom. It wasn't luxury living by any means. I didn't have a car. When I had laundry to do, I walked down the street with the bundle in my arms just like everybody else. I got along fine and had some very happy years in St. Louis. Here, I have to make my own bed and help around the house. I still teach school one day a week. I don't pal around with the movie colony. The only good friend I have in the business is an actress in New York, Sandra Church."

"I'm definitely not spoiled. Let some young doctor come along who wants to take me away from all this, and if I fall in love with him—I'm going."

Many of the stars' offspring now working in show business and—I will name no names—are foul-ups who have no skills, drop-outs who have no talent, singers who cannot sing, youngsters lucky enough to have been born to famous and in many cases self-centered and irresponsible parents.

Linda Hope is not one of these. A member of Hollywood's second generation, refined and religious, careful in her choice of associates, civic-minded and virtuous, educated and still learning, fun-loving but quiet, she does credit to her community, her parents, her church.

She is a living refutation to the widely held premise that Hollywood and its stars produce no normal children.

Kissing colleagues at Portugal college: she gets kiss, he gets cut in cape.

Extra Credits for Kissing

by ROSALIND MASSOW

COIMBRA, PORTUGAL.
If college boys at Coimbra University, one of Europe's oldest colleges, seem to be more tattered than university men elsewhere in the world, it's not poverty but romance which makes them look that way.

Students at the 700-year-old Portuguese university here proudly wear black capes that are, by tradition, ragged at the hem. Why the enthusiasm? It's simple—each ragged edge represents a kiss.

When a Coimbra man meets a girl and gets to know her well enough to kiss her, she is entitled to a souvenir of their embrace—a small piece of material torn from the hem of her boy friend's cape.

Nobody knows the origin of this quaint college custom, but judging from the tattered appearance of 99 per cent of the male college population, one wonders when students have time for class.

One fellow, in the third year of his five-year course in science, proudly admits that he is working on his second cape.

Another young man of 25, a law student, wears a cape handed down by his more restrained father. "I have made more cuts in my cape than my father did when he went to school," boasts this lawyer-to-be.

The black cape, formal frock coat with satin lapels and black trousers, required uniform of Coimbra University men, is a modification of the clerical garb of the 13th century. And Coimbra undergraduates and alumni are very sentimental about their capes, the appearance of which can determine the difference between great popularity and dismal social failure.

One brand-new freshman, quickly recognizing the possibilities of his cape, secretly ripped a few pieces off the hem of his cloak without really being entitled to do so.

"Sometimes girls like a boy who has a lot of cuts in his cape," he says defensively. "I'm interested in a girl who wants that kind of boy."

Once out of school it's a different story. A former Coimbra student, now a representative for Alitalia Airlines in Lisbon, took a group of American visitors to this university city recently and bragged about his student days. "Do you still have your cape?" one of the American women asked.

"Of course not," the young man said, a little shocked. "Do you think I'd want my wife to see how many girls I kissed before I married her?"

ON THE SERIOUS SIDE

But believe it or not, kissing is not the only campus activity at Coimbra. The university has a tough educational curriculum. The 6,000 men and women students, many of them on scholarship, pursue five-year courses in the schools of law, letters, science, mathematics and pharmacology. The school of medicine is a seven-year course.

Although standards here are as high as those of any university in the United States, the tuition is unbelievably low. Fees for a general college course are about $40 a year; medical school is $50 a year.

Tradition is strong among Coimbra men. Women students have infiltrated the campus (one-third of the University's enrollment is made up of coeds), but the men aren't a bit nervous about their age-old customs.

Girls wear black capes, too, but they are all intact. No Latin lady would ever kiss and tell:

BONERS & BLUNDERS

The Politician's Nightmare

by JACK HARRISON POLLACK

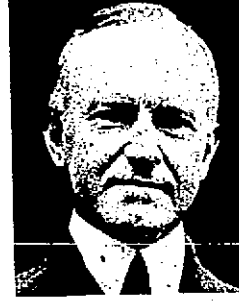

Robert A. Taft preferred handshakes to autographs.

Estes Kefauver found it hard to remember faces.

Harry Truman called Communist scare "red herring."

Calvin Coolidge kept mum, avoided making boners.

Now that the Presidential sweepstakes are on, every White House starter dreads making a faux pas that may doom him to "also-ran."

These campaign blunders include temper explosions, foot-in-mouth slips, goofing on names of towns and politicians, stepping on regional toes and offending influential groups of voters. They range from harmless boo-boos which voters forgive and forget to disastrous bloopers which can undo thousands of handshakes.

Campaign bobbles generally occur because candidates are weary, worried or under strain.

Two late would-be Presidents bungled badly in the 1956 primaries.

Sen. Robert A. Taft refused to sign a 10-year-old New Hampshire girl's autograph book, explaining to her with a candor which she could scarcely appreciate: "I can shake three hands in the time that it takes me to sign your book."

During a Midwest primary Sen. Estes Kefauver once patted a boy on the head and inquired about his father.

"My father's dead," the lad replied.

Later that day, in another part of town, Kefauver, not recognizing him, greeted the same boy, again asking, "How's your father?"

"He's still dead," was the reply.

TRUMAN GOOFS

The plain-talking Harry Truman admits, "When I goof, I really goof." Truman made numerous boners, even during his amazing 1948 "Whistle-Stop" campaign. In Eugene, Ore., he ad-libbed on June 11: "I like Good Old Joe [Stalin]. He's a decent fellow but a prisoner of the Politburo." On August 5 in Washington, he scoffed at Communists-in-government investigations as a "red herring." Convinced that this shooting-from-the-hip cost the Democrats anti-Communist votes, Republicans gleefully wisecracked, "To err is Truman."

Even four-time winner Franklin D. Roosevelt occasionally blundered. Before receiving the 1932 Democratic nomination, at a White Sulphur Springs, Ga., dinner, he convivially complained about "that great sink of iniquity called New York." FDR's eldest son, California Rep. James Roosevelt, told me, "In later years, Father mentioned this incident as a 'good example of the trouble you could get into by opening your mouth without opening your brain.'"

COOLIDGE PLAYS IT COOL

Candidates used to be kept from making boners by keeping mum. During the drab 1924 campaign, President Calvin Coolidge was asked, "Have you any statement on the campaign?"

"No," replied Coolidge.

"Can you tell us something about the world situation?"

"No."

"Any information about Prohibition?"

"No."

As disappointed reporters sauntered out, Silent Cal cautioned, "Now remember—don't quote me."

Al Smith, twice governor of New York, lost the Presidency in 1928 partly because of a big-city boner. The Happy Warrior, who was proud that he rose "from the sidewalks of New York," boasted in his campaign, "I never left the main line of the New York Central." But farmers throughout the U.S., resenting this snub, voted against him.

Candidates often try to capitalize on the boners of their supporters. One of the earliest on record was when William Jennings Bryan, three-time Democratic nominee for President, arrived in a rural Midwest town in 1908 to speak before a huge waiting throng. However, the arrangements committee had neglected to provide him a platform. Climbing on a near-by manure-spreader, he began,

"Ladies and gentlemen, this is the first time I have ever spoken from a Republican platform!"

And last but not least is a boner made by the late President Kennedy in a speech at an all-Democratic rally in West Virginia in 1962. Democrat Cleveland Bailey and Republican Arch A. Moore, Jr., were fighting over the First District Congressional seat, and Kennedy, wishing to endorse his party's candidate, came to the place in his text calling for his endorsement of Bailey and the other four Democratic members of the West Virginia delegation. He said, "I am confident that Congressman Cleveland Bailey, with whom I served in the House of Representatives a decade ago, and your other congressmen, Ken Hechler, Mrs. Kee, Congressman..." Here he apparently became confused and continued, "Congressman Moore, stand up!" There was a dull silence. Kennedy repeated, "Stand up, Congressman Moore." Moore, of course, wasn't there. But red-faced Democrat Bailey, who subsequently lost the election, was.

HOW TO SAVE FACE

Today, historians claim that to change votes, a boner must be made by the Presidential candidate himself—not by an aide—and to be decisive, it must come late in the campaign.

Franklin L. Burdette, professor and director of governmental research at the University of Maryland, sums up: "A Presidential candidate who makes a first-class blunder should strive to get the public laughing with, not at, him. He should make his meaning clear good-humoredly before opponents magnify his mistake."

Nevertheless, the campaign managers of many a defeated candidate sigh, "He should of stood in bed." Not only ball games, but the highest prize in the land has been lost by costly fumbles.

Fight BIRTH DEFECTS THROUGH THE MARCH OF DIMES!

A friend of the Greek royal family offers an intimate close-up of Europe's jaunty new King

by HELEN ZOTOS

ATHENS.

It's been a busy year for European royalty. But there's been no one busier than Greece's young King Constantine, 24, who eagerly awaits his wedding, on September 18, to Denmark's Princess Anne-Marie, 17, future Queen of Greece.

King Constantine is the world's youngest reigning sovereign. A brown-haired boy with sparkling blue eyes like his mother's, he was catapulted to the throne of the Hellenes by his father's sudden death in March. But he is no stranger to his people. His lanky 6-foot-2 figure is known everywhere in the countryside, and he is immensely popular. Although he doesn't have a drop of Greek blood, being directly descended from Queen Victoria, Kaiser Wilhelm and Denmark's Prince William (who 100 years ago founded the modern Greek dynasty and served as its first king), he was born in Athens, reared as a Greek and speaks Greek fluently.

I was in Greece as correspondent during the grim days of the Communist war when King Paul and Queen Frederika ascended to the throne and risked their lives traveling through the guerrilla-infested mountains to cheer the troops and bring comfort to villagers. It was the Queen herself who introduced me, in the late spring of 1947, to Constantine.

THE OUTDOOR LIFE

At 6 going on 7, Tino was a tow-headed youngster who preferred romping in the woods at Tatoi, the family's modest country home north of Athens, to most other pursuits—except perhaps fishing with the Queen. He was a robust child, fond of animals, sports and outdoor life, like both of his parents; and he didn't have much use for girls who couldn't climb trees, ride horses or beat him in bicycle races.

His sisters, the princesses Sophia and Irene, kept up with his rough-and-tumble ways. They have always been his closest friends and, for the greater part of his young life, were his sole female companions. Tino told me they offered strong competition at his games "when they wanted to," but more often than not they liked to "play with dolls and dress up as nurses."

When Tino was a boy, in the middle of a war, there was no time for politicking—or idle gossip about the monarchy. Greece was busy and united, and the royal couple was adored universally and unconditionally. Frederika was admired as a brave queen, but especially as a mother. She was warmhearted and devoted and brought up the children simply and democratically, without privilege or pampering, in an atmosphere of books, music, sports and good humor. Sometimes American playmates—the sons and daughters of embassy personnel or of Army officers stationed in Greece—would come in for afternoon games, and the Queen would join them in hide-and-seek or whip up hamburgers and cokes in the kitchen. Her children adored her, and the Greeks said of Paul and Frederika that they were the nation's happiest married couple.

But growing up to be King wasn't always easy. Tino was trained for the job from the start. When I first met him, he was still scampering through the woods, but he already had his own private living quarters and spent most of his time with tutors mastering English, German and Greek. The next year he was sent away from home to a new boarding school founded by his tutor, at royal behest, for boys from all social levels, where he shared dormitory life, competed at sports and learned the virtues of self-reliance and responsibility. At 15, his military training began.

Long before he became a general, which is the rank, as King, he now holds, Tino became acquainted with the wartime suffering of the Greeks. The Queen told me about the time when his life was even in peril.

"When the Germans invaded Greece and we fled to the island of Crete," Frederika recalls, "Tino was just 9 months old. I had the most terrifying experience of my life sitting in a ditch with him and Sophia during the first phase of the battle for Crete. The Germans, believing that King George was with us, sent 15 planes in 30 sorties to bomb and even machine-gun us out."

"Two thoughts went through my head at that time. If they hit, I won't feel it, so why worry? If they miss, I'll enjoy telling the story."

'THE GOOD KING'

Paul summed up Tino's destiny when the boy reached his majority in June 1958, proclaiming to him that "from today you become a fellow worker of mine." Paul and Tino were deeply attached to one another, and strikingly alike. Paul will go down in history as "the good King," and Constantine has so many of his father's attributes, he can hardly avoid becoming a "good King" himself. In recent years, Paul took Tino more and more into his confidence, sending him into the provinces and abroad, giving him a dominant part in official ceremonies and inviting him to attend his most important audiences. When war seemed threateningly near in Cyprus, during his father's illness, Tino stayed up all night conferring with parliamentary leaders. Greek politicians find him "mature, intelligent and knowledgeable." The peasants say he's "democratic, friendly and casual," and his intimates, the young of Athens, think of him as "charitable, deeply devout and fun-loving."

Like most young men who are not kings, Tino loves sports, theater, jazz, fast cars and pranks. He is an excellent mimic and has often regaled his sisters with impersonations of visiting VIPs. His black Mercedes convertible is a familiar sight along Greece's country roads—and on the island of Corfu, the family's favorite vacation spot—where Tino drives, as Greeks say, "like the wind." He also has a sense of humor.

When Jackie Kennedy was visiting in Greece last summer, Tino gave her a ride she'll never forget. According to the story, Tino and Irene "crashed" a party for Jackie at the home of former Premier Constantine Karamanlis. Tino danced with America's First Lady, then "kidnaped" her, leaving her host dumbfounded. In his Mercedes in the warm summer night, Tino sped Jackie dizzily through the streets of Athens and down to the oceanside at New Phaleron. Jackie loved the sight-seeing, but Athenians aren't sure whether she had more thrills than chills from the ride offered by her well-intentioned captor. At the time, Tino was regent of Greece in the absence of his parents, who had gone to London against the Premier's wishes. The London trip caused a breach between Karamanlis and the Palace, so he deliberately did not invite Tino when Jackie came to town.

Because of his sports cars, high spirits

and dashing manner, Tino has sometimes been pegged a playboy. Greeks laugh at the idea, but gossips have matched him with a potpourri of Greek, Norwegian, Swedish and Swiss girls, and there is one preposterous tale circulating in Athens that his father, learning that the Prince was enamored of a beautiful Greek actress, summoned him and admonished, "You will have to make your choice either to be a king or an actor."

Tino has in fact had very little opportunity—or time—to cut capers with the opposite sex. A few years back, he even complained that a prince's life was not natural in this respect, and it may have been this remark that sent Frederika scurrying about looking over the princesses of Europe for a bride. Although Tino went abroad now and then, and was seen one night ogling scantily clad beauties at Paris' Folies Bergère, his social life at home has been limited to family functions or chaperoned visits with Europe's young royal set. He has never been inside an Athenian night club and at Carnival time cannot carry off a successful masquerade because his height makes him immediately detectable among Greeks.

One Greek girl did turn Tino's head a few years ago. Although the Palace denies knowledge of it, Tino met the lady, a famous stage and screen star by the name of Aliko Vouyouklaki, at the theater, which he was attending one evening with his sisters. The royal trio found the play engaging and the leading young actress so delightful that they went backstage to congratulate her. Several times after that, Tino and Aliko dined together on the outskirts of Athens. No eyebrows were raised, although the relationship obviously gave rise to the apocryphal story about the scolding, and there may have been more to the friendship than is commonly known. However, the relationship died a quick death when Aliko was overheard one day calling the Prince by his first name. Such breach of protocol got the lady in Dutch with the press, and the prince charming vanished.

In January 1963 Tino became engaged to Princess Anne-Marie of Denmark, a cousin whom he had met in 1957 in the gardens of Copenhagen's Amalienborg Castle when she was 11, and too young to notice him. The engagement was sudden and cemented old bonds that have existed between the two royal houses since the days of Prince William, around 1863. Most Greeks regard it as the triumphant result of Queen Frederika's matchmaking. The Queen was known to have had her heart set on marrying off all her children to royalty and, with only Irene's fate left to be determined, has done very well. But Tino denied the implication in what has been his most effective pronouncement on his private life so far. "Our engagement was sudden," he said, "not planned beforehand by our parents. It was the first time in my life that I took a decision without asking my father."

IDEAL CHOICE

However the romance came about, there can be no denying that they were head over heels for all to see at Princess Sophia's wedding in 1962. In many ways the two are very much alike, and Anne-Marie is an ideal choice for future Queen. The youngest daughter of King Frederik IX and Queen Ingrid, she is tall, brown-haired and gay. She has had a broad education, acts, sails and skis. She is also a skillful homemaker.

With a new queen on the throne, the question inevitably arises as to what Frederika's future role will be in the new household. Many Greeks have been asking themselves if she will have a strong influence on King Constantine.

No doubt Queen Frederika will continue, as Queen Mother, to work with some of her charitable institutions, but the Greeks feel, essentially, that there is no reason to believe that she will have any considerable say in the present King's life. King Constantine and Queen Anne-Marie will undoubtedly want to run their own show.

HOW THE LAW PROTECTS JOHNNY & YOU

by MARGO TUPPER

Know your child: If he's a bully and you know it, you'll be held responsible for the damage he does.

who brings suit against your child. Of course, as a practical matter, your neighbor sues in behalf of his child, and if your child loses, chances are you will pay the judgment. But the obligation is still a moral and not a legal one.

• Although in theory damage suits are between children, there are a number of ways in which parents can get involved. One is to give consent or encouragement to some childish act which results in damage.

INADEQUATE CONTROL

A second way in which a parent can get involved is when the parent knows the child has dangerous habits and fails to exercise adequate control. A Pennsylvania family who was well aware that their son was a vicious bully let him go without supervision to a near-by playground where he beat up a younger child and threw him down a bank, breaking his leg. The parents were held responsible.

The third way in which the parent may become liable involves what the lawyers call a master and servant relationship. That is, if you give orders to your child, and in carrying them out he negligently causes damages, you may be held responsible.

Still another way in which the parent may become responsible is through providing or making accessible dangerous instruments to children. The general common-sense rule, of course, is not to leave any dangerous instrument within reach of a child. Legally, parental responsibility will depend on the degree of care used in keeping such instruments out of the hands of children.

ATTRACTIVE NUISANCE

Another thorny area is the matter of child injuries resulting from an "attractive nuisance"—something on your property likely to arouse the interest of a child which is also a potential hazard—such as a swimming pool. Another example is a large wooden packing case with sharp nails protruding inside. If neighborhood children can reach this box they will try to climb into it and will be scratched by the nails. If you fail to take reasonable precautions to keep the children away—or at least do something about the nails—you may be found guilty of negligence.

The final point in this highlight survey of parents' legal responsibility has to do with the matter of contracts. Your child buys an expensive item on the installment plan. What is your responsibility if and when he misses on payments? The answer is: none. None, that is, unless you knew of and condoned the purchase or made a payment or two on it.

Many court decisions agree that anyone who enters into a contract with a legal infant (anyone under 21) does so at his own peril. It is a "voidable" contract and the infant can disaffirm it any time he wants to.

What can a parent do to protect himself and his children? Patrick J. Head, a Washington, D.C., attorney who has studied the parent-child relationship, says:

"Insurance is the answer. Anyone who has a family and owns a home should have a homeowners' or personal liability insurance policy. You buy only protection against extensive loss but also legal representation in case of a suit against you."

The typical homeowners' or personal liability insurance policy provides $25,000 coverage in case of injury to another if the insured is at fault, and costs in the moderate range of $15 to $25. Generally these policies will pay up to $250 for damages regardless of negligence and give protection to every member of the immediate family.

DO'S & DON'TS

In case of a sudden legal emergency involving your child, the important thing is not to panic. Discuss calmly such basic facts as names, time of day, place, events as observed. Don't get into a discussion of legal liability; don't engage in an emotional tirade; and above all, remember not to sign anything.

At the earliest opportunity, turn your problem over either to your lawyer or your insurance company's claims man. Then relax—and let the experts do your worrying for you.

BRINGING UP BABY,*
HINTS COLLECTED
BY MRS. DAN GERBER,
MOTHER OF FIVE

inside tips on outside doings

Whether your baby is a loll-about, a creep-about or a gadabout, summer is a wonderful season for small fry because they can be outdoors so much. Timely tips:

- Even though you think baby is safely tan by now, she (or he) shouldn't be exposed to direct sunlight for more than 30 minutes.
- Backyard or beach, don't let a toddler run too much in the heat. An overtired child tends to be fretful.

Summertime lip-smackers

No matter what the season, fruits are great favorites with babies. But somehow in summer they seem to be especially welcome. If they're Gerber Strained and Junior Fruits, that is. Gerber Fruits have unusual meal-appeal because they're flash-cooked in a matter of seconds to retain tempting, true-to-nature colors and flavors. What's more, flash-cooking in the absence of air preserves the utmost in precious vitamin values so important to your baby's nutrition.

Playpen pointers

(1) If you park baby's playpen outdoors, do pick a shaded, sheltered spot so sudden gusts won't chill baby if he perspires. (2) On most warm days baby will fare best with panties or sunsuit. On sizzlers your darling will be more comfy with a cotton shirt or lightweight dress.

Splash flash

A kiddie lawn pool is a delightful but inexpensive investment for an older tot. Fun for your bathing beauty, relaxing for you as you watch. (Good time to do sit-down chores.) Baby's bathtub toys, and a plastic cup for dipping and pouring, add immeasurably to the fun.

Dan Gerber on digestibility

"It should be reassuring to know that all Gerber Baby Foods are 'custom-cooked' according to their own requirements to insure ready digestibility and also to help preserve nutritive values. Different foods require different attention. Fruits, can be flash-cooked. Meat dinners, certain vegetables and other foods require slower treatment. Whatever the method, cooking time and temperature are controlled to bring out the best in each particular product."

SERVE DUCKLING

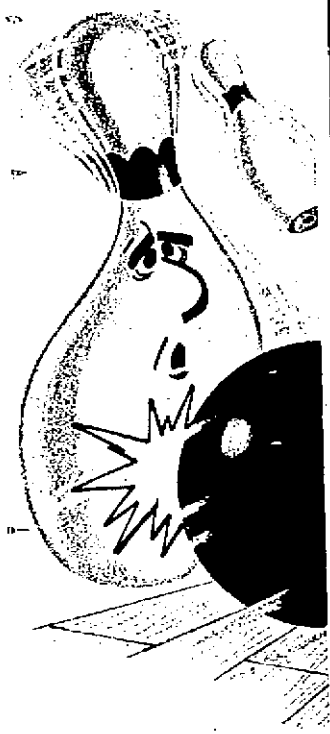

BY BETH MERRIMAN
PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Even in warm weather there's entertaining to be done, and sometimes elegance must be the keynote. Our duckling recipe is just the thing for special occasion dining. In deference to the hot weather ahead, we've planned the preparation so that ducks may be cooked over a single top stove unit. Neither the kitchen nor the cook will get overheated. Start dinner with watermelon balls in chilled ginger ale. Serve wild rice and asparagus with duck and add applesauce or whole berry cranberry sauce and tossed salad. Finish off your fete with cooling raspberry sundaes or lemon sherbet and lady fingers.

DUCKLING DE LUXE FROM PARADE'S TEST KITCHEN

2 ducklings (4 to 5 lb. each), quartered	1 teaspoon salt
¼ cup vegetable oil	Few grains pepper
1 medium onion, chopped	½ teaspoon oregano
1 garlic clove, crushed	⅓ cup dry sherry
	1 cup dairy sour cream

Simmer duckling livers in 2 cups water for 15 minutes. Drain; save broth. Chop livers; save. Brown ducklings slowly in vegetable oil until golden on all sides. Remove from pan. Pour off all but 2 tablespoons of oil. Brown onion and garlic in oil left in pan; add salt, pepper, oregano and broth from livers. Return duckling to pan; cover; simmer 1½ hours or until done. Remove duckling to warm platter; strain liquid in pan. Add sherry, sour cream and chopped livers to strained liquid. Heat to serving temperature, but do not boil. Serve with duckling and wild rice. Makes 8 servings.

you don't know how speedy relief can be!

When you have an upset stomach there's nothing quite like Alka-Seltzer.

Alka-Seltzer contains a soothing stomach alkalizer, ready to go to work instantly to soothe and settle upset stomach.

Headache, too? Alka-Seltzer provides the effective pain-reliever, sodium acetylsalicylate, in a completely dissolved solution. In the first ten minutes—when you really need it—the system quickly absorbs more of this Alka-Seltzer pain-reliever.

Take two Alka-Seltzer tablets before bed and wake up feeling better!

my favorite jokes

by Milton Berle

Dodger fan Billy Berle, adopted son of comedian Milton Berle and wife Ruth, has friendly chat with Dodger shortstop Maury Wills.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Milton Berle, born Milton Berlinger in New York City in 1908, is one of the great comedians of all time. Brash, boisterous and brazen, mainly to hide the insecurity which plagues him as it does most comics, Berle has starred in every medium of show business. A millionaire many times over, he still attributes much of his success to his mother, the late Sandra Berlinger, a one-time department store detective for Gimbels and Wanamaker's, whose loyalty to her son was fierce and obsessive and a show-business legend. Nowadays, Berle lives in Beverly Hills with his third wife, daughter Vicki and adopted son Billy, confines his appearances mainly to night clubs. Herewith some of his favorite reminiscences jokes:

My mother used to play cards almost every night backstage with Sophie Tucker. One night while they were playing two-handed poker for a 10¢ limit, each kept raising the other. Finally, my mother asked, "What have you got?"

Sophie answered: "I've got an eight, a ten, a four, a Jack and a deuce."

"Take it," Mother replied disgustedly. "I thought you were bluffing!"

There are quite a few truisms connected with my mother, mainly because she was so proud of me. Years ago, when she lived at the Essex House in New York, I would call her every single day just to see how she was. One day when I phoned, the operator told me that my mother was on her way down to the lobby. I asked if she would please page her in the lobby. The lobby was crowded, and when Mother picked up the house phone she shouted at the top of her voice so that everybody could hear her, "Hello, is this my son, Milton Berle?"

Another funny incident happened when I was just a kid. Mother sneaked me in backstage during one of the Al Jolson celebrity nights at the Winter Garden. She tried to get me on the show. Jolson was singing when we got there, and if you think I stay on long—you should have seen Jolson that night! The audience kept calling him back to do encore after encore. Finally, after he was finished, the audience stood up and applauded endlessly. Mother took one look at me, slapped me on my fanny and said, "Now will you practice?"

...

Gene Baylos is to me one of the funniest comics in the business, funny offstage as well as onstage. Gene has one big problem, though—he's an impulsive gambler. One night he lost all his money at a crap game and was forced to stand around watching while the others continued gambling. Finally, he couldn't take it anymore. He jumped on the crap table and shouted, "I bet my life on the hard six!"

...

While we're on the subject of impulsive gamblers, there's the one about the roulette player who got tapped out. He put a gun to his head and was about to kill himself when a strange voice said to him, "Don't pull the trigger! Don't pull the trigger!"

"Why shouldn't I?" he asked. "I have no more money!"

"Look in your pocket," answered the voice. "You'll find a dollar there."

The man looked in his pocket and sure enough, there was a dollar.

The voice said, "Bet it on number 29." The man placed his bet, and the number came in. The voice said, "Let it ride." The man let his $35 ride, and again it came in. So he asked, "Now what do I do?" The voice answered, "Let it ride once more." The man let it ride, and it lost. "Now I'm really broke!" cried the man. "What do I do next?"

And the voice said, "Pull the trigger! Pull the trigger!"

But talking about bad luck—that's nothing compared to the impulsive gambler who, when he drove to Las Vegas, pulled up to a parking space, put a dime in the meter and lost his car!

Another favorite story was told to me only recently by E. G. Marshall while I was shooting The Defenders with him. He told me about a lawyer who had been practicing 20 years and never won a case. He finally found out why—he had been practicing medicine!

FAST PAY-OFF

BY GEORGE DOLE

Anecdote of the Week

A few days ago Dr. Edwin Patton of Beverly Hills, Calif., one of the foremost pediatricians in the country, author of many books on babies and child care, was awakened at 2:00 A.M. by an alarmed mother.

"I'm sorry to call you at this hour," she sobbed, "but please, doctor, could you possibly come over immediately?"

Dr. Patton asked if the emergency would keep until morning, but the mother assured him it wouldn't, so he got out of bed, dressed, drove to the patient's address and climbed three flights of stairs. When he arrived, the mother led him into her son's bedroom. The child was bawling. Pointing an accusing finger at her boy, the mother yelled, "See! I told you I'd call the doctor if you didn't stop crying!"

QUIETLY SLIPS OFF THE NEST, AND SHOWING NO APPARENT CONCERN OVER THE NEARNESS OF AN ENEMY...

The President inserted some Johnson bywords in his re-election dialogue Saturday night, calling for a unified American "Great Society" and a "Charter of Opportunity" for older citizens.

decessor in a speech at dedication ceremonies of the new University of California, Irvine campus, due to open in September, 1965.

The $100-a-plate fund-raising dinner at the Hollywood Palladium Saturday night closed the President's two-day pre-campaign swing in California. He is scheduled to return to Washington late this morning.

MR. JOHNSON told about 2,500 at the Palladium, in clear rebuttal to Sen. Barry Goldwater, who has the GOP presidential nomination almost cinched, that the Democratic Party "has always been the special agent of the American aim toward compassion. To us, the old, the sick, the hungry, the helpless have represented not failures to be forsaken, but human beings to be helped."

HIS CHARTER of Opportunity would include medical care through Social Security; high quality medical services through renovation and new construction of hospitals and nursing homes; increased Social Security benefits; an expanded housing program for older Americans and an expanded volunteer program to use the wisdom and energy of older Americans to help underprivileged here and throughout the world.

The President said the keystone of American conquests against a common enemy, from the defeat of the West's wilderness and since, has been cooperation. "In time of war Americans had this same sense of unity, sharing a common enterprise and common enemy."

MTA Union Votes to End Strike; Buses Roll Monday

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Bus drivers for the Metropolitan Transit Authority voted by a 2-1 margin Saturday to accept a new three-year contract, bringing to an end a week-long, four-county strike.

The more than 1,000 buses were expected to roll as usual Monday morning.

By 9:30 p.m., the vote was unofficially about 1,400 to 700 in favor of ending the strike with just a "couple dozen" ballots left to count.

AGREEMENT between negotiators for the MTA and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen was reached Friday after a bargaining session which lasted 20 hours.

MTA Board Chairman A. J. Elyraud said the agreement called for the drivers to receive a 26-cent hourly pay increase. Fringe benefits would bring the total cost to the MTA of 35.7 cents an hour, he said.

Approval of the new contract was virtually assured when it received the unanimous endorsement of the union's negotiating committee, according to BRT Chairman Don Sheets.

Elyraud said the new contract would not require an increase in transit fares.

Racial Battle in Florida

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (UPI)—Angry whites attacked integrationists romping in the Atlantic surf Saturday and police acting on orders from Gov. Farris Bryant turned back a Negro march on downtown St. Augustine.

A white integrationist was badly mauled, a Negro girl's nose was broken and a Negro woman received a head wound in the battle at the beach.

Saturday night, after Bryant issued an order banning demonstrations after dark, 66 Negroes decided to march anyway. They said they had not been officially notified of Bryant's order, and claimed it violated a federal injunction anyway.

THEY got seven blocks before they met an army of policemen. The officers stood in four lines across the street, and one line held dogs on leashes.

An officer read Bryant's order. The Negroes—some of whom were among those beaten at the beach—protested, then turned around and went home. There were no incidents.

DETAILS, DETAILS

Lost: 1 Marriage License-- Found: 1 Kindly Minister

By JIM MELTON

Arthur (Buddy) Lentzner of Lakewood, and Diana Bass of Rossmore, recited their vows Saturday and the guests agreed it was a lovely wedding—except for one little detail.

Before he would join them "till death do us part," the minister made them promise—because of that little detail—not to begin their honeymoon until Monday.

The 19-year-old Lakewood High School graduates' marriage won't be official until then, because:

Buddy lost the license.

WITH EVERYTHING ready for the big wedding scheduled Saturday at 10 a.m. and guests arriving from Northern California and Nevada, the groom discovered Friday night that the license was missing.

The big brown official envelope was nowhere to be found.

By 8:30 p.m. it seemed certain he wouldn't find it, so Buddy's friends began trying to help him buy a duplicate. He was staying with Mr. and Mrs. Bob Bridgewood, whose son, Robert, is Buddy's buddy.

The Bridgewoods called lawyers, judges,

this newspaper. About all they found out is that it's impossible to buy a duplicate marriage license Friday night. They tried to call the doctor who had tested the couple's blood in hopes of getting duplicate certificates so they could buy another license Saturday morning. The doctor wasn't home.

They gave up at 2 a.m.

Saturday morning there wasn't time for new blood tests.

A family friend offered to fly them to Nevada for a quick wedding, then return them here for the reception. With 100 guests on hand, they turned down the offer.

FINALLY, a judge assured them it would be proper to hold the ceremony provided they signed an affidavit that they had taken out a license and that they wouldn't consider themselves married until the certificate was signed and sealed.

But then the minister said no. No license, no ceremony.

Bob Bridgewood found another minister. After reading the affidavit and Buddy and Diana's names in The Independent, Press-Telegram marriage license list, the Rev. Ralph Baker agreed to perform the ritual.

CHURCH HIT 2ND TIME BY FIREBUG

Fire erupted in the First Foursquare Church for the second time in two weeks Saturday night after an arsonist slipped past parishioners guarding the building.

Long Beach's fifth church fire in recent weeks was within half a mile of two churches destroyed by fires last month.

Rev. Billy Adams, the pastor, said an arson suspect was chased from the church at 2416 E. 11th St. shortly before the fire was discovered at 9:50 p.m. Rev. Stanley Dorsett, youth pastor, chased a tall young man in a dark coat.

CHURCH members found the blaze in the sanctuary after they saw a tall, young man wearing a dark coat run down the alley.

The first damage estimate for Saturday night's fire was $20,000. There appeared to be little structural damage, according to Acting Assistant Chief Kenneth Hoffman, but the chancel furnishings and ceiling above it were destroyed.

Two engine companies and a ladder truck, commanded by Battalion Chief Arthur Radin, brought the blaze under control by 10:15 p.m.

ALTHOUGH the arsonist slipped by the guards to set the fire, Hoffman credited the church members with saving the building.

"Because they were there, we were able to save the church," Hoffman said. "If these people hadn't been around, it would have been very hard to spot the fire."

The church was torched for the first time on June 7, but that blaze also was discovered in time to save the steel-and-concrete building.

First Foursquare Church is less than half a mile from the Grace Methodist Church, 300 Junipero Ave., destroyed by a predawn blaze May 23, and First Brethren Church, 1925 E.

Fifth St., practically destroyed in a million-dollar blaze May 24.

A few days earlier, on May 18, a fire in the North Long Beach Methodist Church was brought under control after it did $50,000 damage to the church library.

Since the fires last month, many congregations have mounted watches on their buildings and police have intensified surveillance.

Kennedy Faces Lengthy Ordeal with Broken Back

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. (AP)—A team of medical specialists Saturday termed Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., who suffered a broken back in a plane crash Friday night, in "good condition" and eliminated the possibility of any paralysis.

The doctors from Washington's Walter Reed Hospital flew into Northampton on President Johnson's Air Force One jet Saturday and made an extensive examination of the 32-year-old brother of the late President.

At midnight Saturday an aide of the senator, relaying information from the doctors, said Kennedy's condition remained good and he was comfortable.

Kennedy was hurt in the crash that killed the plane's pilot and Kennedy's administrative aide in an apple orchard near Southhampton, Mass.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., and his wife also were injured in the crash but both were labeled in good condition with lesser injuries.

Dr. Charles W. Metz, an orthopedic surgeon at Walter Reed, said it was possible that Kennedy would need surgery, though this was not definitely determined. He said the period of recovery would be from six to eight months.

THE DOCTORS, ordered to Kennedy's bedside by Secretary of Defense McNamara, said one of the three vertebrae broken in Kennedy's back—the third lumbar vertebra in the lower back—was split in half and "displaced some degrees sideways."

But the injury, the doctors said, apparently had not damaged the spinal cord and Kennedy had free movement of arms and legs.

METZ SAID the broken vertebrae "created an unstable medical situation" causing the firm outlook for the long recovery period.

ORDERLY, EXPECTANT

Big Crowd Forms Early for President's Speech

By KEN KNIGHT

NEWPORT BEACH — The huge crowd began arriving early. The President was coming.

Patiently they found seats and began their wait for the chief executive to arrive.

First the people filled the 7,000 folding chairs and then found other places to sit as they sprawled out over the rolling hills that are the site of the soon-to-be-constructed University of California, Irvine.

ROADS into the site opened at 8 a.m. and as soon as they did there were drivers to fill the parking lot that could accommodate 5,000 cars.

Along with the crowd were some 500 police officers, Orange County sheriff's deputies, California highway patrolmen and Secret Service men. No one knows how many Secret Service men there were.

But the big crowd, estiimated at between 15,000 and 20,000, was orderly, just expectant.

EVERYBODY was waiting with a solemnity that

EARS TOO short to pull, Nails, a boxer pet of Mrs. Sally Fiske of New York City, gave President his support with a sign referring to the beagle pets of the President. Sign reads, "Him, Her and Me for Johnson."

was broken only by an occasional march played by the El Toro Marine Band or singing by the Newport Beach Harbor High School Glee Club.

A lot of lunches were opened up as the President was late in arriving, but there was no sign of impatience as the crowd continued to grow.

Even the weather was kind to the assemblage.

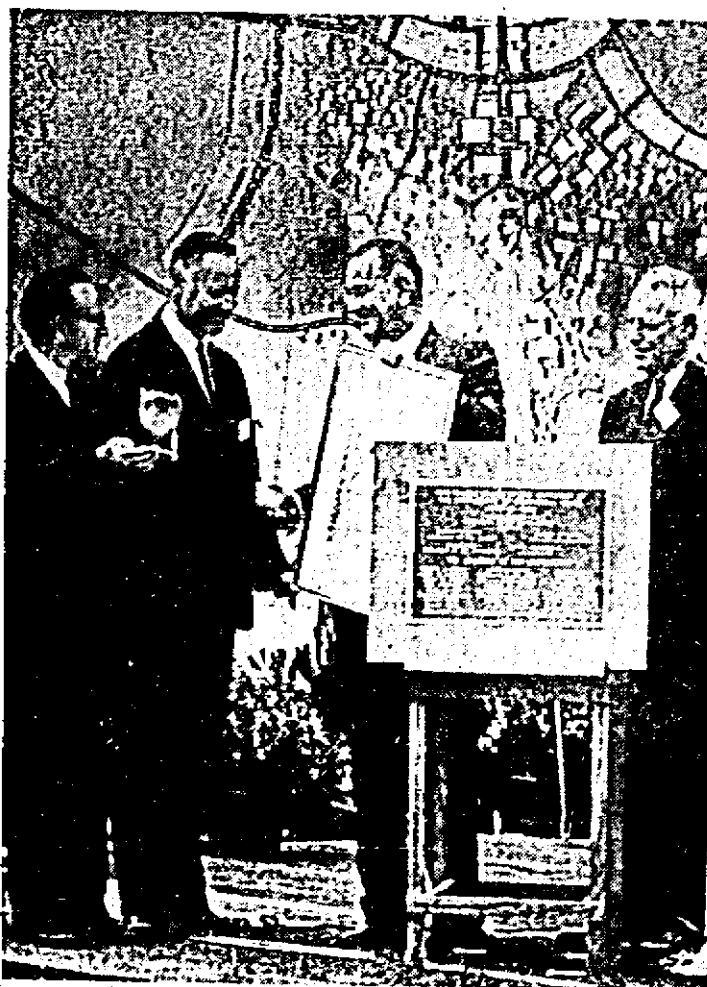

It was cloudy but not cold. A slight breeze from the ocean only three miles away came over the hills to ruffle the pendants that ringed the dedication site.

FINALLY an announcement came that President Johnson had left nearby El Toro, and his Army helicopter could be seen coming from the north-east.

And after introductions, the President spoke.

He said the leaders and people of California have the vigor to put the state on top and that's where he thinks it will stay.

That was what they had come to hear.

ONE FATHER'S DAY AFTER ANOTHER

New 'Daddy' Starts Pleasant Work

By ANDY PARK
This Father's Day, a 29-year-old Long Beach bachelor is spending his last day alone without children.
Monday, Robert Reynolds will walk into the Long Beach Day Nursery at 1545 Chestnut Ave., and become "father" to almost 100 youngsters.
When Reynolds walks into the Community Chest-supported nursery shortly before 7 a.m. Monday, he will be the first male elementary school teacher to do so in the 52-year history of the Long Beach institution.

MRS. MERILYN Burt, executive director of the nursery, is "frankly looking forward" to what she terms "a long-needed breakthrough" in day nursery and elementary school teaching.
Reynolds, a certified teacher in the California school system, will become a fulltime teacher in Torrance in September, teaching the 6th grade. But for the summer, he will join the staff of head teacher Mrs. Fern Jensen at the Chestnut Avenue Nursery.

Why?
"I THINK there is a great need for understanding of the male role in life," Reynolds said. "And this need manifests itself in any child in the pre-school age group. But it is especially present in children from broken homes."
Mrs. Burt says that of the 270 children in the three day nurseries in Long Beach "more than 90 percent" come from broken homes—and, of that percentage, the vast majority have only the mother as the remaining parent.
"We need a man," Mrs. Jensen said. But since the nursery opened in Long Beach in 1912, only women have been available as teachers. "The low pay, the long hours, many of the disadvantages," Mrs. Burt said, are the reason why no man has yet taken up the nursery teaching mantle.
REYNOLDS visited the nursery last week, getting acquainted. As Father's Day approached, he met some of the children he will take responsibility for beginning Monday.
From 7 a.m., when working mothers drop off their children, until 5:30 p.m., five days a week, the youngsters from 27 months through seventh grade spend most of their lives—fatherless lives—at the nursery.

BACHELOR Robert Reynolds will become "father" Monday to almost 100 youngsters at the Long Beach Day Nursery.

As Reynolds and Mrs. Burt walked around the spacious playgrounds and through the classrooms, they talked and the children watched.
Mrs. BURT, the professional, talked of "need," "father image" and "emotional attachments." Reynolds tugged 5-year-old asked, "I'll bet he's the dentist," a snaggle-toothed boy of 7 said knowingly.
At first the children spoke not at all. Then, slowly and shyly, they began to approach the tall, youthful man who was new to their lives. "Are you the doctor?" a hand. She tugged, and he bent double to hear her quiet question.
"Are... you my father?" Others turned away with glistening eyes as Reynolds hesitated, then smiled and began his summer of Father's Days by answering his first question.

STARLIGHT SERENADE

Pops Music Not Only Pleases Audience--the Musicians Like It Too

Members of the Long Beach Symphony Orchestra feel about the Summer Pops Concerts opening June 30 in Bixby Park, as does the restaurateur who hangs a sign in his establishment, "The food's good; I eat here myself."

"Normally the members of the orchestra would be taking their vacations during the period the concerts are scheduled," said Lauris Jones, conductor. "But the musicians are reshuffling their vacation schedules. They want to be here to play."

What the concerts have done musically is to improve the ensemble playing of the orchestra by increasing the annual number of concerts played each year," he said.

EIGHT YEARS ago the total symphony season here was made up of five concerts. The success of Symphony Association programming and the addition of the summer concerts has increased this number to 20.

"More people are listening to symphony orchestras in a year than attend baseball games," Jones said -- and a large amount of this increase in audience is due to the outdoor concerts attended by huge throngs throughout the nation.

Popularity of the Long

LAURIS JONES will conduct Long Beach Symphony in season's first Pops Concert June 30.

Beach Starlight Serenade concerts has swelled the audience for the Long Beach Symphony to where more people hear it now than ever before, attracted by the joint program of picnic in the park and music under the stars that people know and enjoy.

The programs are made up of music the musicians

like to play too, said Jones, and they are comfortable in the easy informality of the setting.

THE PROGRAM June 30 will feature Metropolitan Opera tenor Brian Sullivan and radio, concert, television and opera soprano Grace-Lynne Martin. They will sing both operatic and popular songs.

Sullivan will sing the "Flower Song" from Bizet's "Carmen" from "Vesti La Giubba" from Leoncavallo's "I Pagliacci," "One Alone" from Romberg's "Desert Song," "I'm Falling in Love with Someone" from Herbert's "Naughty Marietta" and "Yours Is My Heart Alone" by Lehár.

Miss Martin has programmed "Songs to Remember" from Kern's "Robert" and Strauss' "Tales from the Vienna Woods."

Duets will be the "Drinking Song" from Verdi's "La Traviata" and "Wanting You" from Romberg's "New Moon."

Orchestral selections similarly are from the classical and light music repertoire, including the Finale from Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony, selections from "Gypsy" by Smetana, "Dance of the Comedians" from Smetana's "Barrister Bride," Hayman's "Pops Hoe Down," Tchaikovsky's "Waltz of the Flowers" and Willson's "Seventy Six Trombones."

In addition to the June 30 program free concerts will be given in Bixby Park on July 28 and Sept. 1. A fourth concert will be given Sept. 12 at Avalon, Catalina Island.

Johnson Says Democrats Agents of Compassion

struction. "In the past four years we have taken more tangible steps toward this goal than at any time in our postwar history," he said, continuing:

"Second, we want America to be strong . . . Today, America is first among the nations in strength. California is first among the states in contributing to that strength. I tell you tonight America and California are going to remain first."

"THIRD, we want to continue the upward progress of prosperity . . . Business knows its market depends upon fair wages for workers. Labor knows a business must have the incentive of profits if it is to create new jobs."

"Fourth, we want to eliminate poverty . . . out of compassion for the oppressed and the awareness that the entire economy will rise as more people share in the benefits of our society."

"Fifth, we want every American of every race and color to enjoy the full blessings of American liberty."

"SIXTH, we share a care and concern for the elderly, the sick, the handicapped. We will not turn our backs on those who through no fault of their own, can no longer sustain themselves . . . This nation will never again fall into indifference toward the distressed and the despairing."

These shared American goals, said President Johnson, "underlie my hopes for national unity."

"We must now work to show the American people that our test of greatness will come not from open conflicts between fellow citizens, but from facing the forces of poverty and racial injustice—not from the ambitions of our neighbors but from the abundance we must use to enrich the life of our nation," he said.

"By understanding this we can turn unity of interest into unity of purpose and unity of goals into unity in the Great Society."

THAT ACHIEVED, he declared we will eliminate racial injustice, abolish poverty, remove fear from our future and remain strong while finding the path to peace.

At the Irvine campus, before more than 20,000 persons gathered in a raw earth amphitheater among the rolling hills of Orange County and Goldwater country, President Johnson asked Californians to "throw off your doubts about America."

His call for confidence followed a quote of Franklin D. Roosevelt that "The only limit to our realization of tomorrow will be our doubts of today."

IN THAT tomorrow, Johnson said he foresees the day "when an urban extension service operated by universities across the country, will do for urban American what the Agricultural Extension Service has done for rural America." He said he is asking the U. S. Commissioner of Education to meet with education leaders to see how it can come to pass.

Mr. Johnson noted that this nation has changed from 60 percent rural to 70 percent urban within a century.

Speaking under gray skies and into a chill wind which whipped pennants bordering the amphitheater three miles north of Corona Del Mar, the President said all our hopes for peace depend on the kind of society we can build in the United States, "and that in turn rests on our system of education. I do not intend for us to settle for an uneasy peace for the world, an inferior society for America or an inadequate education for our children . . . As long as I am President, the education of your children is going to receive top priority by the men who lead your nation."

CONTINUING, the chief executive said, "I have come to California to ask you to throw off your doubts about America. Help us demonstrate to the world that people of compassion and commitment can free their fellow citizens from the bonds of poverty, the prisons of ignorance, and the chains of injustice. Help us to open the doors of America's abundance and freedom's promise to every man, whatever his race, his region or his religion."

"Help us to build a strong and vital and progressive society. In education, in health, in transportation, in every field of human endeavor, let us move forward to do our best, knowing that 'whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap.'"

Johnson alluded jokingly to the political side of his California mission in an aside to University of California President Clark Kerr, noting that, "It seems every time I come to a new college, if you keep up this pace we're going to have a lot of ceremonies like this between now and November."

AND A few minutes later, Johnson, the politician, substituted action for words—he slipped down into the crowd after his talk and walked over to greet and shake hands with members of the All-Orange County Honor Choir, a group of 200 high school singers.

Gov. Brown and Democratic U. S. Senate nominee Pierre Salinger, Johnson's former press secretary, accompanied the President on his four-speech trip through the state. Mr. Johnson put in a couple of good words for Salinger, including his Saturday night speech salutation, "Former Secretary and future Senator Salinger."

KERR SAID the new Irvine campus will rise to monumental proportions in years to come and will be the focus of a new center of population

LYNDA BIRD JOINS DADDY

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Lynda Bird Johnson, eldest daughter of the President, quietly slipped into Los Angeles Saturday night to join her father after a flight to Honolulu.

Upon landing at International Airport, she went quickly to a waiting car and rode to the hotel where her father was staying. A Secret Service agent accompanied her.

which will number more than 100,000 by 1980.

Kerr said the President's participation in the dedication "augurs a bright future" for the new campus. And, he noted, the guest of honor is "now a member of our company" by virtue of the LLD degree awarded him this spring at UCLA.

UCI chancellor Daniel G. Aldrich Jr. said Irvine "is not conceived as an isolated academia but as an institution that plays an active role in the transfer of learning to life."

He said learning more of our cultural heritage "is not to escape from the vicissitudes and practicalities of life, it is a means of wrestling with them."

EDWARD W. CARTER, chairman of the Regents of the University of California said the university in considerable measure "is truly a national university," citing its contribution to federal research through national departments, particularly the Atomic Energy Commission.

Dramatic evidence of the confidence of its staff, said Carter, is that it includes about one fourth of the world's Nobel Laureates in sciences and about one eighth of the members of the National Academy of Sciences.

Carter noted also that UC generates a substantial number of the government's top administrators, including in the President's official family, Secretary of State Rusk, Secretary of Defense McNamara, CIO Director John A. McCone, Atomic Energy Commission Chairman Glenn Seaborg and Chief Justice Earl Warren.

WORLD NEWS BRIEFS

U.S. AF Sorties in Laos Bared

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The U.S. Air Force has been flying unpublicized reconnaissance missions over Communist-besieged Laos with heavily armed jet escorts, it was learned Saturday.

The missions are being carried out under President Johnson's policy of stepping up military pressure on the Communists.

While similar U.S. Navy reconnaissance operations were acknowledged here after they were disclosed by Communist radio, nothing had been said about the Air Force sorties.

Besides the June 10 Air Force strike against Red anti-aircraft gun positions in central Laos — first revealed by UPI a week ago and still not officially acknowledged — it was learned that Air Force RF101 Voodoo reconnaissance planes have been making sweeps over the Plain of Jars.

Saratoga Stowaway Hauled Off by FBI
JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP)—David Russell Irwin, a 19-year-old aspiring writer who stowed away aboard the giant aircraft carrier Saratoga, was jailed Saturday after his plan for exposing the Navy's lack of security boomeranged.

Irwin, of Gillette, N.J., walked aboard the Saratoga last Sunday in civilian dress as a visitor and changed into a borrowed uniform for a six-day cruise with reservists, the Navy said.

He was discovered Wednesday by an alert apprentice seaman who noticed Irwin's unfamiliarity with Navy jargon.

Irwin, who said he planned to gather material for a magazine article, was escorted ashore by FBI agents when the ship returned to port Saturday.

Missing U.S. Plane May Be 'Pirate'
WASHINGTON (AP)—Cuba said Saturday a "pirate plane" from the United States bombed one of its sugar mills Friday and was shot down. A few hours later the U.S. State Department reported a private U.S. plane is missing from Florida.

The department said it is not known whether the missing Florida plane is the craft reported downed over the north coast of Las Villas Province.

Barry Says Ike Agrees on U.N. Revision
WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., said Saturday that former President Dwight D. Eisenhower agrees with him that the United Nations charter should be revised and the voting formula changed.

Goldwater, leading candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, said both Eisenhower and Secretary of State Dean Rusk support "a thorough discussion on the charter of the United Nations."

Goldwater added, "I believe in the United Nations." He said, however, that some way must be found to revise the formula giving each nation a vote in the General Assembly.

300 Overcome by Heat at N.Y. Resort
LAKE GEORGE, N.Y. (AP)—About 300 persons were overcome by heat and collapsed Saturday at the end of a volunteer firemen's parade in this Adirondack Mountain resort.

Ambulances, fire trucks and a school bus took the most seriously ill to Glens Falls Hospital about nine miles away. Others were treated in a first-aid headquarters at Lake George Central School, in an emergency squad headquarters and in private homes.

At the height of the heat epidemic, patients lay on the hospital lawn and in corridors, while others waited in ambulances.

COPENHAGEN (AP)—Danish Premier Jens Otto Krag accused Soviet Premier Khrushchev on nationwide television Saturday night of subscribing to an outdated ideology.

The charge was made by Krag in a recorded face-to-face conversation with Khrushchev after they had both signed a joint communique at the end of Khrushchev's five-day official visit to Denmark.

The Laughs Are Bitter Behind the Iron Curtain These Days

He says that so far as he could see Americans lived in beautiful, well-furnished houses, were well dressed and ate how hard life was in the well "This is extraordinary!"

Another Romanian story has a local Communist Party functionary advising aides of Khrushchev, space man that it would not be wise for Gagarin, Pope Paul VI and Romania to surpass the Americans—it should just try to catch up and stay side-by-side. But why? demands a member of the group. "Well, of Khrushchev and begin, 'our you see, comrade,' explains the functionary, 'if we pass the Americans they would see the holes in our pants!'"

These jokes come from a collection of recent Soviet and Satellite humor compiled by Radio Free Europe at its Munich operational headquarters. "Political jokes," span the length and breadth of the communist world in spite of official disapproval.

Kennedys' Bedside Vigil Set

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. (UPI) — Assured by doctors that Sen. Edward M. Kennedy is much improved from his plane crash injuries, most of his immediate family Saturday returned to the family compound at Hyannis Port.

Departing for the Cape Cod residence at about 4:15 p.m. (EDT) were the injured senator's wife Joan, who recently suffered a miscarriage; his brother, Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy, his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Smith.

It was arranged that one member of the family remain at Cooley Dickinson Hospital at all times. Mrs. Peter Lawford, another sister, was to take the first shift.

Also remaining at the hospital was Varick Tunney, a college classmate and close friend, who left his campaign for a congressional seat in California to fly to Northampton to be with the senator.

Tunney and Kennedy are godfathers of each other's children.

SEN. KENNEDY ON STRETCHER
Ambulance attendants prepare to carry Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., into Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton, Mass. He suffered broken back in plane crash en route to Democratic state convention.

stulant called from Boston's famed Massachusetts General Hospital, said it would be some time before Kennedy could be removed from Cooley-Dickinson Hospital.

Kennedy received three pints of blood in transfusions and was given glucose intravenously, along with other medication.

"If it had not been for the attention the senator received," Metz said, "it could have been quite a different story." He complimented Dr. Thomas Corriden who supervised the early treatment.

X-RAYS taken when Kennedy arrived at the hospital after the crash shortly before Friday midnight showed fractures of the fifth and sixth ribs on the left side, fractures of the second, third and fourth transverse processes, which give the spine support.

He was also cut on both legs and the right hand.

Kennedy was en route to West Springfield, Mass., to attend the state's Democratic convention where he was to be endorsed by acclamation for a full, six-year term in the post once held by John F. Kennedy.

Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy rushed by plane from Hyannis Port, Mass., to be at his brother's side. The senator's wife, who suffered a miscarriage only a few weeks ago, sped to Northampton from West Springfield with Massachusetts Gov. Endicott Peabody.

BOTH PRESIDENT Johnson and Mrs. Johnson made telephone calls to the Northampton Hospital to express concern over the senator's injury and to talk to doctors about the condition of Kennedy, Sen. Bayh and Mrs. Bayh.

PILOT OF the Aero Commander plane, Edwin T. Zimny, 48, of Andover, Mass., died in the crash. Moss, Kennedy aide, a former New England Telephone Co. executive, died at 6:15 a.m., about seven hours after the crash, at the hospital.

Sen. Bayh told his Washington staff by phone Saturday that he saw "black things outside the window" and then realized just before the crash they were trees.

Bayh, who was to deliver the keynote address at the state convention, said the plane started its descent to land at Barnes Airport in Westfield.

"I could see car lights," Bayh said, but the plane then began a steep climb. Then the plane went down in the apple orchard.

pushed and we got her out.

"I tried to get some response in the plane, but I couldn't raise anyone. Sen. Kennedy was crumpled up on the floor. I got out thinking I could get help. We said we ought to make one more try."

"I CALLED his (Kennedy's) name and he answered me. I reached in my hand and he answered and grabbed me. We struggled him through on all fours and scrooched him through the window."

Bayh said he and his wife dragged Kennedy "over on a hill" and Mrs. Bayh covered him with a raincoat and a clothing bag.

"He was obviously in considerable pain and he took it like a trooper," Bayh said.

THE PILOT and a Kennedy aide were killed in the crash. Kennedy suffered a broken back and other injuries, Bayh and his wife, Marvella, were less serious hurt.

Bayh described the crash as "one of those you just don't walk away from."

"I can't understand why we're here now," he said.

Bayh said Kennedy was talking to his aide, Edward Moss, 41, of Andover, Mass., just before the crash.

"HE WAS sort of half standing, half sitting. I just happened to be looking out the window and saw some strange shapes that looked like we were in a thundercloud. Then I looked in front and we were in it."

"There was a sizable crash at the front of the plane — and sparks," Bayh said. "My wife and I were not seriously injured."

"She tells me she didn't lose consciousness. I just had the wind knocked out of me."

Bayh said the front of the plane "opened up like a butcher knife opened it." He said his wife "crawled and I

EDWARD MOSS
Died of Injuries

'Amazing' That Ted Is Alive

SOUTHAMPTON, Mass. (UPI) — A physician said Saturday it is probably "amazing" Sen. Edward M. Kennedy survived the plane crash here Friday night that killed two men.

Dr. David Jackson said Sen. Birch Bayh told him he and his wife, Marvella, were strapped into the two rear seats of the twin-engine plane when it hit.

Jackson said Bayh was not certain what position Kennedy was in at impact but that the Massachusetts senator apparently loosened his seat belt and may have been standing up and looking at a map.

"AT ANY RATE, it's amazing he (Kennedy) is alive, if he was loose (not strapped down) in the plane," Jackson said.

Bob Keefe, administrative assistant to Bayh, said Bayh and his wife were "momentarily stunned or unconscious" after the plane hit. When they revived, almost simultaneously, Bayh pushed his wife through a safety window, which blew out on impact.

Kennedy's aide, Edward Moss, 41, and the pilot, Edwin T. Zimny, 48, both fatally injured, were in the crumpled front seat of the plane. The Bayhs could not aid them.

Would Back Barry, Says Scranton

BOSTON (UPI) — Pennsylvania Gov. William W. Scranton said Saturday he "will support the Republican presidential nominee, even if it is (Sen. Barry) Goldwater."

Campaigning for New England's national convention delegate votes, the late starter in the presidential race addressed 100 delegates and alternates to the coming GOP national convocation.

"I am a Republican and will support the Republican presidential nominee, even if it is Goldwater," he said.

HE ALSO gave the keynote address at the Massachusetts Republican State Convention and then conferred with members of the New Hampshire and Rhode Island National convention delegations.

Scranton returned to Harrisburg, Pa., and home later in the day.

At the state convention, Goldwater supporters booed him when he asked, "Is it possible to stand with one foot in the 20th century and the other in the 19th?" and toward the end they interrupted with a chant, "We want Barry."

A chant gavelled into silence by Sen. Leverett Saltonstall, R-Mass., honorary convention chairman.

Scranton told his audience that "the true spirit of the Republican Party today" stands with equal determination to save the nation from the "dry rot of phony liberalism and the slow death of blind reaction."

HE DREW cheers from throughout the sweltering Boston Arena convention hall as he blasted the Johnson administration, saying it is one that "failed to produce a single good idea or successful strategy during its first year in office."

"We cannot afford to go ahead with politics as usual while our allies are drifting away... while Latin America is threatened with cancerous subversion... and while freedom is being murdered in Southeast Asia," he said.

Inate Whites Attack

ists have used the public beach without incident.

A CAR OF white segregationists waited all day at the beach for the Negroes to show up Saturday. When they did, the whites, using a radio, called in reinforcements. Six more carloads of segregationists roared down the beach, Confederate flags flapping from their aerials.

When the approximately 10 Negroes, including several small children, and two white youths reached the water, about 20 of the segregationists charged them.

The whites, most of them in bathing suits, stormed into the water and concentrated their attack on Al Lingo, a husky white integrationist from Summit, N.J.

The troopers called in help and soon about 50 of them stood between the angry whites and the integrationists on the beach.

Goldwater Delegates Staying Put

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Bulletin, after talks with state leaders, U.S. senators and chairmen of delegations, reported Saturday there has been "no erosion yet of Sen. Barry Goldwater's strength" in the battle for the Republican nomination for President.

The Bulletin said its canvass of 50 states, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands showed Pennsylvania Gov. William W. Scranton's gains for the moderate GOP cause as substantial, but not at the expense of Goldwater.

The Bulletin survey found 650 solid first-ballot votes — five short of the 655 majority needed for nomination — for the Arizona senator.

POPE PAUL Starts Second Year

First Year of Paul as Pope Marked

By WILLIAM SUNDERLAND

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope Paul VI, the slight, 67-year-old northern Italian intellectual celebrates his first year on the Throne of Peter today, and everyone is asking, "Where is he going?"

IN CONTRAST with John XXIII, Pope Paul has sought to broaden and to increase the role of the Papacy. In a sense it has been a partial return to the days of Pius XII.

Pope John delegated responsibility and believed that on a large scale local bishops should be allowed to make their own decisions.

But Paul has taken the reins of leadership into his own hands. The Papacy is supreme, he believes, and it is the Pope and only the Pope who must make the decisions regarding the church.

This naturally has led to some consternation in the Roman Curia, that ultra-conservative Vatican body which governs the church.

The Pontiff made it clear that the curia was to bend to the will of the Pope, not vice versa.

Many churchmen hailed this move as a step toward the modernization of the Catholic church as important as the Ecumenical Council.

It is known that there are plans for a special body to be set up to carry out the reforms proposed by the Pontiff.

PAUL VI also is carrying out some reform of the Vatican ceremonies, which he considered outdated and unnecessary in many cases. He has indicated he plans to do away with the many noblemen who have purely honorary posts in the Vatican. And he recently announced that he was doing away with the old system where cardinals were "protectors" of religious orders.

Even the Swiss Guard came under the pontiff's eye. They have been cut back from 130 to 100.

Seldom in history has a pontiff received such a public demonstration as Paul did during his three-day pilgrimage to the Holy Land this year. More important, the enthusiasm came not only from Christians, but from Moslems and Jews.

FOR THE papacy, a number of firsts were involved—the first time since 1812 a Pope has left Italy; the first time any Pope since St. Peter (whom Catholics consider the first pontiff) has visited the Holy Land; the first time a Pope has flown by jetliner.

It was there, in Jerusalem, that Pope Paul and Patriarch Athenagoras of Constantinople (Istanbul) exchanged their "kiss of peace" and hopes were born for unification of the Orthodox and Catholic Churches after nine hundred years of separation.

WHAT LIES ahead for Pope Paul is difficult to predict. But there is the possibility of more trips outside of Italy.

"Almost definite" is a journey to Bombay in November or December to attend the Eucharistic Congress.

There is speculation on the possibility of visits to Manila and the United States.

Important during the next year is the third session of the Ecumenical Council, which opens Sept. 14. Although it is not likely to be the final council meeting, it may be the decisive one, producing more concrete results than the first two.

D-DAY PLUS 20 YEARS

Normandy Invasion Harbor

Twenty years after D-Day, General Dwight D. Eisenhower returned to the scene of the events that radically altered the course of World War II to record his reminiscences for a CBS REPORTS: "D-Day Plus 20 Years: Eisenhower Returns to Normandy," which was broadcast over the CBS Network on the anniversary of D-Day. In this exclusive conversation with Walter Cronkite, General Eisenhower recounted the historic moments of the Normandy invasion. This is the thirteenth in a series of sixteen installments of the entire conversation, including many portions not broadcast, prepared by the New York Herald Tribune. Here the former President is on a bluff above an artificial harbor off the Normandy beaches, telling Mr. Cronkite of the ingenious devices which played such an important role in the Allied success.

Copyright 1964, Dwight D. Eisenhower
Edited by Martin Blumenson

MR. CRONKITE: General, here we are above Arromanches and the artificial harbor on a day that is a little calmer at sea but almost as rainy as many of those that the troops suffered in those days. What was the major problem of supply and the ports that led to this fantastic thing we see partly in the haze behind us here, what is left twenty years later of these artificial harbors?

GEN. EISENHOWER: Armies and navies have known for centuries that when you have a major invasion of a hostile shore, you have to capture a major port very soon. We were quite sure that while we might capture Cherbourg quickly we would find it destroyed pretty badly. We couldn't wait to repair Cherbourg because we were going to bring a lot of heavy equipment over to the Continent. Moreover, the English Channel is notorious for its foul and uncertain weather. So it seemed to me that we had to have something very soon and very radical to help us get that equipment over.

As far back as 1942, Admiral (Lord Louis) Mountbatten (head of the British Combined Operations Headquarters) happened to say to me, "Well, you won't have a port early enough, so we'll just have to make one."

This sounded rather fantastic to me. But actually early in 1943 the British began to work on this problem very seriously, and the Prime Minister interested himself in it. They conceived the idea of building artificial harbors—two of them, one for the American side of the beachhead and the other for the British. The British harbor was here in front of Arromanches.

This one turned out to be very successful. You can still see the remains of that harbor, the breakwaters that were built to fence in almost seven miles of shoreline to protect ships from the wind and the waves.

TWO STORM-TWISTED LOSBENZ PIER, JUTTING OUT FROM OMAHA BEACH

First, to get the breakwater started, you had to sink some ships, some old battleships and big freighters that had outlived their usefulness. Then there were concrete boxes called Phoenixes that were floated over from England to be sunk here. Finally, piers were built, piers that went up and down with the tide, flexible bridges in a sense.

The whole thing was a masterly conception, and the completion of the harbor almost miraculous. Unfortunately, we had a great storm on June 19th (in 1944), and the artificial port on the American side broke up. It was resting on a sand base, and it had taken some heavy shelling.

But the one right here rode out the storm. We used it right on into the fall, until we got and opened the port of Antwerp (in November, 1944). It was a Godsend, and the British who conceived it and had the greater part of building it used it very heavily.

MR. CRONKITE: Did the breakup of our port cause

any serious concern as to whether the operation might still be a success?

GEN. EISENHOWER: No, I don't think so. We had much more equipment for bringing supplies in over the beaches than the British did. We had amphibious trucks—DUKWs (pronounced "ducks")—and many small landing craft, LCIs, LCIs, and so on. But we also used the British artificial harbor to bring some of our very heavy equipment in.

We captured Cherbourg on the 26th of June, 20 days after D-Day, and we started rehabilitating the port at once—getting the mines and the ships the Germans had scuttled out of there. It wasn't long before we had it repaired and a terrific amount of tonnage coming in through Cherbourg. But in the meantime, in the early days, this artificial port did the job.

MR. CRONKITE: It must have taken a tremendous amount of courage for those British tug pilots to bring this stuff across the Channel. The concrete box Phoenixes were some seven stories high, weren't they?

GEN. EISENHOWER: I don't recall that we lost a single Phoenix coming across, and that's remarkable.

MR. CRONKITE: These Phoenixes and the other pieces of equipment that built the harbor were made in England, of course, and they're unlike anything that man ever saw before. How is the world did we keep that part of the operation a secret?

GEN. EISENHOWER: The Germans knew we were building something strange, but they couldn't conceive what it was. Just imagine almost 50,000 men working on this one project alone, using 30,000 tons of steel and I can't tell you how much cement.

MR. CRONKITE: I remember flying over this area on D-Day and seeing these things being towed. They were just then leaving the Southampton area, and I had no idea what they were. I couldn't imagine what those big boxes were, and the pilots were wondering, and it was a mystery to everybody, I think, until they were sunk out here and became operational.

GEN. EISENHOWER: The Prime Minister (Churchill) was the driver on this project. He just wouldn't take any excuses. He was one of the principal movers in this thing and deserves a lot of credit for its success.

MR. CRONKITE: Was this Admiral Mountbatten's conception originally, do you think?

GEN. EISENHOWER: I don't know. He was the one who said openly that we could build an artificial harbor.

MR. CRONKITE: This might be the place to mention the other fantastic means of supply for the beachhead and the eventual conquest of Germany, and that was PLUTO, the pipe line (Pipe Line Under The Ocean).

GEN. EISENHOWER: Yes. In order to minimize the need for ships and ports, we laid pipe lines to carry oil and gasoline, and we took the oil and gasoline that came through the lines under the sea clear to the Rhine River.

MR. CRONKITE: General, was there ever a time in the first days of the landing when supply became so critical as to endanger the operation?

GEN. EISENHOWER: The storm of June 19th hurt us some. It threw some three to five hundred vessels up on the beaches and put them out of commission.

MR. CRONKITE: You know, General, the fact that the storm came on June 19th—which was the next available date for you to have invaded Normandy and have the tides and the moon right—proves the wisdom of going on the 6th, doesn't it?

GEN. EISENHOWER: At least it proves we were lucky, Walter.

If we had invaded on the 19th, we would have been absolutely wrecked. Nothing could have stayed here. It was the worst storm in the Channel in 40 years.

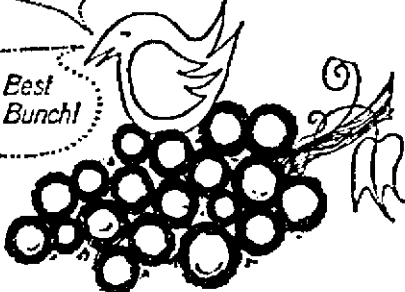

I had the 83rd Division in ships anchored right off the beach. They couldn't even attempt to unload. For three days they were tossed around, and when they finally were able to unload, every one of them was just as seasick as he could be. They had to rest a full day before they could do anything.

And I couldn't get over here to Normandy. I couldn't get over in a ship. I couldn't get over in a plane. For three days I was just bogged down in England because of that storm.

NEXT: Gen. Eisenhower tells of his own experiences in the early days of the Normandy battle and describes what he believes motivates the individual fighting man.

Wisconsin Probes Lewd-Photo Plot Against Governor, Others

MADISON, Wis. (UPI)—More witnesses will be called Monday in a probe of an alleged plot to discredit Wisconsin's governor and other high state officials with obscene "staged" photos.

Assistant Dist. Atty. Earl H. Munson Jr. of Dane County said more witnesses have been subpoenaed for Monday but declined to identify them.

Seven Milwaukee police, including Chief Harold A. Breier, testified Friday, bringing to 10 the number of witnesses heard.

The probe was called by Dist. Atty. Michael B. Torphy Jr. It is investigating reports of a conspiracy to procure compromising photographs of state officials to retaliate against them for their roles in a recently concluded Milwaukee County John Doe probe.

Two Milwaukee Police Department detectives and a member of the Milwaukee County district attorney's staff reportedly have been implicated in the probe. Breier said he brought "records and tape" to the hearing. He said these were of a conversation, but would not elaborate.

The alleged conspiracy to obtain the photographs of Gov. John Reynolds, U.S. Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., Atty. Gen. George Thompson and other persons that played a prominent role in the Milwaukee County John Doe probe has reportedly been based primarily on the testimony of a prisoner now in Dane County jail.

The prisoner, Earl Jacobs, 44, of Madison, who has been convicted of receiving stolen property, has said he was contacted by the Milwaukee detectives and offered $2,000 to procure the pictures. Reportedly, a tape recording of a conversation he had with one of the detectives has been introduced as evidence.

Jacobs told reporters the detectives warned him to get "photographs or recordings which would place these men (the officials) in very embarrassing positions, like being with nude women." He said they told him they wanted to "get something on these guys 'cause we're in trouble" because of the Milwaukee County probe.

Police Keep Eye Out for Half-Suits

By MARY ELLIS CARLTON
Related Stories, Page A1

Controversy still rages as to whether the topless swimsuits for women are quite an eyeful, just awful or unlawful.

Long Beach police have decided on the latter.

A junior Olympic swimmer, age 17, says she'd never wear one, a youthful lifeguard thinks it's the greatest idea since tranquilizers and an international beauty queen thinks "the whole thing's disgusting."

One local shop had them on display Saturday, another "wouldn't allow one in the place." Others have them on order to keep up with the trend toward over-all sunbathers.

BUT LOCAL gendarmes, putting their collective foot down, have taken a definite stand.

They'll pinch (whoops, I mean arrest) any female nature lover who goes bouncing along the beach half-dressed in one of California designer Rudi Gernreich's topless wonders.

Police Chief William Mooney said Saturday that officers are being instructed to arrest women who appear publicly in naked top bathing suits.

City prosecutor James T. Starr had this to say: "To me, appearing in this type bathing suit is lewdness. We will issue complaints and prosecute."

MOONEY said there are three laws to cover the latest controversy in women's swimwear.

One is Section 314 of the California State Penal Code which makes a misdemeanor of lewd conduct.

Another: Section 650 1/2 of the same code, which covers outrages to public decency.

Even more graphic and to the point is Section 7300.12 of the Long Beach Municipal Code, which says specifically: "No person of the female sex shall be attired in a bathing suit unless such suit shall be made of opaque material and worn in such a manner as to preclude from and provide against the exposure of all parts of the buttocks, breasts and (read and heed, bikini wearers) to a line above the navel of the body."

MEANWHILE, store owners about town report the latest shock treatment to swimwear is the most-talked-about item in the garment industry.

"We will have them for people who ask," said John Hersey, fashion coordinator for Buffums, which, as Long Beach's oldest department store, has been selling swimsuits since the black stocking days.

but he sniffed at it as "unimportant fashionwise—a gimmick and a very clever publicity stunt by Mr. Gernreich."

"We believe in being advanced—but that's pushing it a little far," he concluded.

Fredericks of Hollywood was first in town to have them on display in their Ocean Blvd. show windows.

"You wouldn't believe the expressions when people look at them," reported Izzy MacLeod, store manager.

Henry Katz, owner of Greta's in the Shore, says that if such nude suits became the vogue he'd quit selling swimsuits.

"Instead, I'd buy up all the parking lots on Pacific Coast Highway and sell space for girl-watching. That would replace baseball as the national sport," he quipped.

Hampshire Sweeps-Off and Running

By ALLAN PRIAUX

CONCORD, N. H. (UPI)—Sweepstakes tickets are selling like hotcakes in New Hampshire, the only state in this century to authorize a sweepstakes. But hardly any Yankees are buying them.

More than $1.3 million worth of tickets have been sold so far at $3 apiece to persons willing to gamble on prizes which range up to $100,000.

Most of the buyers appear to come from surrounding states and a few cars from as far as Oregon are seen parked in front of the state's green front liquor stores, the only place besides race tracks they are sold.

"WE HAVEN'T even started yet," Sweeps Director Edward J. Powers claimed. "Wait until the summer tourists pour into this state, we'll at least triple our business."

The first tickets will be drawn from plastic drums in Salem, N. H., at Rockingham Park sometime in July.

There will be 332 tickets out of the first $1 million worth drawn, and each person holding a ticket that is drawn will win some sort of prize, from a few hundred dollars to a top of $100,000. The series will be repeated for each $1 million worth.

NEW HAMPSHIRE authorized a sweepstakes to raise money for education in the state which has no sales or income tax.

The proposal passed the legislature last year after heated debate and was approved by Democratic Gov. John W. King. The voters gave it a thumping endorsement last March in a referendum.

Here's how it will work: Each of the 332 three-year-old horses entered in the race will be assigned a ticket in a small rotating drum.

A larger drum will hold 333,333 tickets representing $1 million.

A horse ticket and a sweeps ticket will be matched two-by-two. Tickets on horses that actually run the race and the ones that win will be worth the most after the Sept. 12 race.

The name and address of the ticket buyer or beneficiary are on all tickets, which the store keeps, and buyers are given only an "acknowledgement" which they are not required to present to collect. Prizes will be paid on the basis of names and addresses.

The tickets are sold through electronic devices much like a receipt-giving machine in a retail store.

The tickets go into the machine and are picked up each evening by an armored car and stored in a bank vault in Manchester.

NEW HAMPSHIRE'S two senators and two congressmen co-sponsored bills in Washington to exempt the state's program from a steep 10 per cent federal excise gambling tax.

The state is believed to be the only one in the nation paying a direct tax to the federal government and the lawmakers feel the sweeps should be exempt, just as pari-mutuel tracks and other programs are.

Going by the book, the Internal Revenue Service has even ruled that the clerks selling the tickets must have $50 federal gambling tax stamp. Both taxes are paid under protest.

A FEAR that "big time gamblers and racketeers" would move into the Granite State was expressed by opponents of the sweeps.

"We've had no complaints or reports whatsoever as of the present time," said state police criminal division head Capt. John Conti. "But we're keeping our ears open."

Because the tickets are sold only in the liquor stores and at Rockingham Park and Hindsdale race tracks, the sweeps commission is itching to liberalize the laws.

It has urged hotels and motels to provide a "ticket buying service" for their guests the same way they provide a laundry service.

The law will be in for some amending at the 1965 legislature.

Show Judges Pick Top Dogs

Whippet Is First in Hound Class

By ELEANOR AVERY PRICE
L. P. T. Press Editor

Hounds, toy breeds, and non-sporting breeds promenaded Saturday before judges and thousands of spectators at Harbor City Kennel Club's two-day extravaganza being held at Long Beach Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Winners of the hound group, selected by Judge Maxwell Riddle of Ohio, was a whippet, Champion Courtenay Fleetfoot of Pennyworth, owned by Pennyworth Kennels of New Hampshire.

WINNER of the non-sporting breed, judged by James W. Trullinger, of Long Island, New York, was a miniature poodle, Champion Montmartre Maria Nina, owned by Mrs. Robert Tranchin of Dallas, Texas.

The host city of Long Beach took two first place prizes in the Best of Breeds Saturday judging. Champion Margaret's Rique Rebel, owned by Margaret W. Johnston, of 7174 Atlantic Ave., was named best Chihuahua (Smooth Coat); and Zorra of Aroi, owned by Ronald C. Hackett of 275 Junipero St., was adjudged best greyhound.

Working, sporting and terrier breeds will be featured today. Altogether, more than 3,600 entries of 106 breeds make this the largest dog show ever held in the nation.

NATION'S LARGEST DOG SHOW GETS UNDER WAY SATURDAY IN VETERANS' STADIUM

MOSTLY FAMILY PETS

Big Show Dogs Just Dogs

By LES RODNEY

Dog shows have been kidded so much that it came as a pleasant surprise to this non-knowledgeable multi-owner, assigned to browse around the Veterans Memorial Stadium Saturday, to find that in spite of all the mysteries of grooming, presenting and judging, dogs are still basically dogs, and their owners are quite likely to be nice people.

There, for instance, was one of the prize-winning basset hounds being led on his once-around-the-grounds victory walk. And when the smattering of applause broke out, don't you know the lugubrious, flop-eared, bleary-eyed champion stopped and shuddered violently in animation, exactly as your non-pedigreed dog and mine. In the huge roofed pavilions away from the judging areas, where the dogs just waited their turn, you could see children dreamily curled up next to their pet pooches, catching up on their sleep, while the dog like as not affectionately licked his or her face.

"IN FACT," one veteran dog shower said, "the conception that these are some special kind of dogs, different from others, is all wrong. Most of these dogs also happen to be house pets."

If you ask a dog owner a question, like "Pardon my ignorance, but what kind of dog is this?" you will get not only a courteous response, but an enthusiastic and detailed one.

The thin-faced, tiny-legged, nostril-quivering dogs called Italian greyhounds were touted as "exceptionally intelligent," by one owner. In truth they looked pretty smart putting on their hilarious fashion show, in which they displayed to considerable applause a variety of styles, including the topless bathing suit.

DESPITE THE physical contrast, a 190-pound Irish wolfhound was likewise enthused over by its owner as "exceptionally intelligent."

There were only 26 of this breed. "You won't find too many," the lady explained, "because you have to be a certain kind of person to have one. We had to move to a ranch, and buy a half-ton truck because a couple of them couldn't fit into a station wagon. And smart? We sometimes have to spell words in front of him to keep him from understanding!"

A whippet owner said they were pretty smart too, and second fastest runner to the greyhound. "Can do 40 miles an hour." But a little later a Borzoi fancier, showing one of those sleek Russian wolfhounds which ran with the Czars in the good old days, mentioned that not only was his gorgeous (and it was) Timon a true representative of this best-tempered dog, but could run 47 miles an hour.

A frantically combing poodle owner stopped long enough to snort: "Intelligent? They're human!"—which some people in the age of H-bombs might consider a contradiction in terms. It came as a shock when a Dalmatian owner, fondling one of the black-and-white "firehouse dogs," admitted it might not be the most intelligent. "Shrewd, though, and the most lovable in many ways."

ONE THING they all agreed on: This, the biggest of dog shows in American history, was a superbly planned and run affair, something for Long Beach to be proud of.

Oh yes. There was a dog photographer seeking business, with a big sign: "Let Your Dog Know He's Important!" But no drunk wandered up to a boxer and snarled, "Maybe he's a good boxer, but can he PUNCH?"

And there were no reports of any drop-outs from dog obedience school.

DEBATE FLARES ON SAFETY REGULATIONS

Rising Water-Sport Death Toll Rocks the Boat

By LOU JOBST
Press Editor

California—with nearly 850 miles of seashore and 2,000 square miles of inland waters—has become the flashpoint of the nation's "aquatic explosion." The state, which has three of every 10 pleasure boats in the U.S., has seen an unprecedented boom in recreational boating turn into a nightmare of disorder and disaster.

Last year nearly 250 Californians were killed or injured in motor boat accidents alone. The toll among other water sports enthusiasts was almost as appalling.

THE situation has brought a rising clamor to "do something" about water safety.

Suggested solutions have ranged from extremes of a call for massive government action, including state licensing of all boat operators, to a demand that authorities take a hands-off, "it'll work itself out" attitude toward the situation.

Aquatic experts such as representatives of 21 agencies who sponsored the first annual Western Boat and Aquatic Safety Congress at Santa Monica Thursday, Friday and Saturday offer no single, simple solution.

"Let's have no more laws governing boaters," said Rear Adm. N. W. Sprow, commandant of the 11th Coast Guard District at Long Beach and a featured speaker in the congress. "We have enough legislation and government control already."

Sprow believes the growing safety crisis can be curbed by adequate enforcement of present statutes and through "self-policing" by the boating industry. He eyes with suspicion a proposal to license boat operators in the manner auto drivers are now certificated, seeing it mainly as a scheme by bureaucrats to raise more tax dollars.

"I think we should withhold judgment until more facts are in," said Lachlan M. (Lock) Richards, chief of the California state division of Small Craft Harbors.

ABHORRING the idea of creating another "big bureaucracy" or legislationing away any more personal freedom, Richards believes no stand should be taken on state licensing or "any other possible corrective action" until a complete and thorough study of boating accidents and safety can be made. He also opposes more fees because "boat owners are already over-taxed."

Richards feels there is too much speculation and too little concrete information on the problem at present.

He is especially wary of fixing the major responsibility for boating accidents on any one group or set of causes until all the facts can be gathered, examined and correlated.

SPROW says most of the accidents are caused by male boaters between 25 and 44.

The Coast Guard officer, whose 1,000-man command ("about the same number of men as 20 years ago") encompasses all of Southern California, Arizona and a part of Nevada, is willing to admit more legislative control of boating "is on the way."

He even favors at least one major change in the "rules of the road," regulations governing rights-of-way on the high seas and other navigable waters.

SPROW is for giving "deep laden vessels in marked channels" the absolute right-of-way over small craft including sailboats. He considers present regulation which hold that a 1,100-foot-long tanker must yield to a tiny sailboat even in narrow channel entrances, as out-moded and illogical.

The admiral also would like to see more aids to navigation such as beacons and channel markers, especially on newly opening inland waterways, along with closer inspection and licensing of crews and vessels and more education—the battlecry of local boating societies for years—of the boating public.

HE ALSO favors a crackdown on bootleg boats-for-hire operators, men who operate passenger-carrying craft without Coast Guard inspection and certification, and would like to see something done about unscrupulous boat suppliers who use "false advertising" to make claims for equipment which it just won't do.

Sprow even promised to keep secret the name of any boater who would turn informant on uncertified-for-hire operators.

"This is a serious problem and one we have to stamp out," he asserted.

SPROW also lamented the large number of boaters who put to sea without adequate experience and minimum safety equipment.

Another speaker, Dr. Glenn H. Egstrom, director of the Performance Physiology Laboratory at UCLA, estimated up to four out of five "week-end athletes" might not be able to physically and mentally cope with the "extreme conditions" of their particular pastime.

A scuba diver, Dr. Egstrom said a study of 22 Los Angeles diving deaths revealed that panic and improper use of equipment were the leading causes of underwater fatalities.

able to swim, for instance, is foolishly jeopardizing his life.

THE UCLA professor said many persons, including fishermen, boaters and divers, fail to master the best techniques of water safety and do not avail themselves of the best safety equipment.

More safety training is needed in all fields, he said, so the aquatic sportsman can learn to "make the educated choice."

The meeting in the Miramar Hotel also featured an address by Commodore J. P. Obarski, legal officer of the 11th CG District; numerous safety and boating demonstrations and more than a dozen panel discussions ranging from speed and safety in drag racing to marine communications, towing and launching.

Symposia were also held on skin diving, water skiing, insurance and navigation.

(Malcolm Epley is on vacation. His column will be resumed upon his return.)

Civil Rights Act a Milestone—Not End of Road

WITH SENATE PASSAGE of the civil rights bill the nation reaches a significant milestone in the long journey toward equality, but the racial struggle does not automatically come to an end, of course.

In fact, for a time that struggle will probably grow even more intense as Negroes, their rights now guaranteed by a specific statute as well as by the U.S. Constitution, seek more boldly the practical benefits of their progress.

Prejudice cannot be erased by legislation or court edict. The rights which have been declared are yet to be secured. It will probably be as hard to end discrimination in restaurants, at union headquarters, and at the voter registration desk as it has been to integrate the schools.

NO DRAMATIC UPRISINGS are expected in California as the result of the new federal legislation, for in almost every respect California laws already are as strong or stronger than the new civil rights measure.

The greatest impact will be felt, obviously, in the southern states where discrimination has been a tradition and a way of life.

POLITICALLY, President Johnson should benefit by the passage, in his administration, of the strongest civil rights measure since reconstruction days. Americans generally have expressed themselves in the public opinion polls in favor of such legislation.

Passage would not have been possible, however, without strong Republican leadership in its behalf. Sen. Leverett Saltonstall, the Massachusetts Republican, is correct in saying that "this is truly a bipartisan endeavor in which both parties can properly take pride and satisfaction."

There will be stormy times in some parts of the nation when the government takes the steps necessary to enforce the law of the land. But if Americans join hands, as Democrats and Republicans did in working for the passage of the civil rights bill, the storm will be weathered. And afterwards, the day will be considerably brighter for all Americans.

Patient Is Sound

AN EXCELLENT TESTIMONY to Long Beach's economic health is the ability of the City Manager to offer a budget which proposes an expansion of services without a raise in the tax rate.

City Manager John Mansell's proposed budget has been made possible by good city administration and good civic promotion.

There's a tendency to criticize the way things are done in the home town. Certainly there's a lot of room for improvement in Long Beach. But clearly, there is much which is right. Enlightened zoning and building codes, good utility services, effective promotion of Long Beach's physical advantages have stimulated the city's economic growth and provided a broader tax base.

Long Beach, besides being physically a good place to dwell, also happens to be a good place to do business and earn a living. A doctor of economics would have to pronounce the patient sound and vigorous.

Reapportioning May Take Years

L. P. T. Sacramento Bureau

SACRAMENTO—California Senate reapportionment, apparently mandated by a U.S. Supreme Court decision on other state legislatures, still may be years off.

Earliest it is likely would be for the 1967 legislature. And Northern Californians, bitterly opposed to shuffling Northern-occupied Senate seats in favor of McCauley the more heavily populated Southland, will try to stall longer if possible.

A tipoff on which way the geographical winds are blowing: Gov. Brown.

Brown, a close student of constitutional law, stated clearly that "California must reapportion its Senate" shortly after the historic court decision was handed down.

To a Northern California senator, that was like waving a red flag at a bull. Brown was blistered by Northern California lawmakers, and the northern press took a dim view of his interpretation.

Within 24 hours, Brown softened his position considerably.

He said he had agreed to withhold taking any stand on reapportionment until the Senate Judiciary Committee had a chance to study the impact of the court decision.

Also, the governor blasted the Supreme Court for intruding on the province of the legislative process.

This took political courage for Brown to take on the U.S. Supreme Court. The governor is thought to aspire to either the U.S. Supreme Court bench or the vice presidency.

But regardless of his role as a close student of the constitution, Gov. Brown is a San Francisco-spawned politician. And all of Northern California has declared war on the Supreme Court decision.

Northerners are crossing their fingers, hoping that the U.S. Supreme Court will exclude California from its ruling because the California electorate in 1962 rejected a proposition to add seven more Senate seats in the Southland.

Also, Gov. Brown took note of the fact that some rural states will try to upset the court ruling by initiating a federal constitutional amendment.

Why the delay in California reapportionment? Southern California Senators are outnumbered 4 to 1 by northerners, and the North wants to keep it that way as long as possible. However, the Southland controls the Assembly, where representation is by population rather than county lines.

Many prominent Northern California senators would bite the political dust if the Senate is reapportioned on a population basis. The casualties would be especially high among the senators who crusaded to revoke Long Beach's tidelands trust.

Sens. Virgil O'Sullivan, Fred Farr and Stephen Teale all are from under-sized senate districts. They probably will be redistricted out of a job when reapportionment comes.

If the court order sticks to peg Senate districts on a population basis, the future California senate district would cover an area of 400,000 population.

Long Beach area would be in line for one and possibly two senators of its own. Orange County would be entitled to two senators. Los Angeles County probably would wind up with 17 senators.

In all cases, new Southland Senate districts would come from the thinly-populated north.

Monterey County, Sen. Farr's home district, is only a little more than half the population of Long Beach. Yet its 193,351 citizens rate one full senator under California's present apportionment.

Sen. O'Sullivan represents a district of only 52,625 population. The 28th Senatorial District, composed of tiny Alpine, Inyo and Mono Counties, has a population of only 14,000 persons.

Most practical way to reapportion the 40-member Senate would be to provide one Senate seat for every two districts in the 80-seat Assembly.

But that drastic plan would wipe out most of the far-north senators. And the Sacramento betting is that incumbent northern senators will insist on a Senate-packing program that will salvage as many Northern seats as possible. That way the South would get new seats, but many northern incumbents would be able to retain their offices. Only taxpayers might oppose enlarging the Senate.

HOWEVER, the Senate-repack scheme would require approval of the electorate for a constitutional amendment. The current constitution limits the size of the Senate to 40 members.

Delays for a constitutional amendment would work in favor of interests that want to keep intact the present Senate. That way the 1965 legislature could not act finally on any reapportionment plan.

Rather, it merely would refer a possible future reapportionment plan to voters. The electorate probably wouldn't vote on the measure until November of 1965. Lawmakers could debate the issue again in 1966 or 1967.

In the meantime, there is more time for some one to overturn or invalidate the 1964 Supreme Court decision. And in that vein, delay-and-stall will be the order of the day for reapportionment foes.

Platoon Politics Puts New People in Posts of Power

I. P. T. Political Editor

THE PLAYERS change. There's the fairly normal political attrition from election to election, from vogue to vogue. But California has adopted this season a platoon system and it's going to be a bit more difficult distinguishing and identifying the new faces.

State Republicans fielded the big new platoon in selecting the Goldwater delegation over the Rockefeller slate. Both these slates had something in common—they each had about 15 persons who had served on the 1960 Nixon delegation. In Rocky's group, beyond the 15 repeaters, were numerous other familiar names—generally considered to be the party regulars.

There'll be a lot of new faces in the California seats at the Cow Palace next month. Reporters are bound to miss the easy talk with the old familiar contacts. But of course that was the whole idea of Goldwater supporters—to put in a different team.

Missing from the San Francisco swirl will be Sen. Kuchel, that city's ex-Mayor Christopher, former Gov. Knight, former Labor Secretary James Mitchell, State Sen. Jack McCarthy, Assemblymen Bagley, Marks, Milias, Britschgi, Veneman and Floury, Congressman Mallard, former state GOP chairman John Krebhiel and Laughlin Waters, former State Treasurer Ron Button, national committeeman Joe Martin and former Assembly Speaker Luther Lincoln.

GOLDWATER'S WINNERS include delegation chairman Bill Knowland, Secretary of State Frank Jordan, State Sen. Jack Schrade, Assemblymen Don Mulford and E. Richard Barnes, L.A. County Sheriff Peter Pitchess, former U.S. Treasurer Ivy Baker Stevens, former Congressman Pat Hillings, L.A. City Atty. Roger Arnebergh and former Assemblymen Harold Levering, Joe Shell and Bruce Reagan.

Not only are many of the Goldwater delegates (other than those above) unfamiliar to the press but may stay that way by their own choice if the frequently voiced right-wing mistrust of reporters is not mitigated.

New faces of 1964 continue. Now comes Pierre Salinger, not even in the state's index of potentials as recently as last March when he made his lion-like entrance and took his lion's share of the vote for California's available U.S. Senate seat.

SALINGER'S DEFEAT of Controller Alan Cranston set back the California Democratic Council in a degree still to be assessed. But several CDC people and clubs have defected and a new Democratic Volunteers Committee has been organized to hue to a line apparently drawn by Assembly Speaker Jesse Unruh.

New faces are a certainty in national committee posts of both parties. Long Beach's Ann Bowler, who chaired the impressive county effort for Goldwater, is the committee-woman designate for the GOP. Atty. Gardiner Johnson of Piedmont will be the committeeman.

Democrats meet next Saturday to name their committee people, the offices now held by Atty. Gen. Stanley Mosk and former U.S. Treasurer Elizabeth Smith Gatov. State Demo Chairman Eugene Wyman seems a likely choice. State FEPC Chairman Carmen Warschaw hasn't given up her fight, through all of this year, for the other spot.

WE'LL SEE PLENTY of new faces at the state GOP convention this year, after the national convention, as a result of the packing bill of the recent legislature. Designed to head off a party takeover by Birch Society members and other far-right disciples, the law gives incumbent Republicans extra state committee appointments to smother Birch inroads in the June primary.

And finally, within a few days we'll see a new shuffle here at home in the makeup of the Democratic State Committee as Assemblyman Joseph M. Kennick and nominees Michal Cullen, 32nd Congressional District, and Willard Hastings, 39th Assembly District, name their choices to the party's official group.

Our Challenge Called Unfair

EDITOR: Your May 25th and June 15th editorials are a classic and sad display of the misused power of the press. The "challenges" you so grandly make are carefully worded offers that constitute no financial risk to your paper and yet at the same time, without careful reading, seem to make you a champion of fair play and someone else a liar or worse.

I'm sure that $10,000 could easily be raised to back up an equally worded challenge to your paper to prove that you have never sold a paper to or accepted an ad from a Communist and that if you are unable to prove to the satisfaction of the State Attorney General that this is untrue, then your readers are to conclude that your paper is in favor of communism.

Such a challenge and such a conclusion would of course be unfair to you—and so, gentlemen, are your editorials which make such "grandstand plays."

Instead of the State Attorney General's spending his time in judging your carefully rigged editorial challenges, I'm sure he can spend his time to better advantage investigating the unfortunate effects on this community and many others where a few men have gained a monopoly over the press with the result that only one newspaper is printed.

Opposes Pay Hike for Congressmen

President Johnson, in declaring War on Poverty has a very good place to start in his own back yard.

Congress wants a $7,500 pay increase for our poverty-ridden congressmen.

In one of the issues of your paper it was stated it is costing the taxpayer $170,000 per year to keep each member of Congress in Washington, with all the special privileges they enjoy, and there is no law which requires their presence in any session of Congress.

I will not cast my vote for any congressman who votes for this increase.

If the pay is too little, why will they spend an enormous amount to get the office? They vote a tax cut and at the same time vote to increase the national debt. It doesn't seem to make sense.

State Senate Not Needed

EDITOR: I believe the time has come to completely eliminate the State Senate and change over to a one-house legislature.

Monday's U. S. Supreme Court decision prohibits use of the population vs. area check-and-balance system. Let's not have two houses completely duplicating the same work and representing the same people in the same way.

WASHINGTON — Sen.

Barry Goldwater of Arizona, Republican, gave the nation on Thursday night in the United States Senate an example of a man who would rather risk the loss of a presidential nomination, or even an election, than surrender his convictions to political expediency.

This is so unusual in public life that, irrespective of whether his speech announcing that he would vote against the "civil rights" bill disappointed a large number of voters, many of them will have to agree that this was the courageous act of a statesman. For the Arizona Senator made it plain that he seeks for his country an adherence to the fundamental principles of constitutional law. He is opposed to the opportunistic expediency which has lately emerged in the handling of the "civil rights" controversy.

Mr. Goldwater says flatly that he favors civil rights and is "unalterably opposed to discrimination or segregation on the basis of race, color, or creed, or on any other basis," but he wants federal law to achieve reform by the methods prescribed in the Constitution itself. He doesn't believe Congress had the right under present constitutional provisions to pass the so-called "public accommodations" sections of the bill or the portion of the measure which deals with federal regulations of the employment practices of private businesses.

Mr. Goldwater voted earlier in the week for the Humphrey-Dirksen amendments because he believed they improved the House bill and presented a better approach. He knew the Senate bill would pass and hence he gave his vote to see that a better bill than that which passed the House might be enacted. But as for the measure that finally came up for passage, Mr. Goldwater felt that to put himself on record as favoring enactment of what he believes is an unconstitutional measure would mean that he had failed to live up to his oath of office. As he sees it, no member of Congress who conscientiously reasons that a bill is unconstitutional should vote for it.

It is to be noted that the Arizona Senator said explicitly that, if it were not for the two sections that he feels are unconstitutional, he would gladly have voted for the measure itself because he is opposed to racial discrimination.

The question now is what effect will Mr. Goldwater's vote have on his political fortunes.

GOP-Dixiecrat Alliance May Split

WASHINGTON—A significant byplay occurred on the Senate floor last week which could mean the end of the powerful alliance between Northern Republicans and Southern Democrats. This alliance, never formalized by written agreement but very potent just the same, has dominated the Senate for a quarter of a century.

PEARSON

First put together by the late Sen. Bob Taft of Ohio, it decreed that Northern Republicans would support the South on racial and civil rights votes. This is how Hell's Canyon was defeated, and why the South has so consistently opposed wage, labor, and social legislation.

The two leaders of this alliance in recent years have been Sen. Dick Russell of Georgia, the elder statesman of the South and the soulful senator from Illinois, Everett Dirksen, the GOP leader.

But last week, when Russell introduced his amendment requiring the civil rights bill to go to a nationwide referendum for approval, it was the other leader of the alliance, Dirksen, who delivered the most crushing blow.

"Are we to reject and repudiate the action of Congress after all these days of deliberation?" he asked.

And referring to the House of Representatives, which has already passed the civil rights bill, Dirksen continued: "What an affront to the other legislative branch of government to say, 'You gentlemen had the gall to stand up and be counted on the record, but we will not do so. We will

"Mr. President, I shall not make that confession. Somewhere in Shakespeare it is written: 'Cowards die many times before their deaths, the valiant never taste death but once.'"

Listening to Dirksen's speech were many senators, because this was an important test vote. Among them was his Democratic colleague from Illinois, Paul Douglas. Douglas and Dirksen have been bitter political opponents.

But Douglas whispered to his neighbor, Sen. Jennings Randolph, D-W. Va., "I think I should congratulate him."

"Go over and shake his hand right now before you lose the impulse," whispered Randolph.

Douglas did so. On the floor of the Senate the two political enemies from Illinois made up.

Three men died while I was abroad, men who in their own unique way played important parts in molding modern America.

One was Don Gelay of Cambridge City, Ind., who has saved thousands of dairy farmers countless hours and aching backs by initiating the Chore-Boy milking parlor system, whereby cows eat and are milked at a higher level than the dairyman stands.

Another was Matty Fox, who first backed Indonesia's drive for independence and pioneered pay-as-you-go television. The critics will say, in view of President Sukarno's irresponsible gymnastics, that Indonesia should never have been given its independence. And the big TV networks still say that pay-as-you-go TV is a dangerously subversive influence. But the fact is that you cannot stop the march of independent nations. And you eventually won't be able to stop the public's right to pick what it wants to see on TV rather than have three network presidents, together with a slew of advertisers who are interested in dough, not public morality, decide what kind of crime, sex, and scandal the people should view.

Matty Fox died before his time. But eventually the television goals he fought for will be achieved.

The third molder of modern America was Morris Caltritz, who, second to Major L'Enfant, the designer of Washington, probably did most to build up the District of Columbia.

But despite wealth, he never lost the common touch, never forgot old friends, never was too busy to spend hours working with Big Brothers and the Boys Clubs.

BILL SUMNER

High Court Dealt Arrogant Slap to Voters in Colorado

WASHINGTON—In its historic judgment on the apportionment of state legislatures, the Supreme Court decreed—among many other things—that the voters of a state have no right to form constitutions and legislative systems that don't comply with the theories of the court.

SUMNER

Many other observations will be made about this ruling, possibly the most controversial of the Warren Court, but the sheer arrogance by which the majority of six, led by Justice Warren, gave the backs of their hands—for one example—to the voters of Colorado is almost matchless.

It is not difficult to agree in principle that the urban voters of Virginia, Alabama and Maryland have received a deliberate and decisive swindling over the years at the hands of the rural bosses. And Alabama, for one, was in definite violation of its own constitution by not setting up both of its legislative houses on a population basis.

But the voters of Colorado, in a referendum on legislative reapportionment in November, 1962, voted decisively—305,700 to 172,725—to maintain the existing apportionment of their

Senate, which is based on a combination of population and geography.

At the same time, they defeated, 311,749 to 149,822, an amendment which would have set up both of their houses on a straight population basis.

"We hold that the fact that a challenged legislative apportionment plan was approved by the electorate is, without federal constitutional significance," the majority opinion held. It was intimated, too, in the decision, that Colorado's voters hadn't really understood what they were voting about.

While it is going to be extremely difficult to find any specific guidelines as to what the court will uphold in the litigation that is bound to follow, Justice Harlan, in his long and bitter dissent, noted that considerations which are now unconstitutional in matters of legislative apportionment now—by this decision—include:

History, economic or other sorts of group interests, area, geographical considerations, a desire to insure effective representation for sparsely settled areas, availability of access of citizens to their representatives, theories of bicameralism except those approved by the court, occupation, an attempt to balance urban and rural power and the preference of a majority of voters in the state.

"I know of no principle of logic or practical or theoretical politics, still less any constitutional principle," he wrote, "which establishes all or any of these exclusions. Certain it is that the court's opinion does not establish them."

Of all six decisions (New York, Delaware, Alabama, Maryland, Virginia and Colorado), Harlan stated they gave support to a current mistaken view of the Constitution and the constitutional function of the court.

"THIS VIEW," he said, "in a nutshell, is that every major social ill in this country can find its cure in some constitutional principle, and that this court should 'take the lead' in promoting reform when other branches of government fail to act. The Constitution is not a panacea for every blot upon the public welfare, nor should this court, ordained as a judicial body, be thought of as a general haven for reform movements."

"... when, in the name of constitutional interpretation, the court adds something to the Constitution that was deliberately excluded from it (he cited the debate on the 14th Amendment), the court in reality substitutes its view of what should be so for the amending process."

Sixth Grade Education Isn't Sure Evidence of Literacy

United Press International
IT IS NOT NECESSARY to take one side or the other in the civil rights dispute to understand that the U.S. Senate voted against reason and common sense in establishing a sixth-grade education as evidence of literacy in voter qualification.

A sixth-grade education is not evidence of literacy in any circumstances, nor can a Senate vote make it so. The question arose this week on an amendment proposed by Sen. Olin D. Johnston, D-S.C. Johnston proposed to delete from the bill the provision establishing a sixth-grade education as evidence of literacy. To be literate is to be able to read and to write.

The available evidence is that too many American kids are not properly literate when they leave high school and that too many universities and colleges have been compelled to establish remedial reading courses for entering freshmen. This, of course, is a scandal of national proportions and too little known.

When Johnston offered his amendment last Monday in the Senate he argued in its support that for the federal government to establish voter qualifications would be an unconstitutional exercise of power. On that argument the Senate smacked him down by a vote of 74 to 18. The Senate was in no mood to hear about constitutional obstacles to the civil rights bill.

Johnston might have obtained better attention if he had argued that, constitutional or not, the sixth-grade provision was preposterous on its face if it presumed to deal with literacy. The Reading Reform Foundation in New York estimates that three-quarters of American school children are being subjected to primitive teaching methods in which the child bypasses the alphabet on his way to read.

"This has proved ruinous in practice in the last 40 years and is largely responsible for the alarming fact that over one-quarter of our draftees must now be rejected as illiterate," the foundation has said.

The purpose of the sixth-grade clause, of course, is to support the constitutional provision that no one shall be denied the vote because of race or color. There must be better ways to enforce that provision than to invite illiterates to the polls.

An employer named Herbert Worley spoke last year in Jackson, Miss., before the State Association of School Administrators. He said he had received job applications from Mississippi high school graduates who could not spell the name of the school they had attended. Other such graduates, Worley said, were unable to spell sufficiently to fill out an application form. High school graduates!

Such individuals are illiterates and not fit to vote. Johnston's constitutional argument against the sixth-grade provision will reach the Supreme Court in time and may prevail there. If that provision could be hailed before the court of common sense it surely would lose because it states as a fact something that is not true.

CONSTRUCTION DUE TO START IN AUGUST

Booming City Speeds Civic Center Buildings

By BOB BAUGHEY

Still out in front as Orange County's fastest growing city, Fountain Valley, this week was matching needs with deeds as its new civic center began to take physical form.

Framework now is up for the new city hall and library on the five-acre site to be developed as the center on Slater Avenue east of Brookhurst Street.

Entailed is an outlay for both buildings of $263,929 in construction and site development. Other municipal facilities, including a police building, are in the offing.

THE CITY HALL, of concrete slab, brick masonry, glass, redwood siding and stucco construction, will have 10,743 square feet of space.

$100 Million Complex to be Built at Orange

By BOB GEIVET

ORANGE — A $100 million shopping center, motel — apartment complex and hospital facility will be developed on 167 acres west of Orange County General Hospital, near where the county supervisors had suggested building a multi-story jail.

Anticipation of this big project, it was learned Saturday, is the reason the City of Orange recently rejected consideration of any proposals to build the jail structure on Manchester Avenue (formerly Placentia Avenue) due west of the recently completed six-story 360-bed hospital.

The Holiday Inns, which has a string of motels across the country, will build a 200-room motel on 10 acres north of Chapman Avenue, across the street from the 157-acre property once designed as "international marketland" for stores and shops for the world's products. It will be an eight-story structure.

INITIAL SEGMENT of the development will be a 70-acre shopping center at Garden Grove Freeway and Manchester Avenue. It will include a three-story department store of 225,000 square feet for J.C. Penney Co., and satellite stores.

James Moore of the Holiday Inns said that his company owns the property with Kaiser Aluminum, Great Lakes Carbon Co., and Rancho Palos Verdes Corp., among others supplying financing.

This combination, he said, has developed 900 regional shopping centers through the United States, including Oak Ridge in Tennessee.

Moore said that the ultimate plan, designed for a 10-year projection, is for 20 high-rise structures for plush apartments and offices, and for a 200-bed hospital.

Survey Keys to Big Project at San Pedro

By VERN ANTHONY
Progress Editor

Hard on the heels of an economic survey by prominent San Fernando Valley developers which showed the Harbor Area to have high potentials comes an announced purchase by Laurel Crest, Inc., of the 100 acre Park Western housing center at San Pedro.

A five year redevelopment program reportedly includes high rise structures up to 12 stories, a shopping center and condominium apartments.

Purchase price was $5 million, it was said, John F. Firestone is vice president of the purchasing firm. Seller was Guy Bartlett and associates. Transfer of Laurel Crest property at Studio City was included in the deal.

Robert R. Falconer of Studio City was listed as owner of Laurel Crest. He has been an active developer in the Valley.

A canyon at the northeast corner of Park Western Drive and Western Avenue will be filled and leveled to gain some two acres for development. More will be filled later.

A 25-acre area north of Park Western Drive will be cleared for a thousand condominium units to be in structures up to 12 stories tall.

Park Western includes some 406 apartment units built during World War II for defense workers. It then was known as Channel Heights.

About 13 years ago, Jack Marantz and associates bought the center from the federal government on a bid of $1,111,111.

Marantz started the development of the 15-acre Park Plaza shopping center on the south side of Park Western Drive, and then sold his interest in Park Plaza to Ernest W. Hahn, Jerry Moss and associates.

Marantz about a year ago sold Park Western to Bartlett and associates of Beverly Hills.

GROUND BREAKING on the first unit is expected this fall, he said.

The Orange City Council will consider the development plans at its meeting July 7, according to City Planning Director George Kovatch.

Moore said that if the council approves, the deadline for groundbreaking can be met providing engineering plans progress on schedule.

$20 Million Contract Let to Matson

Matson Terminals, Inc., has been awarded a two-year military contract in excess of $20 million for stevedoring and terminals services in the San Francisco Bay area. It was announced in Washington by the office of Sen. Clair Engle.

Robert J. Pfeiffer, president of Matson Terminals, Inc., said the contract involves the handling of more than 1,000,000 tons of cargo during the two-year period.

It calls for stevedoring and terminals work at the Oakland Army Terminal and for stevedoring work at the Daikland Naval Supply Center and the Alameda Cold Storage Plant, a joint Army-Navy facility.

A small amount of stevedoring work also will be done at the Alameda Naval Station and the Mare Island Naval Shipyard.

2 Van Camp Posts Filled

Van Camp Sea Food Co., Port of Long Beach, has announced appointment of Robert L. Eskridge as vice president in charge of marketing and H. A. Garbanati as vice president in charge of sales.

Eskridge, director of Product Management and Advertising, Grocery Products Division, Ralston Purina Co., St. Louis, will assume his position effective July 1. G. C. Van Camp Jr., president, announced.

Garbanati is presently national sales manager of Van Camp.

At the parent company in St. Louis, Warren Shapleigh, vice president in charge of Grocery Products Division, announced that product managers and others now reporting to Eskridge will report to Joseph V. Getlin, director of marketing.

Eskridge will be headquartered in Long Beach with responsibility for all product management, advertising, new product development, market research, and allied functions. Van Camp said.

The Van Camp Sea Food Co. became a division of Ralston Purina Co. upon its acquisition in 1963.

Estate Planning Program Slated

The Orange County-Los Angeles Chapter of Chartered Life Underwriters will sponsor the annual Estate Planning Day Tuesday at the Magnolia Room of the Disneyland Hotel.

This year's subject will be "The Human Aspects of Estate Planning."

A panel of four speakers will consist of Judge Raymond Thompson, Superior Court judge in Orange County; Edward J. Mintz, C.L.U., vice president of the Million Dollar Round Table Foundation for 1962-63; John R. Suckling, attorney; and William S. McClanahan, United California Bank, trust officer and author of articles on estate planning.

Nuclear Power--for Peaceful Uses

Watson Co. Airs Plans for Industrial Center; Letters Go to Neighbors

Plans for a 600-acre, $150 million industrial center which "will bring countless benefits to much of the southern part of Los Angeles County" were announced Saturday by Watson Land Co.

The development, to be known as the Watson Industrial Center, will be located about one mile west of Long Beach. The site is bisected by the San Diego Freeway and lies about midway between the Harbor and Long Beach freeways.

Watson, in an unusual gesture for major land-owners, coupled its official press announcement of the new center with a letter to the more than 3,000 residents of the area immediately surrounding the site, describing the company's plans and the benefits the Center will provide.

THE CENTER "will mean thousands of new job opportunities and millions of new dollars in local payrolls, purchases and property taxes," according to William T. Huston, president of Watson Land.

He noted that the development and construction program alone—estimated to cost at least $150 million over the next several years—"will pump several million dollars into the local economy, and when the Center is completed, the companies in it will pay at least $3 million annually in local property taxes."

Huston also emphasized that the Center will be "one of the most attractive industrial centers in America."

"There will be wide streets, deep setbacks and extensive open area around each building; loading areas will be screened, and every lease will contain landscaping requirements."

PLANNING, development and sales will be directed by the Williams J. Morgan Co., 100-year-old, nationally known engineering, development and construction firm in Los Angeles.

Construction of improvements already has begun. These will include a drainage system which the owners claim will be "unsurpassed by any in the state," underground utilities and streets.

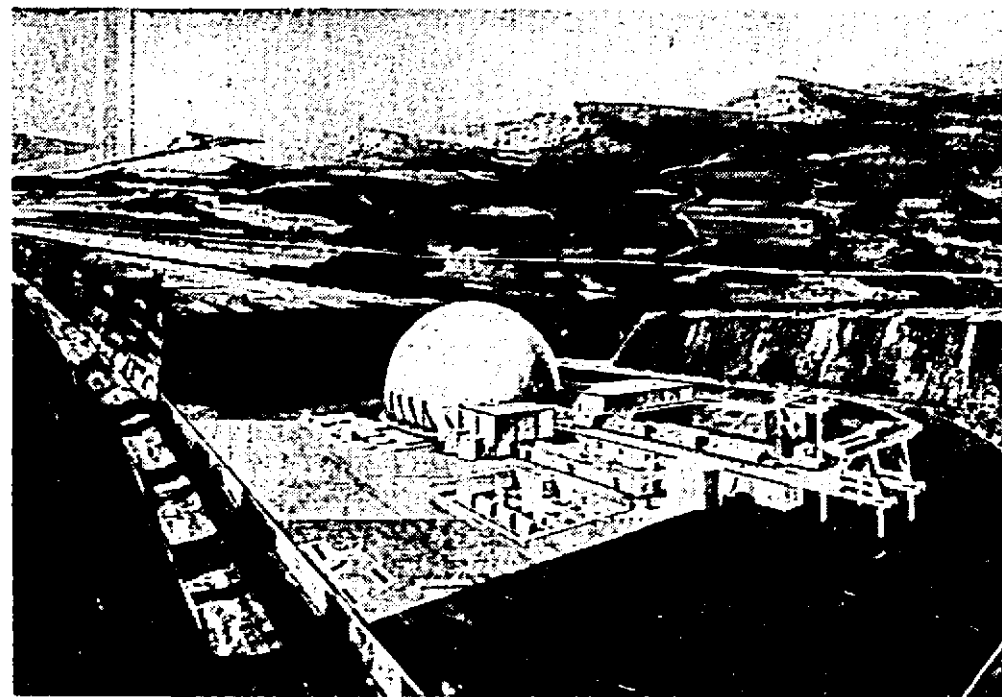

Hustons said the developers currently are negotiating with several prospective tenants, but declined to identify them.

The Watson property in the Center will be leased, not sold, Huston said. In addition, the Moran Company will erect buildings to tenant requirements, for lease.

THE CENTER has been master-planned for a "balanced mixture of light, medium and heavy industry," Huston said. "At this very early stage, we are anticipating more than 100 different tenants."

The Center will be developed in several phases, Huston explained. Site preparation for the first phase includes installation of the storm drain system — "at a cost of $750,000"—placement of nearly 200,000 cubic yards of fill, laying of track for rights-of-way and construction of 60-foot-wide paved streets.

The land for the Center is one of the last remaining parcels of a Spanish land grant that is still in the hands of descendants of the original grantee, Huston said. It is part of a 70,000-acre grant made in 1781 to Juan Jose Dominguez, a Spanish soldier who participated in the Portola expedition.

Edison Sets Up Home Modernization Center

By MILDRED K. FLANARY 100 Long Beach Blvd.
A P-T Food News

Most homemakers are "at home" in their kitchen—but is YOUR kitchen at home, a convenient one? If not, the following news is written just for you! You can now shop for a new kitchen, just as easily as you can for a lamb chop.

The Southern California Edison Co. has established a Home Modernization Center, designed to serve as a "one-stop-shop" for families interested in remodeling their homes. Edison officials gave us our first glimpse of this shopping "innovation" at a recent dinner and press party.

Sponsored by Edison, the center will be open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., and will provide complete modernization assistance from the idea stage through the completion stage including follow-up services. It is located in the Southern California Edison Building.

"IN LONG BEACH alone, there are nearly 100,000 homes 15 years or older," said C. R. Simpson Jr., Edison's manager of marketing. "This is typical of many areas in Southern California, and it is Edison's desire to provide assistance to families wishing to modernize their homes."

A trained modernization consultant will be on hand to offer personal assistance as well as to implement a carefully planned remodeling program.

Featured at the modernization center will be a model kitchen where the newest models of major electrical appliances will be displayed in an in-use situation. In addition, there will be modern kitchen cabinets showing various styles and illustrating storage ideas as well as a showcase for new trends in lighting.

A REFERENCE library will include up-to-date copies of national and regional shelter magazines, booklets on complete or specialized remodeling, as well as pertinent related housing product information. In addition, persons may browse through a variety of brochures and specification sheets on all current models of electrical appliances and products.

Follow-up services, if requested, will include a home call by an Edison home economist to acquaint the family of the proper use of new electric appliances.

"Future plans call for Edison to construct Modernization Centers in other areas of its 65,000 square-mile territory," Simpson said.

Next center to open will be at Inglewood.

Mrs. Sharon Gilbert will be counselor at the Long Beach Center, and Miss Alice Cully will be counselor at Inglewood.

Pen Company Buys Bendix Aircraft Plant

Sidney "Lindy" Linden, president of the Lindy Pen Co., has announced acquisition of the 85,000 square foot Bendix Aircraft plant, located at 7250 Laurel Canyon Blvd., in North Hollywood.

The new building will house the entire Lindy Pen operation which is presently spread into seven separate buildings in Culver City.

The purchase, which includes nine acres of land, will allow further expansion of plant facilities and will enable a consolidation of operations. Lindy plans to be completely installed in the North Hollywood plant by mid-summer.

family dwellings, having a valuation of $34,801,875.

Permits for construction of 15 duplexes and 19 apartments, with a combined valuation of $995,000 also have been issued.

City Planning Director Stanley R. Mansfield issues "growth" statistics every month—when he finds time. Excerpts from his latest bulletin (June 1) show the city's current population as 7,552. The total population expectancy upon completion and occupancy of dwelling units on recorded final tract maps is given as 13,944.

BUILDERS recently predicted a total of 20,000 homes housing a population of 55,000 in the not-to-distant future. There now are 22 developers active in Fountain Valley.

The imminent population figure, incidentally, based on completion and occupancy of existing dwelling units under construction, reflects an increase since the April, 1960, federal census, of 620 per cent. The increase since the first new tract was under construction in July, 1962, is 580 per cent.

Rossmoor Theater to Open July 15

A new Fox theater, with a distinct design and accents the unique drive-through entryway, will open July 15, with a premiere in the Rossmoor Shopping Center, Los Alamitos, according to J. Walter Bantau, director of construction for Fox West Coast Theaters, a subsidiary of National General Corp.

Burke, Kober and Nicolais, Los Angeles architectural and engineering firm, designed the 838-seat theater.

The entryway curves directly in front of the theater entrance, making it easier for patrons to disembark at the ticket window. For extra convenience, the architects added a unique concrete canopy which shades the entire building front, and the drive-in approach.

A SPECIAL metal fascia emphasizes the canopy's design.

L.B. Firm Wins High Architectural Award

A Long Beach architectural firm was among those accorded recognition last week at the National Convention of the American Institute of Architects meeting in St. Louis.

The Killingsworth, Brady, Smith & Associate Case Study House for Arts and Architecture magazine was judged one of the 16 finest buildings in the United States in 1964.

This Award of Merit architectural recognition was given to just this one project in Southern California this year.

Only three projects were awarded prizes in California, and of the total list of 16, two of these were houses.

Other winners from the 439 in competition included schools, office buildings, an airport, an urban plaza development, a retirement community, an apartment house, and a university assembly hall. Edward A. Killingsworth, F.A.I.A., partner in the firm, located at 3833 Long Beach Blvd., went to St. Louis to receive the award. He stated that this house, located at 82 Rivo Alto Canal in the Naples section of Long Beach, now has received five major awards.

THEY ARE: honor award from the Western States A.I.A. and Sunset Magazine; honor award National A.I.A. and House and Home Magazine; honor award from Southern California Chapter of A.I.A., and the selection of the house by the editors of Architectural Record as one of the 20 best contemporary houses in the United States in 1963.

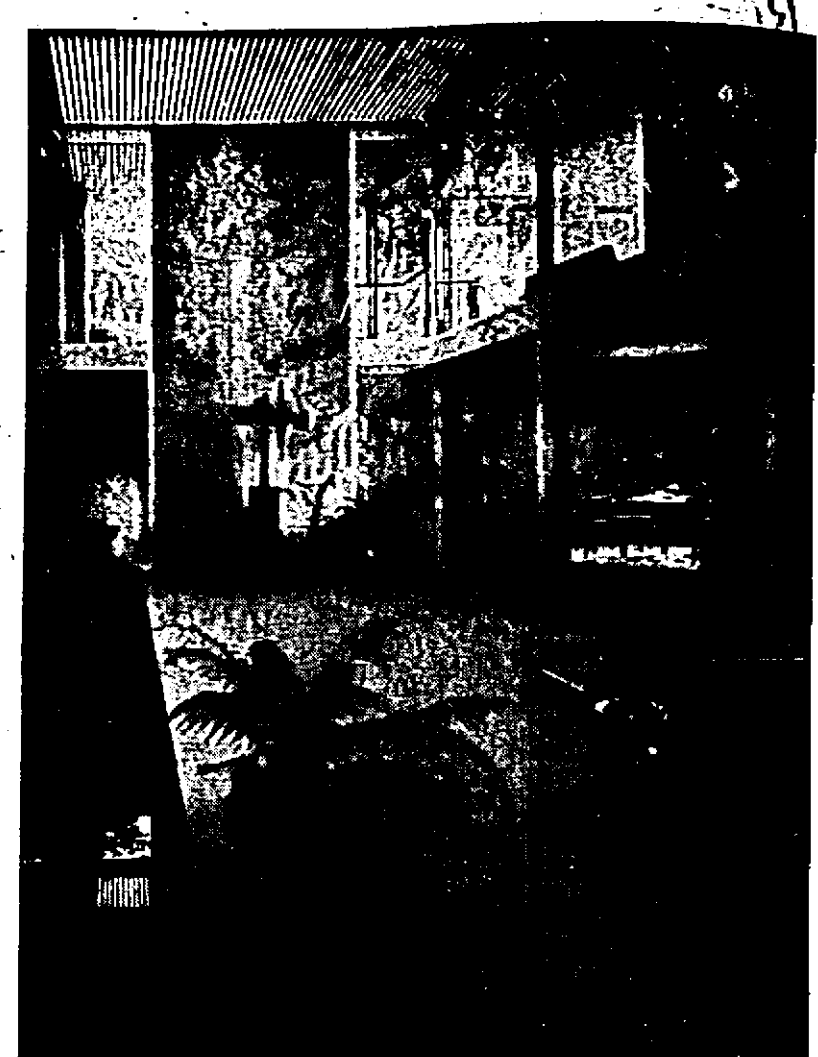

was the one given in St. Louis.

The house, owned by Edward Frank, is unique in that it is on a 45'x80' canal front lot.

It features an entrance door 17 feet high to a two-story courtyard. The jury described the house as "An elegant, small house which makes space count to the maximum. The second floor and living and dining rooms open visually on the two-story central entrance. A sophisticated environment is achieved with simplicity of material and detail. The highly restricted site is imaginatively handled."

THIS IS the 29th A.I.A. award for the firm, now minus Smith in the partnership. Of these, six were from the national program. The firm also has won four other major awards for its work, including first prize at the Sao Paulo Biennial in Brazil in competition with 50 countries.

Current work in the Killingsworth-Brady & Associates office includes the completion of the new Kahala Hilton Hotel in Hawaii, the Cultural Complex for the California World's Fair, the New Religious Center for the University of Southern California at Riverside.

NEW YORK (UPI)—For areas around trees, under eaves, and close to walls, where not planted with shrubs, ground covers can be beautiful and work-free, according to the American Association of Nurserymen.

Ground covers do very well in shaded areas not particularly suitable for other plants, the association said.

Woodstone Homes Are on Large Lots

A common complaint among home seekers in Southern California is that lot sizes are so constricted. Alex Graham, president of Marketing Management Co., real estate sales agents, states that this is a legitimate source of home-buyer dissatisfaction.

"Even extremely costly homes are sited on relatively small lots," says Graham. "This points up the land shortage in the Southland, and present trends indicate the situation will not improve. This condition does not exist at Woodstone La Mirada."

Woodstone La Mirada Homes are situated on generous lots of 1/4 or 1/2-acre. The development is located in the exclusive Blue Hills of La Mirada, representing a prime land choice, with room for custom homes of luxury dimension. The space available to residents is such that the area is zoned for horses.

WOODSTONE LA Mirada is a luxury residential community of 37 air-conditioned homes. Representing a total investment of over $1.4 million. The Balanced Power homes feature 16 exterior elevations with up to 2787 square feet of floor space. Prices range from $34,500 to $49,000 and trades are considered.

Graham announces that the homes can be purchased at a down payment of 5% of the total figure.

Woodstone La Mirada is located on Imperial Hwy., between La Habra Road and Luitwiler Ave.

Gets Customer Relations Post

George A. Crum, 3432 Huntley Drive, Los Alamitos, former Long Beach district sales manager for Southern California Edison Co., has been appointed manager of customer relations for the company, according to an announcement by William C. Drewry, vice president.

Crum, who served as district sales manager in this area in 1959-60, has been associated with Edison for 13 years. His first assignment, in 1951, was as junior power consultant headquartered at the company's Whittier district office.

He was promoted to power consultant in May 1952 and served in that capacity at Whittier, Huntington Park and Vernon before being appointed district sales manager at Inglewood in 1956.

In February of 1959 he was transferred to Long Beach and served as DSM here until March of 1960, when he was assigned to Edison's general office in Los Angeles as commercial assistant. He has been area development consultant four years.

Over $14 Million in Land Sales Shown

Walker & Lee, Inc. land sales in escrow currently total over $14 million, it was announced by William Armstrong, head of the company's acreage department.

He said he attributes the company's record high volume to three factors: skyrocketing land prices coupled with increasing builder buying caution, and the services offered by Walker & Lee's marketing department.

"EVALUATING land prices has become increasingly complex, causing professional marketing help before they invest in land for large building projects," he said. "No longer is it feasible for them to guess on any given area."

Another service this department offers is its marketing department's management team. For the company's builder clients appraises the area, gauges prices, and suggests merchandising sales for the builder.

About three-fourths of the American homes are built by the more than 40,000 members of the National Association of Home Builders.

Well-Planned Kitchens in Garden Park Estates

GARDEN PARK ESTATES KITCHEN

Kitchens at Garden Park Estates in Garden Grove were designed to honor important role of homemaker, officials say. They have great appeal.

Kitchens are the homemaker's "office" and should be planned for total efficiency, say the officials of Garden Park Estates in Long Beach.

"Here, we have tried to honor the housewife and her important position by creating a kitchen that would be pleasant to work in and ease the task of homemaking," a spokesman said.

The kitchen in all the homes at Garden Park Estates are done in colors that are relaxing and "easy to live with" — professionally color coordinated by an expert.

Large, easy-to-reach natural ash kitchen cabinets, finished like fine furniture line the walls. All drawers are center-guided and ceramic tile covers large worktops.

GLEAMING modern built-in gas range and oven and hood with exhaust fan and light are placed near the worktops and kitchens have direct access to the main eating areas of the home. "These cheery food preparation centers provide the busy homemaker with a room worthy of her role," the spokesman said.

Other quality appointments included in the handsome one- and two-story dwellings, are wood burning fireplaces in plans one through five, seven and eight—some with large mantels and gas log fires, colored plumbing fixtures in baths, cast-iron tubs, stall showers with glass doors and stunning colored mosaic tile.

THREE, FOUR AND five-bedroom, two-bath plans are included in the attractive selection.

Welcome is extended to all prospective homeowners to inspect the furnished model display, open daily until dark, located at the corner of Knott Ave., and Garden Grove Freeway.

OFFERS LARGE HOMES

Here is one of the two-story homes offered in the Landmark development in Anaheim. It features a sunken living room. The large homes are priced from $30,625.

Anaheim Landmark Homes Sell Rapidly

The new Landmark Series homes opened recently has proven an almost immediate sell-out. Sales had been expected to be brisk, but the overwhelming response has caused Landmark builders of the two-story homes to initiate immediate construction on the second unit.

"It's certainly gratifying to see the public response to our homes," commented Bob Morrison, sales manager. "Our years of building experience and incorporation of luxury appointments with quality workmanship is evidence that the homebuyer is pleased with our many communities of homes in the Orange County area."

The versatile plans feature four and five bedrooms with two and three baths, separate areas are spacious and designed to give the larger family real comfort. Up to 2,150 sq. ft. gives oversized floor plans.

COMPLETELY BUILT-IN kitchens with range, oven exhaust units, dishwasher, disposal and convenient family serving bars are step-saving and adjacent to both family room and dining room.

double doors have terrazzo flooring and custom lighting. Sunken living rooms and massive masonry fireplaces add to the long list of urbane features.

Prices start at $30,625 with as low as $950 down and 6% interest 30-year loans. On Orange Ave., east of Beach Blvd., in Anaheim, the furnished models are open daily from 10 a.m. to dark.

"Improved lots at the development have increased over $1000 in value since we opened. And our value-packed homes, in the heart of booming Orange County, are hard to match. All Dads appreciate this kind of value, a home investment value proven by our sales record, fast approaching a complete sell-out."

Big Stardust Homes Attracting

An award winning two-story, four-bedroom home with numerous interior and exterior niceties is proving a prime attraction for homebuyers at Stardust, luxury home community in Huntington Beach.

Builder-developer Robert H. Grant said the two-story house, the Belfontaine, is one of 13 one-story and two-story models available to potential buyers at Stardust, located in Huntington Beach at Garfield and Canery.

"The Belfontaine's numerous features include a secluded den and bath on the ground floor, easily convertible to a fifth bedroom, and a sunken living room with fireplace," Grant noted. "The raised hearth adorns one entire wall."

STARDUST'S unexcelled location—within 10 minutes of the Pacific Ocean—and emphasis on California-style "elegant living" are two other big reasons for the strong homebuyer interest in the big project, Grant added.

There are three basic floor plans with four elevations each in the one-story, versions, and five in the two-story plan.

Prices range from $23,950 with FHA, VA or conventional financing.

HOMES are on 72-foot wide estate-size lots, and all have two-car garages. Streetlights, sidewalks and sewers are installed and paid.

Cruises of Mediterranean or Aegean Sea in fully provisioned yacht may cost only $12.50 a day per person.

Europe by Yacht

BELIEVE IT or not, you can cruise the Mediterranean or Aegean sea on your own fully provisioned private yacht for as little as $12.50 a day per person including crew.

And "Europe by Yacht" is definitely the way to "do" the continent this year, according to Alitalia Airlines which has made available a complete selection of cruisers, motor-sailers, motor-yachts, and sailing vessels with comfortable accommodations ranging from four to 20 berths. Daily prices begin at $50 (4 berths) in the sports category and stretch to $352 (12 berths) in the deluxe bracket.

For the most discriminating, however, prices may run as high as $1,000 a day for a 135-foot motor-yacht complete with radar and berths for eight crew members including a waiter and cook.

Surrounded by sunshine and color, Europe would be discovered outside, in. Time may be devoted to fishing or just leisurely sightseeing from port to port. The tourist picks his own ports. Picturesque Italian fishing villages, hamlets perched by the sea with names that roll off the tongue, await visitors and there are historical Greek islands, along the colorful North African coast, or around the enchanting Riviera.

Easy Touring

The Republic of Lebanon has an area of some 4,000 square miles, and a highway network of 4,000 miles. The farthest point in the country can be reached by car from Beirut, the capital, within two-and-a-half hours.

AROUND THE WORLD WITH DELAPLANE

"We will rent a car in England. But because of the left-hand drive wonder if we should hire a driver..."

THE FIRST three days are the hardest. You have to keep your mind on it all the time or on empty country roads you find you drift to the right from habit. But I find after three days I'm OK.

If you go to the British Tourist Office in St. James's Street, they'll give you a pretty car sticker that says "Visitor to Britain." This gives you a little edge with the police if you park in the wrong place.

"We are two secretaries planning a trip to Hawaii. Is Waikiki too crowded? Would we have a better time on another island?"

I THINK the island of Maui, near Lahaina town, has the best swimming beach. But the gold mine of lone men is at Waikiki. (There a small air service flies you to Lahaina in half an hour. You could look at it on a lunch stop.)

"Have made five trips to Mexico and am convinced that I would like to retire there. But where do you think is the most inexpensive place with most for the money?"

ID SAY in the Guadalajara area. Advantages are supermarkets, Sears and other places to American tastes for daily buying.

"Do we need an International Driving Permit for Europe?"

SOME COUNTRIES will pass you on your American license. But some don't. So it's easier to get the International Permit—$3, two passport-size photos and your local state license.

"Do you have a good guide that would help us in camping in the West, carrying our own equipment?"

THE MOST complete I've seen is Sunset magazine's "Western Campsite Directory." Gives you the state and national parks and a number of private camping spots. I don't have the price at hand—something like $2—but you can write Lane Magazine Company, Menlo Park, Calif. Has maps, descriptive and reliable.

"Could a single woman live somewhere in Europe on a retirement income of $200? Charm rather than luxury would be important."

I THINK you could do it in Portugal. But I'd certainly do a trial run first. An hour north of Lisbon, there is a completely walled city of Obidos. Narrow streets. Hotel built into a towered castle. Moorish baffle gates. And a small tourist traffic to make things interesting.

There are several small pensions. And since Portuguese hotels run about $5, I would think you could get room with family meals for even less.

There are some fine, warm beach towns in the south of Portugal you should look into, too.

"Please suggest a first-class hotel in Hong Kong."

THE MANDARIN, right at the foot of the Star Ferry on the Hong Kong side. Most modern rooms overlooking

Appointment of Chaim Glezer to the newly created post of West Coast regional sales manager has been announced by El Al Israel Airlines. Headquartered at 9350 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles, Glezer will work closely with Jerry Linkin, district sales manager, to coordinate the airline's sales activities in 11 western states.

1964 Campsites

Is there laundry service at Kickapoo State Park in Illinois? What route is taken to reach Noisy Creek National Forest in Washington? Are there tent sites at Moosehorn National Wildlife Refuge in Maine? Is firewood available at Writing-on-Stone Provincial Park in Alberta, Canada?

These and other important questions are answered for the outdoor enthusiast in Lincoln-Mercury Division's comprehensive guide to family camping enjoyment.

The 1964 "Mercury-Comet Campsite Directory to Outdoor Family Fun" was prepared exclusively for the Division by Rand McNally & Co. The 236-page directory is available from Lincoln-Mercury dealers for $1.50 a copy.

This valuable reference contains a wealth of travel and recreation information and full color Rand McNally road maps for each of the states and Canadian provinces and territories. More than 8,000 campgrounds containing more than 175,000 individual campsites are included.

The directory was prepared with the aid of hundreds of park and forest supervisors, as well as owners of private campgrounds.

Dancers to Tahiti

A group of dance students from Southern California are off on a tour of the South Seas. Leaving Los Angeles July 4, on U.T.A.'s (Union de Transports Aeriens) DC8 non-stop flight to Papeete, the dancers will visit the Polynesian islands of Tahiti, Moorea and Bora Bora. They will learn and perfect some of the intricate dance steps of the Tahitians and will visit Tahiti during the "Bastille Day" celebrations July 14.

The "Fete" lasts for two weeks in Papeete, even though there was never a guillotine there. The Tahitians need only a small excuse to celebrate joyously. Groups come to Papeete, the capital of French Polynesia, from many islands to compete in contests of dancing, spear throwing, rowing, sailing and horseracing. The colorful throngs dance in the streets all night and the excitement is incredible.

AMONG Southern California dancers are members of a professional club the "Aloha Islanders" in Cheviot Hills. Their leader Eleanor Lee also teaches Polynesian dancing at Rancho Park playground and the Pacific Palisades playground.

From the Dorothy Jo Dance Studio in Corona del Mar, Mrs. Lura McKenzie will be accompanied by her troupe including Phyllis Madon of Long Beach, Amma Dare and Olli Foster of Whittier, Tana and Burr Sherdick and their daughters of Newport Beach. Tana and her daughter Tareta are the featured Tahitian dancers now appearing at the "Mariner's," a restaurant-nightclub in Lomita.

KIMO MANSFIELD, featured Tahitian dancer at the "Hawaiian," a supper club in Long Beach, and the "Mariner's" in Lomita will also accompany the group.

SUPER EXPRESS... UP TO 159 M.P.H. IN TRIAL RUNS

Tokyo's Bullet on Rails

By Fred Taylor Kraft
Travel Editor

AMERICANS who flock to Japan this fall—many of them to witness the Olympic Games—are certain to be tremendously impressed at the modernity of the vast new transportation system in and around Tokyo, world's largest city.

Tokyo's astounding increase in population—slightly more than 6 million in 1950 to 10.6 million today—combined with traditional Japanese pride in presenting its best side to visitors, have generated transportation improvements so sweeping that they are attracting the attention of the entire world.

Foremost among the several costly projects now being rushed to August completion is the new Tokaido Line of Japanese National Railways on which electrically-powered super express trains eventually will cover the 320 miles between Tokyo and Osaka, the nation's second largest city, in three hours.

ON COMPLETED sections of this new line, trains already have been clocked at 159 miles per hour in trial runs. However, at the start of service the trip will take four hours. The time will decrease as speeds rise to the eventual target of 130 miles per hour.

The new line will virtually parallel the present Tokaido double-track route which, while serving 40 per cent of Japan's 90 million population, carries 240 to 260 trains both ways daily.

Every modern safety device that engineering can conceive is being installed to make the super expresses safe, including wireless telephone, automatic route setting, and automatic train control.

Wave pulse radar will be used to detect obstacles on the track several miles ahead. Conventional level crossings are being eliminated altogether as the trains thunder through 66 tunnels and over scores of bridges from one metropolis to the other. The tracks will be guarded, where necessary, by fences to keep off trespassers.

JAPANESE National Railways has placed orders for 360 cars for the super expresses. Sixty of these will be bullet cars containing the driver's control panel and driving cab.

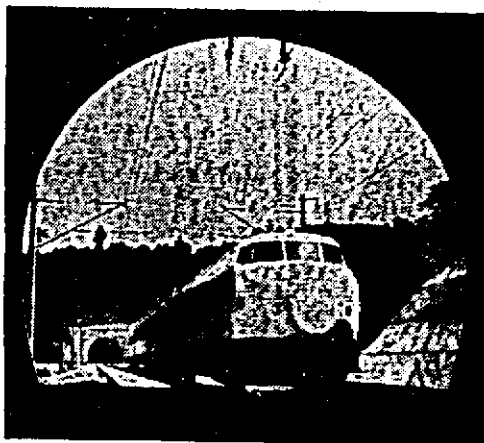

Each train will consist of a bullet car, two first-class cars, eight second-class cars and two buffet cars.

Expansion of the already vast transportation facilities is also getting top priority in the Greater Tokyo area. When extension to present facilities are completed in 1965, Tokyo's subways will total 110 miles, longest of any city in the world, and are expected to carry 4.5 million commuters a day. Some of these trains—four to six cars with a capacity of 140 passengers each—will use three-storied underground corridors, paralleled with underground automobile lanes.

MEANWHILE, miles of super-highways (freeways) are knitting through and around the city. One of these, now virtually ready for use, will reduce travel time between Tokyo International Airport and the busy downtown area.

A new monorail, to be completed in August, will make it possible to be downtown 15 minutes after stepping off carriers such as Japan Air Lines Jet Couriers and clearing customs.

The rides will leave the Two Bars Seven Ranch (Virginia Dale, Colo.), on the Colorado-Wyoming line June 30, July 28 and Aug. 18.

Participants may join for anything from four days to the full 12 days. Some overnight camps will be in the wilds while others will be at or near one of the sponsoring ranches, and riders may join at one ranch and leave at another—ranch transportation will be waiting at time of departure.

The cost? Everything except personal effects—even foam rubber mattresses and sleeping bags if you wish—is $270 for the full 12 days, or $25 a day for a shorter period.

A PLAN which allows more than a million American Express credit card holders to charge travel with Delta Air Lines on an extended payment basis has been approved by the Civil Aeronautics Board and is now in force.

Under terms of the agreement, the air traveler with a valid American Express card may charge Delta flights over a period of three to 12 months.

The plan is available to air travelers at all Delta offices and at more than 5,000 travel agencies, including all American Express offices worldwide.

Yellowstone Tip

In a cooperative move designed to make a visit to Yellowstone National Park more convenient, Greyhound and Yellowstone Park Lines, Inc. jointly announced that special summer service is now being operated direct to the center of this famous recreational area from Idaho Falls. It's the golden month. The fjords lie mirror-still. Danish villages drowse in the sun. Swedish lakes and forests glow with color.

Dwarfs 'Em All

One of the world's largest, oldest and most-photographed trees dominates the rolling countryside near the South African spa town of Tschipise in the northern Transvaal.

It's a huge baobab whose trunk has a circumference of 76 feet and whose age has been estimated at over 4,000 years. According to the South African Tourist Corporation, this botanical wonder dwarfs everything in sight including the inevitable group of sightseers busily taking snapshots of each other at its base. In age, at least, the old baobab may outrank most of California's giant sequoias for whom a mere 30 centuries is considered a full lifetime.

Tax Break

The Internal Revenue Service has liberalized its view of business-and-pleasure travel overseas, reports Pan American Airways. All expenses incurred on international travel of fewer than eight days may be deducted under the new law. The business traveler may also deduct all international travel expenses if the vacation portion of a trip does not exceed 25 per cent of the total time out of the United States.

Berlin has added a laugh fest to its calendar of 1964 summer events. The "gag fair" is part of the Festival Weeks program, Sept. 13-Oct. 4.

The program, produced by a cabaret owner, will be held in the Hans am Platz. According to the Berlin Tourist Office, American and French cartoonists will display their work; gag routines such as the magician who fails at every attempt of magic will be performed; and poet-novelist Guenther Grass ("The Tin Drum") will also participate.

"And I Plight Thee My Troth"

The wedding is over. The hectic weeks of parties, planning and preparation are past. The marriage vows have been said. The bridal pair has received the congratulations of their family and friends. Now, unexpectedly, amid the gaiety of the reception, they share the first private moment of their new life together . . . the beginning of a marriage. Above, Ens. and Mrs. John Fowler Schaefer (the former Geraldine Marie Case) silently re-affirm their vows, following their wedding at St. Barnabas Catholic Church. Also pictured, 14 other beautiful brides who have chosen June, the traditional month, for nuptial celebration. For accounts of their weddings, turn to page W-4.

Among Other Things, A Fistful of Spades

By Iola Masterson
I, P-T Women's Editor

THE B17s OF WORLD WAR II were a hardy lot, but how was one to know that part of its anatomy would be called on to serve and serve, not in battle smoke but spewing forth the mists of dry ice and the aroma of heady brews.

With a happy skol, may this bubble never burst!

Pictured above are Dolores and Van Hickman filling the "bubble" of a B17, which wound up its years of glory as a punch bowl. It was used by Young Californians for annual progressive dinner, beginning at the Hickman's for the brew hour. The bowl has been used by the group for at least five years for all big occasions. It is the property of Colleen and Keaton King.

The bubble-bowl holds ten gallons (enough to satisfy the most avid fan of the sun-is-over-the-yardarm hour). Young Californians fill it with a standard concoction of cranberry, pineapple, lemon juice, Seven-Up and firewater which has no name, but plenty of authority. Why not "Flame Thrower"?

Party, to honor prospective members, went merrily along for dinner at Shirley and Bob Benson's home, wound up at Nancy and George Hanania's for dancing, yacking, late buffet.

ALTHOUGH close friends have known about it, the news, in general, is just beginning to circulate that Sophie Bernstein and Irving Solomon slipped away to Las Vegas to become Mr. and Mrs. After wedding date last month they honeymooned on a Caribbean cruise.

IMPOSSIBLE—but it happened. The perfect bridge hand—13 spades—was dealt out, and no hanky panky about it, during a duplicate bridge game session of a group of regular bridge club players.

The gals looked up the chances of such a hand ever being flipped out and discovered it was one in a billion. First to play the hand was Beth Humphries and she bid a six, partner raised it to seven. Next to get it was Myrtle Denny. She bid a two spades, with partner's help got it to a seven. Third and final player of same hand, as it goes in game of duplicate bridge, was Pearl Goedde who bid a seven straight off. Not a one of the players could get anyone to double them.

Wild Waves Say...

All this phenomenon occurred at Myrtle's home during potluck luncheon Monday.

CHEESE TESTING, wine tasting and music made the night a gay one when "Phil" and Bill Norris entertained. They studied about all kinds of cheeses and wines in preparation. Then had signs posted at each table, to inform all who sipped and supped their way past, the names, background, proper serving temperatures and times for which they all enjoyed so much.

Main honoree of night was "Phil's" sister, Florence Fisher, visiting from Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

A MISTY tropical shower, produced with the aid of an artfully hidden garden hose, sprinkled over the pool at Betty (Mrs. Irving) Dumm's home on Tehachapi Dr. and, nearby, a float bobbed, piled high with gifts. That was the scene when Lee (Hastings) Higman walked into the patio at Betty's. Instantly, voices from the den yelled "surprise" and the party was launched.

Lee was on her first visit home to see her parents, Jo and Dr. Orville Hastings, since she became the bride of Dennis Higman in Las Vegas. He is the son of the Chester Higmans of Seattle. Currently, the newlyweds are residing on Bainbridge Island, Wash. Party was a gasp first, smile later and catch-totally-by-surprise affair.

THESE ARE the swirling, whirling party days for Assistance League's debts, who make their bow on July 25 at the Lafayette.

Yesterday the smart young gals and their mothers were entertained by Jeanne Moore at a luncheon in her home. Another luncheon and swimming party Tuesday will be followed by a Juau Sunday for debts, escorts and stag line fellows at home of Neil and Dave Thomas being co-hosted by Marjorie Peek and Kay Nesbitt. More parties next week... and week after!

YOU CAN take the citizen out of the U.S. but you can't take the American out of the citizen, to paraphrase an old saying.

Gingi Kadavy arrived home from the American College in Paris. Her parents, Luba and Dr. Alex, were overcome with her Parisian fashion plate appearance on arrival by plane.

One day home, however, and Gingi was back in "high style" blue jeans and sleeveless sweatshirt—happy as a lark with casualness here—after her freshman college year in gay Paree.

She DID have a wonderful time in France, let me haste to add, including going with the couture look, et al. She'll go back in the fall for sophomore year, then finish her collegiate days in a California university.

Incidentally, she spent holidays abroad on many ski trips and won scads of awards. For instance, at Kognisse, Germany she won a silver medal for prowess and then, to top all other wins, at Val D'Isere in the French Alps she took the Trois Etoiles (three star) medal—one of the highest given internationally to amateur ski buffs.

WITH LUGGAGE well stocked (bulging is the word) with clothes for fishing, lounging, dress up or camping, Joni and Bill Ferguson left this week. They're autoing it on a leisurely trip, first to Las Vegas. Bill, former manager of E. F. Hutton here, wants to check up on investment possibilities there—but don't think he had ticker tape in mind so much as going for brokerage in other ways. Truly, he does have customers to call upon, and not the one armed variety, either!

He and Joni will stay at a guest lodge in Western Colorado which has its own private trout fishing stream. Later, they'll visit with friends and relatives in Denver. Return trip will find them touring the Grand Tetons and Yellowstone area.

LONG DISTANCE phone bills have piled up—and to heck with the cost—as Fern and John Kelly have kept pace with news of son, John Jr., and his wife, Ann. Kelly Jr. took off Wednesday. They left Washington, D.C., where he has been with the Defense Department, for Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, where John will be assistant economic attache to the American Embassy. Stint of service in Africa is to be for a two year period.

PARTY JETS were fired up for an evening of high flying conviviality in the Officers' Mess of Los Alamitos Naval Air Station last Sunday.

That was when officers and their wives of 2479th Air Force Reserve Sector and 8646th Air Force Reserve Recovery Group—both based at LB Municipal Airport—had a blast-off in salute to three fellow officers.

Honored were Major Eugene Zechmeister and Capt. Jack Whitaker, who are scheduled to retire end of the month, and Major H. D. ("Hank") Gordon, who is being transferred to Holloman Air Force Base, New Mexico.

Assuring "Hank" he'll LOVE duty in NM, and firmly demonstrating why, is Lt. Col. Joseph Herrmann, exec officer of the 2478th, left, below, as he presents a king sized broom to transfer. It is guaranteed, Joe said, to be of great help in keeping part of New Mexico's dust out of the new quarters at Holloman.

A few of the officers and wives present to do joyous justice to occasion were Louise and Col. Glenn Eagleston (CO of the 2478th), Lucille and Col. Jim Norton (he's CO of the 8646th), Col. and Mrs. Les Stockton, Dorrie and Lt. Col. Herrmann, Betty and Lt. Col. Tom McKay, Eloise and Lt. Col. Bill Hoyt and Louise and Lt. Col. Kenneth McCleod.

As a grounded civilian, I'm shaking in office mufti, hoping I have the COs, execs, escorts, groups and numerical titles in proper sequence!

Colonel gives the major some heavy artillery!

Every Dad Has His Day?

By SHERM WILLIAMS

Today is the day when fathers of this nation are treated like Old Dog Tray.

In home after home, merry families are trooping into the old man's bedroom and shouting, "Happy Father's Day. They are going to Be Real Nice To Him."

The fact that the old man might have been out the night before enjoying the Father's Day Eve of his choice makes not one whit of difference. This is Dad's Day and he is going to enjoy it.

No one is going to growl at him at 7 a.m. and shout, "Get up you lazy lout, you are late to work." No, indeed. They are going to wake him up at 6:30—because they can't wait to be good to the old duffer. They will Feed Him Breakfast in Bed.

CONTRARY TO popular opinion, this annual reminder that the man once ruled his home was not invented by the nation's wallet and tie clasp manufacturers.

It came as a kind of afterthought to Mother's Day—which was first observed in Philadelphia, Pa., in 1908. Father's Day was whipped up by a lady named Mrs. John Bruce Dodd of Spokane, Wash. The idea first jolted her in 1909 and within a year she had talked the Spokane Ministerial Assn. into setting aside the third Sunday in June just for father.

The same lightning struck in Chicago in 1911 and the patronizing tone of the day was set by Miss Jane Addams. In cheering for a special day for papa, she said, "Poor father has been left out in the cold. He doesn't get much recognition. But regardless of his bread-earning proclivities, it would be a good thing if he had a day that would mean recognition of him."

By 1920, Harry C. Meek, president of the Uptown Lions Club of Chicago cranked up another Father's Day—on the third Sunday in October.

FROM THEN ON, it was inevitable. There was considerable haggling about just who started it all, and who should get the credit.

And October, obviously wouldn't work half as well as June when the leftover socks, wallets and neckties from Christmas could be unloaded on laps across the country.

There was even some controversy over what should be the official flower for the day.

Members of the Martin W. Calender Bible Class of Wilkinsburg, Pa., chose the dandelion in 1924, saying, "The more it is trampled on, the more it grows." That idea passed into oblivion.

But Father's Day burgeoned and even became an export. It is now celebrated in parts of Europe and South America.

The old man is King for a Day, which means he gets to pack the family into the car, fight the traffic and Go On An Outing.

Such is the price of royalty, albeit brief.

It's June... and Here Come the Brides

Say Wedding Vows at Traditional Rituals

More than 400 happy couples have applied this month for marriage licenses at the county bureau on West Ocean Boulevard. Many of them have been married in traditional ceremonies with the brides beautiful in peau de soie, organdy or lace in symbolic white... the bridegrooms handsome in uniform, tuxedo or dark suit. It is an occasion that brings excitement, joy and solemnity. An unforgettable day for two people who have chosen life together.

Gregory-Kelso

Second Presbyterian Church, Long Beach, was setting for the marriage of Suzanne Kelso, daughter of Cmdr. and Mrs. Stanley Kelso (USN, ret.), and Frederick Gregory, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Gregory.

The bride wore a sheath gown of silk organza and Alencon lace with chapel train.

Attending her were Sylvia Kelso, her sister, maid of honor, and Mrs. Harry Eastlick, Judy Ecklund and Mrs. Donald Bauermeister, bridesmaids.

Peter Cooper was best man and Joe Weirick, Jim Bradley and Pat Bradley were ushers.

The new Mrs. Gregory was graduated from Polytechnic High and the University of Colorado where she was a member of Alpha Phi. Her fiancé is an alumnus of Menlo College and San Francisco State College. He is affiliated with the Fresno Yacht Club.

The new Mrs. Buffington was graduated from Poly High and California State College at Long Beach where she was a member of Tri Delta. She will teach elementary school in Westminster this fall. Her husband, a student at CSLB, was graduated from Long Beach City College.

Following a honeymoon in Santa Barbara and Carmel, the bride and bridegroom will make their home in Long Beach.

For the wedding ceremony, the bride chose a formal gown of silk linen with bell-shaped skirt. Both her gown and train were edged in Venice lace.

Petersen-Bell

California Heights Methodist Church the setting for the wedding ceremony uniting Terry Lee Bell and Ralph Gordon Petersen Saturday evening.

Parents of the newlyweds are Mr. and Mrs. John A. Bell and Gordon H. Petersen of Long Beach and Mrs. M. E. Van Marten of Arvado, Colo.

The bride wore a bell skirted formal gown with a Chantilly lace bolero. Her bouffant veil was held by a rose with crystal petals.

EVALUATION SESSION

Results of recent job clinic are checked by (from left) Edna Myers, employment specialist at the Bureau of Public Assistance; Jean Ford, placement supervisor at California Department of Employment; and Bonnie Greenfield, adult program coordinator at the YWCA. Miss Ford was chairman of the clinic for mothers in the Aid to Families With Dependent Children program.

YOUNG MOTHERS AT JOB CLINIC

Hear Advice of Experts

By ELISE EMERY
Forty young women are "thinking realistically about work" as a result of a recent job clinic.

The 40 are mothers who receive funds in the Aid to Families With Dependent Children Program administered by the Bureau of Public Assistance.

Selected from women in the greater Long Beach area, they were chosen because they show special potential for employment. They are motivated, too, by legislation enacted in 1959. This requires that a mother in the AFDC program, whose youngest child is over 3, seek employment or work training if she is physically, mentally and emotionally able to enter the labor market.

AS A RESULT of the job clinic, four women are now employed, one is enrolled in the licensed vocational nurses training program at Long Beach City College Business and Technology Division, six are in El Cerrito Hospital's nurses aide program, five are training in other fields and all are having special counseling.

The job clinic was planned by Jean Ford of California Department of Employment, Edna Myers of Bureau of Public Assistance and Bonnie Greenfield of the YWCA. Altrusa Club and Belmont Shore Lady Lions assisted.

WITH THEIR pre-school age youngsters in an adjoining nursery room at the YWCA, the mothers listened intently during the four weekly sessions as experts presented these programs: Training and Re-training, Preparation for Work, How to Apply for a Job and The Right Job for You. Speakers included Esther Caldwell of Long Beach City College Business and Technology Division; Juanita Wood, selection and referral officer at the Department of Employment; Dr. Robert M. Newhouse, director of the Mental Health Center at El Cerrito Hospital; Fred Jordan, personnel director of Community Hospital; Bea Olson, personnel director of Woolworth's, Lakewood; and Macie Harrington, supervising social case worker with the BPA.

J. C. PENNEY CO. supplied fashions for a style show, "Appropriate Clothes for Work," and the AFDC mothers modeled. William W. Pope, investigator with the District Attorney's office, discussed the responsibilities of absent fathers.

Throughout the clinic, the advantages of learning job skills and gaining work experience were emphasized.

"A mother who goes to work never has less money than if she stayed on the AFDC program," Mrs. Myers pointed out. "If her expenses of working and child care cut her budget to an amount less than she was receiving on the program, BPA will supplement her pay. Her income always goes up when she goes to work."

MOTHERS who have no work experience may take part in training classes. These must be BPA approved and will be endorsed for a maximum period of one year.

"It is necessary to be realistic about employment," said Miss Ford. "Some people are qualified for one type of work, others are not. For instance, a person with the general ability to complete high school could not be a social worker which requires six years of college. One of the primary factors which influences choice of work is the kind of employment available."

MRS. CALDWELL stressed the need for basic skills in arithmetic and grammar. Without these, she said, it is impossible to qualify for many vocational training courses. These skills also are required by most employers who give on-the-job training.

Child care facilities and available dental and medical services were described to the mothers by Mrs. Harrington.

"If you can work," she said, that is the best thing you can do for your child. You give him the image of a person moving forward, not just being visited by a case worker. There is a feeling of pride when you are working or preparing yourself for work."

"No one is fully grown and developed as an individual unless he has a job that enables him to use his maximum potential," Dr. Newhouse noted.

IN THE Long Beach Harbor area, 78 percent of the jobs are in these four classifications: wholesale and retail trades, manufacturing, government and services.

Each mother is advised by a counselor at the Department of Employment and a plan is worked out to help her find a job which will make best use of her abilities.

At the final job clinic session, the 40 young women proudly received certificates of attendance, proof of their interest in the program to help them help themselves.

Painted 'Lady' Good for a Hearty Laugh.

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:
I am 11 years old and mother says I am too young to wear eye makeup. The other day, I put some on anyway, and when I walked out where she was talking with my girl friend, they both started laughing. Now, other people keep looking at me to see if I have eye makeup on!

I think that was real nasty of Mother, don't you?
—DULL EYES

DEAR DULL EYES:
After reading your letter, I laughed too! I bet you looked positively ridiculous! Can't you see how wrong you are about eye makeup—even your friend laughed when she saw you.

You have a wonderful mother; it's a wonder she didn't lay you low and punish you for disobeying. Instead, she laughed—she's marvelous! And you'd better remember it. M. M.

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:
Another girl and I are learning to drive (we are 14) and do pretty well, but we need practice on country roads and our parents won't let us. How will we be able to get our license when we are 16, if we aren't allowed to practice more?

—TWO GOOD DRIVERS

DEAR DRIVERS:
Of course you know, don't you, you must have a licensed driver in the car when you practice. Since you can't get your license for over a year, you have lots of time; when it is convenient for your parents, you will get to practice.

I didn't know they issued learners' permits to 14-year-olds—seems pretty young to me.

I have a suspicion you girls are looking for more excitement than practice!
—M. M.

NOTE TO CONFUSED:
The possible marriage you speak of should in no way harm your church or its members. Unless your faith is one that explicitly condemns divorce, you are being very unfair to the deacon. If marrying a divorced woman is his greatest fault, just try to be as good a Christian as he. —M. M.

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:
Two years ago (after 12 years of married life) my husband told me he loved another woman and left me and our five small children. He provides for us and pays the bills but shows us no love. My minister and my lawyer tell me to divorce him, but I can't—all of us adore him in spite of everything.

Dear Molly Mayfield

I was an old-fashioned woman before he left, but now I am trying all kind of beauty tips—it is getting me no where! I've asked him to come home and try again but he only laughs and says "maybe!"

Please tell me what on earth to do besides divorce him. I'm about to go crazy cooped up in this lonely house way out in the country.—LOVE MY FAMILY.

DEAR LOVE MY FAMILY:
My dear, I don't see anything left for you but a divorce. It's possible in some distant future, he might return but in the meantime, you are trying to raise five children while he is free as a bird and having a ball.

It's a choice only you can make—stay as you are (and "slowly go crazy") or make a clean break and start a new life for yourself preferably in a small community where you can have more companionship and make new friends.—M.M.

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:
I would like to know if the caretaker of my apartment house has the right to enter an occupied apartment when the tenant is out? I have seen him do this. Some say he is looking for beer and whiskey (he is a drinker).

What can we do? Change locks? Each apartment has more than one door so we would have to change at least two.—PERTURBED.

DEAR PERTURBED:
Legal advice is out of my line but I doubt if your caretaker has a right to enter without permission.

Talk to the landlord and if that doesn't bring satisfactory results, I would change the locks. It is my belief that your (house, apartment or what have you) home is your own and no one has a right to enter uninvited.—M.M.

Rogers Coeds Score in 'Fashion Finals'

By MARY ELLIS CARLTON
I, P-T Fashion Editor

Sure, any teenager knows you don't wear the same outfit at the beach as in the ballroom.

That's elementary. But there's a group of young fashionables at Rogers Junior High School who are well schooled in the secondary formula: what to wear when WITH what.

The 18-member Rogers team was first runner-up among junior and senior high schools in the area who participated in a "Well-Mannered Look" study course and fashion quiz co-sponsored by DuPont and the Broadway Stores.

For the "fashion finals," students—during a teenage style show in Los Angeles—were asked to correlate a variety of costumes to the appropriate occasion.

Additional questions tested their fashion eye Q with the accent always on suitability. Each indicated her choice on forms supplied for the purpose.

Winner of the county-wide competition was Rosemont Junior High in La Crescenta.

MUCH OF the credit for Rogers' good showing in fashionology goes to home ec teacher Jane Whitney, a tawny blond with cool classic beauty and wardrobe know-how who designs and makes her own clothes.

During sewing classes, she endeavors to help students "grow up" in their clothing tastes, putting the accent where it belongs—on dressing suitably for the time, the place and the occasion.

Says she: "Learning and accepting standards of behavior—and dress as well—is part of the teens' orientation course to the adult world they'll be entering."

She believes that good manners in dress are directly related to personality development and to performance in scholastics.

She advocates, further, that being well-dressed depends less on the amount of money than on the amount of taste expended.

Ninth graders at Rogers who participated include Leslie Bradshaw, Wendy VanHoughton, Christine Wiczorek, Chris Greg, Chris Kenny, Mary Johnson, Tish Cadwallander, Lynn Gilmore and Mary Linville.

Eighth graders were Karen Cardinali, Betty Johnson, Judy Fabish, Charlotte Johnston, Martie Smith, Susan Hill, Pam Baker and Terry Larkie.

So goodbye, Sloppy Joe. So long Lady Beatnik. It looks like the well-mannered look is taking over in the classroom.

NOW ON VACATION from the classroom, Southland teenagers can rate "A" in fashion through casual summer months in Thermo-Jac's adaptation of the famous Finnish playdress. Available locally.

They're Scouting Hawaii

They baby sat, held bake sales, delivered hand bills, sold scrub balls, did house cleaning and ironing.

And today they are in Honolulu at the Reef Tower on glamorous Waikiki Beach, starting an eight day holiday.

The 21 members of Girl Scout Troop 443 have been working and saving for an adventure in travel since they were second graders. They had hoped to go to Europe, but no one seemed disappointed at settling for the tropical island.

They were greeted with leis and alohas at Honolulu by Hawaiian Senior Girl Scouts, who also will entertain them at a Hawaiian feast the last night of their stay.

INCLUDED in a very heavy schedule of activities are plans for hula lessons and a date for a mud slide in ti leaves.

Troop 443 is a general troop with three patrols. The Wing Scouts will find the plane travel of special interest, the Mariners are looking forward to a Pearl Harbor tour and the Trail Blazers will have a new experience—a jungle hike.

Leaders of the three patrols are Noreen Kirchoff, Lynn DeMorest and Karen Zimmerman.

Chaperoning the group are Mrs. Harry Zimmerman, the leader; Mrs. Wayne Bagwell and Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Wyant.

A TRAVELING TRIO . . . Karen Zimmerman, Linda Bagwell and Julia Allen (from left), with 18 other members of Girl Scout Troop 443, flew from Los Angeles International Airport Saturday to hula-land. The girls are all 16 or 17 years old and earned the money for their trip themselves.

His Ribs Take No Ribbing

By MILDRED K. FLANARY
Long Beach Editor

His modus operandi has steam roller proportions. Today's Chef of the Week, Attorney Ralph P. Gordon, has sticktiveness, too.

Result? The Long Beach rookie police training program, the professional division of the United Fund Campaign's highest total on record, and the Town Forum, a half-hour program which he has conducted for five years. Oh, yes, he folk dances, too.

Gordon was born in Chicago, and is a graduate of the Chicago Kent College of Law. He had been a member of the Chicago bar two years when World War II started, and he joined the Navy. He was sent to Hawaii to head up the Signaling School at Pearl Harbor.

KNOWING that he would have to start from scratch after four years, and having a yen to return to California, he and his wife did just that. They had spent their honeymoon in Long Beach, and he had done shore duty here aboard the USS San Francisco. Too, they had friends in Burbank.

Having minored in personnel management at Kent, and with some extra credits chalked up at the University of Hawaii, he decided to make that his vocation. But he hadn't anticipated the turmoil pursuant to peacetime recovery. He ended up a salesman for the Young's Market Co.

He never forgot his law, however. He crammed a bit — and studied more, then took the California Bar Examination. He was admitted to the bar just three years ago this week.

The Gordons have a son, Harold, 19, a student at Cases Institute of Technical Training at Cleveland, Ohio, and a daughter, Andrea, 14, a graduate of Hill Junior High School.

Chef of the Week

all comparable cities in the state regarding training, wages, etc., and took that information to the council, the mayor and the city manager. He also conducted a public service program on radio, which made a great contribution, not only to that cause, but other civic needs, as well. The Long Beach training program has since been adopted in other cities.

Gordon is treasurer of the Long Beach Council of the Enlightenment of Alcoholism, serves on the Council of Human Relations and on the Community Welfare Council. He was also a member of the Mayor's Youth Program under former Mayor, "Chef" Raymond Kealer.

A spectator in most sports, he's a worthy foe at tennis.

There was a time, quote, when he used to be very handy around the kitchen, unquote, but no more. He does excel at barbecuing, however.

BARBECUING BACK RIBS
Marinate ribs in soy sauce, ginger and pineapple juice for about 3 hours. Just before placing on fire, sprinkle ribs with seasoned salt and a light amount of barbecue salt.

Prepare hot charcoal fire and place damp oak chips in fire just prior to putting on ribs. Place close to fire for about 2 minutes on each side, then raise barbecue grill to farthest point and allow to barbecue for another 25 minutes, turning ribs every 5 minutes.

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

It's Leap Year, You Know

DEAR ABBY: Here are the facts: Ten years ago a very attractive 19-year-old girl divorced her husband shortly before her baby was born. She then proceeded to support herself. She is now almost 30. Two years ago she met a well-to-do, 42-year-old bachelor who became interested in her immediately. He occupied every spare minute she had, took her on trips and bought her expensive gifts. But he has never mentioned marriage. This young woman does not want to go with him indefinitely, and if he will not eventually marry her she doesn't want to waste any more time on him. What advice would you give this woman?—CLOSE FRIEND

ABBY

DEAR FRIEND: I would advise her not to give him up until the 4th of July. If he still hasn't mentioned marriage, she should put a firecracker under him in the form of a direct question. And if he doesn't marry her by Halloween, she should find herself another spook.

DEAR ABBY: I am a woman, 44 years of age. I was married but my husband died. I own my own home and have no children. My brother, 36, has shared my home for the past four years. He is a rather shy person and doesn't go out much. My problem is this: For the past two years I have been keeping company with a gentleman of whom I am very fond, and he insists it is morally wrong for my brother and me to live together. We argue constantly about this and it makes me very nervous. My brother and I both work and I can't for the life of me see what's morally wrong in our living together. It's a very large house and there would be no reason for my brother to take a room elsewhere when I own this empty house. He also takes

DEAR QUESTION: Your friend should get his mind out of the gutter. Could it be that your brother's living with you has cramped your friend's style because he'd prefer that you be completely unchaperoned? When one sees dirt, it's sometimes in one's own eye.

DEAR ABBY: I happen to be one of those STINKERS who has been a heavy smoker for over 40 years, and I have enjoyed every puff. I got three clippings in the mail of your column where that person wrote in to say that people won't quit smoking because of the lung cancer fear, but they might quit if somebody told them that all smokers just plain stink! I never knew that I stank. How can I find out who sent those clippings?—D.S.S.

DEAR D.S.S.: It's hardly serious enough for the FBI. Just assume the clippings were sent by someone who NOSE you very well.

DEAR ABBY: Speaking of odd names, I named my daughters Rose, Violet, Gardenia and Camilla. Our son was named Jonquil, but we call John because that's his Daddy's name. People refer to them as the Cavallo Bouquet. Feel free to use my name. Sincerely, —MRS. CAVALLO, THE BLOOMING IDIOT: MEMPHIS

Theodore Lightner of New York invented a convention around 1935 that is known by his name in expert circles all over the world.

Specifically the convention is that when a player not on lead doubles an adverse slam, he is asking his partner to make an unusual lead.

In most cases, the unusual lead will be the first suit bid by dummy, other times it will call for some other suit bid by either dummy or declarer. In any event, it is up to partner to figure out the proper lead after the double is made.

When North jumped to seven diamonds, East thought for some time before passing. He was pretty sure that if he doubled that seven diamonds, his partner would figure out that he wanted a heart lead. He also felt that a double would lead to a bid of seven no-trump, and he did not think he could beat that contract.

He was quite right about seven no-trump. North and South had bid rather clumsily. Probably the trouble started when South responded ed one heart only. ANYWAY, East passed and West opened a heart against seven diamonds. East ruffed and it was all over except for a slight argument between the opposing partnerships.

North and South claimed that East had indicated his heart void by his slow pass. West agreed that the huddle made it rather easy for him to lead a heart, but said that he would have opened that suit in any event. He pointed out that he held six hearts and that there would be no way to beat the hand unless his partner had a void in that suit.

FACE THE NATION—Gov. William W. Scranton (R-Pa.), who 9 days ago literally flipped his lid into the GOP Presidential race, is questioned at 12:30 p.m., ch. 2. Scranton will be interviewed by the same trio who quizzed him two weeks ago on the same program, in a broadcast which drew criticism from Republican bigwigs. Today should be different, with civil rights for a hot issue.

SEA WORLD—Bill Welsh hosts a filmed special on the new center at San Diego's Mission Bay. Trained dolphins and beautiful girls perform together in a special underwater 3 act

ODYSSEY OF A TREASURE—A filmed portrait of the travels of Michelangelo's "Pieta" from Vatican City to the New York World's Fair is aired in an hour-long documentary at 9 p.m., ch. 11. Rossano Brazzi and Fredric March narrate the films made in Vatican City, St. Peter's and the gardens of the Villa Medici in Rome, as well as describe the detailed planning for the statue's pilgrimage across the Atlantic.

Bert's Eye View

By BERT RESNIK
TV and Radio Editor

YOU WATCH the man before the camera and you know there stands an actor.

There is an ease of performance and the man is comfortable—comfortable and confident.

A skillful actor is Fred MacMurray. He makes it look so easy, so natural, that you forget he's acting.

You forget he's acting even when he's surrounded by klieg lights, cameras, a director and a mike on a lowered boom.

He makes it look easy but you know it's hard work. From scene to scene he goes, not in continuity, but like playing hop-scotch on a giant jigsaw puzzle.

Not once in the two hours I watched him on the "My Three Sons" set did MacMurray refer back to his script. No need.

Just once did he flub a line—rather, a word. He said "grandfather" instead of "grandmother." For that, he apologized to the director.

I complimented him afterwards on his acting. "Thanks," he said. "Mostly I'm just being myself."

BEING HIMSELF, in MacMurray's own opinion, means he's poor copy.

Put in his own words: "I've always known I'm a poor interview. I don't have any profound outlook on politics. My family and I lead a simple life."

It was said without an iota of false humility. It was said sincerely.

Fred MacMurray now is a man who is faithfully watched by millions of television fans every week. He's an actor who started in movies in the late 1920s and has worked in them steadily since. He's an actor who, in the late 1950's and the current 60's, cultivated a new generation of movie fans with "The Shaggy Dog," "Absent Minded Professor," "Bon Voyage," and "Son of Flubber."

All of which should give him the right to lead a simple home life without having to go Hollywood in order to provide sensational interview fodder.

★ ★ ★

AND MacMURRAY is not about to go Hollywood. I put my pencil down and stuck the paper in my pocket. We just talked.

I told him about the first time I saw him when, with his wife, June Haver, and their children, they had gone to spend a day at Knott's Berry Farm.

The MacMurray family sat down to dine in the steak house there and I'm not sure whether Fred ever had a chance to even start that meal.

There was a procession of autograph seekers and MacMurray didn't turn down a request. For the most part, they were adults who wanted autographs "for my son and daughter."

In MacMurray's opinion, not mine, there was nothing so wrong with the autograph seekers' behavior.

"As a matter of fact," he said, "I went to a party some time back at Bob Hope's place. There were a lot of sport greats there, Casey Stengel, Jack Dempsey."

He grinned and tapped the tobacco in his pipe. "I got a lot of autographs," he said. "Told them they were for the children."

WE TALKED some more. About his ABC-TV series—

"It's the type of show that could continue on for quite a while if we get the right timeslot and they don't throw 'The Beverly Hillbillies' at us."

And raising children—

"It would be nice if all the problems could be solved in a half-hour every week the way they have me do in the series."

About golf—

"There's no use getting sore at yourself. I used to. Now, well it's just wonderful to be out there."

About Father's Day—

"We're not planning anything special that I know about. We're just going to spend the day at home."

A simple life. A fine guy. A highly proficient actor. And really, contrary to his own opinion, not a bad interview.

MOLLY BEE

For Molly Bee It's Country Music, Yipee!

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Molly Bee, the sweet-faced teenager who gained fame singing hillbilly songs, is 24 years old now and has returned to the kind of music that made her a star.

For the past three years Molly had turned sophisticate in nightclubs and television.

But somehow the image didn't jibe with her wide-set eyes, youthful voice and blonde coiffure. Even now she must carry proper identification in her bag to be served a drink.

So Molly has forgone the tight gowns, spike heels, fancy hairdo and throbbing pop tunes in favor of simple dresses, full skirts, wide belts and wholesome country music.

"THAT'S HOW I started out back in 1955 on the Tennessee Ernie Television show," she said. "And when rock 'n' roll caught on I started singing that, too. It was comfortable and fun."

"But the chic costumes and pop songs just didn't suit me somehow. Now when I play a club I sing about six minutes of popular tunes and then sing country music the rest of the time."

"Country music tells a story instead of repeating the same phrase over and over again."

Molly returned to her old formula this season on the Jimmy Dean television show. Public response and her own kicks at fashioning the old hoodown spirit convinced Molly she will never be another Dinah Shore.

"So it's back to country tunes for me," she concluded, "and I couldn't be happier."

WHAT'S HAPPENED TO LOVE STORIES?

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ And How About Jazz Series?

By RICK DU BROW
HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Arrows in the air:

When will the public see some practical results of Congress' year-old investigation of television ratings?

When will the networks offer a good jazz series?

Will the theme song of next year's television award ceremonies be "Once in Love with Emmy"?

When will the public see some practical results of Congress' year-old investigation of television ratings?

Have most video producers forgotten how to make love stories, or don't they remember what they are?

IN ALL of television's talk about protecting that good old family audience in that good old living room, has it ever occurred to anybody that bachelors and single girls are people too?—not to mention husbands and wives without children, and the vast number of oldsters who live alone?

And would advertisers really care about protecting the good old family audience if it didn't represent the biggest spending market of viewers?

And is simple-minded pap really "protecting" anybody

anyway, or is it, in the end, an invitation to mental retrogression?

Why aren't there more female broadcasters in television? Answer (partly): Have you ever listened to the voices of most American women?

Will television have to wait for Barbra Streisand's next video appearance before it has another entertainment moment as memorable as her last?

NANCY KULP

Love on Last Lap as Nancy Meets Rock

By JOSEPH FINNIGAN

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Nancy Kulp, the efficient secretary on television's "Beverly Hillsbillies," has landed a man—right in her lap.

She's been limping ever since. Miss Kulp, self-described as "kind of boney," rarely is involved in motion picture romances. She's never been described in studio press releases as ravishing.

Her beauty, she says, might better be compared to "a prototype of the female intellectual, the Vassar Phi Beta Kappa type."

Recently Miss Kulp was the envy of the town's starlets and leading ladies. She was cast in the movie "Strange Bedfellows" with Rock Hudson and Gina Lollobrigida.

In the picture, Hudson keeps bumping into Miss Kulp, sometimes violently. For one scene he landed in her lap. That's fine, the first few times. But Hollywood has a habit of refilming scenes.

"IT HAD all sorts of complications," Nancy said. "He sat in my lap about 15 or 20 times. We did that many takes. After about 10 times I wasn't able to move. He'd sprained some of my ligaments and my leg is still purple."

A high price to pay—even for Rock Hudson.

Hudson, being a considerate fellow, was not one to dismiss Nancy lightly. After all, a man just doesn't go around tearing up a girl's ligaments, moving picture or no moving picture.

Miss Kulp revealed that he sent her a gift, something to remind her of their picture. "He gave me a beautiful cane," she said.

La Reina Rule

WHAT YOUR NAME MEANS

Send your name to La Reina
Rule in care of Southland
Magazine, 604 Pine Ave.,
Long Beach, Calif., 90812, for origin and meaning and brief
genealogy, for reply only in this column.

DEAR MISS RULE: Would like genealogy on SIN-
CLAIR—A. H., Lakewood.

A. H.: SINCLAIR traces to Woldernus, the Count of St.
Clair in Normandy, France.
This nobleman entered England with the 11th century
Norman conquerors. His descendant William de St. Clair obtained the baronial estate
of Roslin in Midlothian, Scotland, in 1150. Other descendants lived in Norfolk, England. The town and estate of
St. Clair was so called in honor of Saint Clair, a third century bishop whose name meant "illustrious one." The surname "St. Clair" was shortened to Sinclair in medieval English dialect speech.
Sir William Sinclair of this lineage died in 1329 fighting
the Moors in Spain while en route to the Holy Land. The Sinclair shield is blue, emblazoned with a ship at anchor with furled sails.

DEAR MISS RULE: What is the genealogy on HOW-ELL—D. H., Santa Ana.

D. H.: HOWELL is from the ancient Welsh word
"Howel" meaning "alert one." This name became famed through the 10th century Welsh Prince Howell the Good, son of Cadell, King
and "Glory of all the Britons." The records of Henry
II of England list an ancestor, Howell, son of Oeni, in 1161. The Howell shield is red, with three triple-towered
silver castles as emblems.
Edward Howell was a founder of Southampton, Long Island, in 1640.

DEAR MISS RULE: Kindly
analyze BREWSTER — E. C.,
Long Beach.

E. C.: BREWSTER was the old English title for a "brewer of ale and beer." Records of 1273 list Emma La Breustere
of Buckingham. The Brewster shield is blue, decorated with an ermine coated chev-ron between three silver stars. The elder William Brewster, one of the founding fathers of New England, arrived there on the Mayflower in 1620.

DEAR MISS RULE: Please
inform on Boone. — M. M.,
Seal Beach.

M. M.: BOONE gained lasting fame in our country's frontier history through Daniel Boone whose father emigrated from Exeter, England,
to North Carolina in 1750.
Boone was celebrated in Europe centuries before America was discovered. The ancestor was Humphrey, the Sire de Bohun, whose estate
was at Carentan, Normandy,
France. "Bohun" meant "messenger and protector." After the Norman English conquest
Bohun obtained the large

OUR COVER

Harriet Glanville is something of a paradox —she teaches school, is unmarried and is a golf addict. And calling her paradoxical is complimentary because she is not at all like the many concepts of a spinster schoolmarm or the popular idea of a woman golfer. Yet two consecutive Long Beach city championships attest to her ability as a competitor and she'll start in quest of her third city title, starting Monday. She plans a summer campaign in the National Open, the Broadmoor Invitational and the U. S. Amateur tournaments. Southland presents this fine golfer on today's cover and there is more about her golfing interests on Page 7.

NEXT WEEK

In these days of a little down and a little a week or month, many persons give too little thought to their credit ratings, sort of taking credit for granted. But the careless ones come up short and find themselves in hot water. Moving to another community won't help, because there exists a nationwide system of credit rating that keeps tab on just about everyone and it's a hard system to beat. "How's Your Credit?" is the title of an interesting article on this important phase of modern economy. Watch for it in next week's Southland Magazine.

NORFOLK'S MOST EXCITING HOME IMPROVEMENT SUPERMARKET

Romance of the Rancho Era

By Hortense Hoffman

FEW OF the thousands who throng Santa Anita in the seasons of racing or who visit the state-county Arboretum realize, probably little care unless they are history minded, that the whole of the intriguing area once belonged to a beautiful Indian woman — held under Mexican land grant.

She was the wife of Hugo Reid, a Scotch paisano, who wrote the first history of her people in 1852 with her help in interviewing old Gabrielinos. Would you have believed that out of two worlds these two would become one if you had seen them meet in 1934?

She sat in the driver's seat of the creaky oxcart to which he brought bolts of fustian and drill, silver spoons and a wooden platter that Senora Eulalia Perez y de Marino had purchased at his tienda in the pueblo of Los Angeles. He lifted the 100-year-old Mexican Dona beside the Indian beauty, as she casually invited him, "Take cha (Mexican tea) with us some day, Senor Reid, a ride in the open air will do you good."

"Gr-racias!" His Scotch burr never left his Spanish, French, English or Indian. Blue eyes twinkled at the girl's eyes — hers were like black velvet — and he stroked his pointed red goatee.

REID later banged at the massive gates of the Rancho San Pascual in spite of having learned that the Indian girl, a neophyte of San Gabriel mission, was married to an Indian 28 years older than herself. She was proud of their sons, Felipe at 12 and Jose Maria, his shadow, two years younger, both like their father, and their adored little daughter, Maria Ygnacia, a miniature of herself. They all lived with the old Senora in San Gabriel on the ranch which she was given because of many years as house-mother at the mission. Bartolomea lifted the iron bars, reproving him gently, "This is the hour of siesta. Let us sit in the patio until the Senora awakens and then we will have cha."

About two years later, after her husband had died of smallpox and their fourth child, Carlitos, had been born, Reid, aged 27, returned from Mexico to court the young widow, aged 29. He fulfilled every legality, becoming a Mexican citizen and a Catholic. He took the name of Perfecto Hugo Reid and gave her the name of his queen, also the name of the fickle lass for whom he had left a promising career at Cambridge University to seek adventure in the new world.

She became Dona Victoria Reid. Padre Tomas yoked them in holy matrimony with a scarf around their shoulders and gold rings on their wedding fingers, as they knelt before the altar. Her white lace mantilla cascaded from a high Spanish comb, in her coronet of black braids, over her long white lace dress, down to white satin slippers, like doves resting in the courtyard.

Singing choir boys led the bridal carretta drawn by white oxen garlanded with roses. The whole world came to a three-hour dinner at Senora Eulalia's. They danced to music of guitar, violin, triangle and drum on a newly built pavilion enclosed on three sides and decorated by ribbons and flowers. At dawn Senora Eulalia stole behind Reid calling "Cascarones!" as she broke an eggshell full of confetti everybody joined the fun and were all spangled and drenched with scented water. The wedding fiesta was held during the week of the harvest in 1837.

REID BUILT his first home in San Gabriel, two-storied, although Victoria declared, "Never will I leave the earth's floor. One of the seven giants holding up the world might move." So a living-room was used as their bedroom. In Don Hugo Reid built this adobe residence in 1839 and restoration has now made it of interest to the moderns.

1855 her fear was justified when the house collapsed in an earthquake.

He adopted her Indian children and taught them daily even teaching Dona Victoria

ONE OF THE pleasures of studying antiques is learning of interesting and unusual circumstances which often surround certain pieces. For instance, who would think that a uniquely styled teapot would be an important memento of a famous pottery maker and a great religious leader?

Such is the case with a John Wesley teapot cherished by Mrs. Stephen R. Hemmi of 3366 Cerritos Ave. The teapot, made in 1908 at the English Wedgwood factory, is a 7-inch-high copy of the original gallon teapot made especially for John Wesley by Josiah Wedgwood in 1761.

Wesley, founder of the Methodist Church, and Josiah Wedgwood, founder of the establishment bearing his name, became fast friends when Wesley was preaching near the early English pottery factory.

THE pottery maker became so impressed with Wesley's sincerity and his natural religious zeal, that he grew very fond of the preacher. One day as Mr. and Mrs. Wedgwood served tea in the beautiful garden, Wedgwood commented on Wesley's liking for tea (he usually drank 20 or more cups per day), and offered to make Wesley a teapot that would hold a gallon!

John Wesley's Teapot

This teapot is a quart-sized copy of a gallon teapot once owned by John Wesley and made by Josiah Wedgwood.

When Wesley was asked what design he would like, he bowed courteously to Mrs. Wedgwood and said, "The design on your charming blue calico dress and the flowers of this garden."

Thus a pretty wreath in delft blue, combining the rose of England, the thistle of Scotland and the shamrock of Ireland, was made to encircle each side of the teapot. And, because Wedgwood so admired Wesley's strict adherence to prayer before and after each meal, he had a blessing by Wesley printed within each wreath.

ONE SIDE of the teapot, with its blessing, is illustrated in the photo accompanying this article. On the other side are these lines:

We thank thee Lord for this our food
But more because of Jesus (sic) blood

Let manna to our Souls be given
The bread of Life sent down from Heaven

The original gallon teapot, now in the Wesley Museum in London is valued at $10,000.

In 1908, Mrs. Anna Onstott, wife of a Methodist minister, in Maine, sought to raise money for worthy religious causes. Reading the fascinating story of the gallon teapot, she wondered whether the Wedgwood factory would produce it in the quart size, so that money from the sales of the teapots could benefit her church. The Wedgwood people were happy to comply with her request, and the sales of the small teapots soon soared beyond her expectations.

Mrs. Hemmi came into possession of her teapot years ago, when an old friend sent it to her from Illinois. The friend, a former Long Beach resident, received the teapot through an uncle, a bishop in the Methodist Church, who acquired it when in conference in Maine about 1908.

She Comes to the Fore at a Tee Party

By Rich Roberts

Harriet Glanville, ever a gracious champion, hugs runner-up Norma Deeble after the 1963 Long Beach City women's tournament.

HARRIET GLANVILLE teaches school, is single and spends all of her spare time with clubs.

But she hardly fits the image of the spinster school marm; nor does she approximate the popular idea of the woman golfer.

The clubs she's most interested in are the kind numbered one-through-nine.

While other ladies might be reaching for a tea bag, Harriet usually is reaching into her golf bag for a tee.

When she says she has a lot of ironing to do, she means she's going to be working on her short game.

And when it comes to putting around, don't look for her in the garden; she'll be on the practice green.

She is not only vivacious and intelligent but also the best woman golfer in the Long Beach area. Her two consecutive Long Beach City women's championships say so.

"I THINK it's a wholesome ambition for a girl to become a good golfer," Harriet says. "I was always interested in golf. My mother got me started. My father was real non-athletic.

"Mom wasn't especially good but she liked to play and encouraged me to play. She would even shag balls for me when I practiced. I guess I always knew how to swing a club, but I couldn't really take it seriously until I got out of UCLA. I couldn't play and graduate, too."

Harriet's schedule as a girls physical education instructor at Paramount Junior High School leaves her free to play only on weekends when school is in session. Then she hits the course both Saturday and Sunday.

"I play to a 5-handicap most of the time, except in the summer. Then I play all the time and it comes down to a 2."

FIRST ON HER competitive list this summer is defense of her Long Beach women's title starting Monday.

"If I can win this year I'll be up with Alice Bauer. She won three in a row and four altogether."

Alice is only one of the past Long Beach women's champions who went on to successful professional careers. Others include her younger sister, Marlene, and the original champion, Betty Hicks.

"Of course, my real ambition is to play in the national open," Harriet says with a girlish sigh. "It's being held at San Diego this year (in July) so I feel I have a good chance."

If Harriet qualifies to compete against the likes of Mickey Wright and other lady pros, she figures it would give her valuable experience for ensuing women's amateur tournaments like the Broadmoor Invitational at Colorado Springs, the Canadian Amateur at Calgary and the U. S. Amateur at Hutchinson, Kan.

"I've been to the quarterfinals twice in the national amateur, and I'm going to give it a real good shot this year."

HARRIET IS TOILING toward that aim with the best kind of competition she can find on a weekend.

"I enjoy playing golf more with men than women because of the competition," she says.

She notes that the males' instinctive superiority complex is forgotten when it comes to a friendly Nassau wager.

"They don't give me any strokes. I play them on even terms. I don't outhit the long hitters but I'm usually up with them.

"Like most women players, my short game and putting used to be the best part of my game. But now it's getting necessary to hit the ball. I've added about 15 yards carry to my tee shots so I'm getting 215 or 220. You have to have that extra carry in most tournaments because the fairways are such that you don't get much roll."

As one can see, Harriet is considerably beyond the general run of women golfers. But she remains very much the woman in defending her sex's intrusion upon one of man's last sanctuaries, the golf course.

"There are women who are slow and don't know the rules," she admits, "but there are men, too. It's like the old joke about women drivers. A man can do the same thing and another man won't think anything of it."

AUDREY BROWN, president of the Meadowlark Women's Club, of which Harriet is a member, adds, "Girls who belong to women's clubs are usually more conscious of the rules than men. We make a point of it.

"And many women's clubs have a maximum handicap to prevent play from getting too slow. We feel that the place to learn the game is on the driving range with a good instructor—not on the golf course with some friends."

Harriet has won the Meadowlark women's title the last six years, but Audrey insists that the 85 members don't resent the monopoly.

"She's a wonderful person and we're glad she's with us. We're just proud of everything she does."

Nor does Harriet apologize for her prowess.

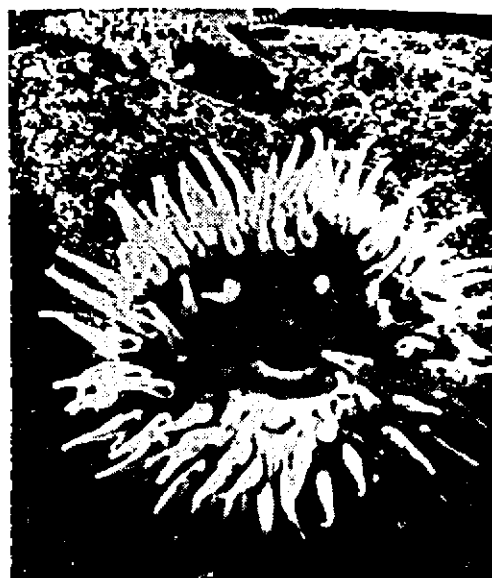

"Women's golf is a wide-open field for competition," she says, "even for women amateurs. As for the pros, there are only about 30 playing the tour.

"It's more of a glamorous sport than it used to be, too—and still very feminine. That's what I try to prove."

The sea anemone may look like a lovely flower, but it isn't

Death Trap of the Deep

By Frank L. Remington

Dahlia anemones are brightly colored sea creatures with their arms arranged in five rows around mouth in center.

LURED BY the beauty of the sea anemone, other denizens of the deep discover their fatal error too late to escape. With the speed of lightning, the lovely assassin ensnares its victim, pierces the creature's skin with barb-like cells and shoots poison into the wound. Stupor or death ensues and the anemone feasts on its latest catch.

Popularly termed "sea flower," the anemone in reality is a low form of animal life. The tentacles resemble the petals of a flower. Some species are called dahlia anemones and daisy anemones because of their similarity to those plants.

Gorgeously tinted in shades ranging from bright crimson to dark purple, these flower-like animals usually attach themselves to rocks. Although they are capable of slow creeping movements, they depend mostly on ocean currents and the waving of their tentacles for locomotion. The tentacles, covered with numerous thread-like cells, capture and paralyze the prey and conduct it to the slit-like mouth in the center of the waving arms. Food, as well as air, also comes from the constant stream of water passing through the creature's body.

TO APPEASE its hearty appetite, the anemone gobbles most anything unfortunate enough to come within range of its death-dealing tentacles, although its chief items of diet are fish, crabs and shrimp. Sometimes it bites off more than it can chew! But its surprisingly elastic mouth usually manages to engulf the food.

When dining on shellfish, the anemone digests only the soft part of the body, later dispensing of the shell through its mouth. An ambitious specimen once swallowed a large scallop shell, which lodged between its mouth and stomach. All efforts to eject the obstruction failed, so the versatile anemone, unable to swallow, developed a new mouth at the base of its body.

In shallow water, dahlia anemones often attract venturesome bees with their beauty. Trapped in the creature's tentacles and fighting frantically but futilely to escape, the bee finally succumbs and is then eaten by the treacherous dahlia.

WHEN THIS beautiful assassin of the sea wishes to escape notice, it hides beneath overhanging rocks or camouflages itself with shell fragments attached to its tentacles. Some specimens, especially the plumrose anemone, flatten themselves to barely the thickness of a playing card. In this form they spread over an area of five or six inches. By taking on water, they can, within 15 minutes, again swell their bodies to normal.

Many anemones form peculiar partnerships with other inhabitants of the ocean, but these associations usually benefit both participants. For instance, some sea flowers acquire their own private limousine and chauffeur by attaching themselves permanently to the hard shell of a hermit crab. The chauffeur carries his passenger about from place to place, and even shares his food with the rider. For its part, the passenger discourages any prowler who might cast hungry eyes toward the crab. Experience has taught such would-be diners to keep safely away from the anemone's poisonous tentacles.

Another crab, the melia, found only in the tropics, enters into an even stranger relationship with some forms of the sea flower. This devoted creature carries two anemones, one clutched tenderly in each pincher. And if he should lose the guardianship of either of his charges, the melia displays the nervousness and concern of a worried mother over a lost child.

THE MOST amazing partnership of all exists between a giant tropical anemone measuring some two feet across and a small fish called amphiprion, about three inches long. These little creatures live comfortably within the body cavity of the huge sea flower, usually three of the fish sharing the stomach of a host. This furnishes an excellent hiding place, and the tiny lodgers pay their rent in a unique manner. Venturing from their cavern-like residence, they swim about until a larger fish, with visions of a tempting dinner, gives chase. About the time the hungry fish closes in on the amphiprion, it darts into its strange home and the chaser finds himself helplessly trapped in the anemone's tentacles, where instead of dining he is dined upon.

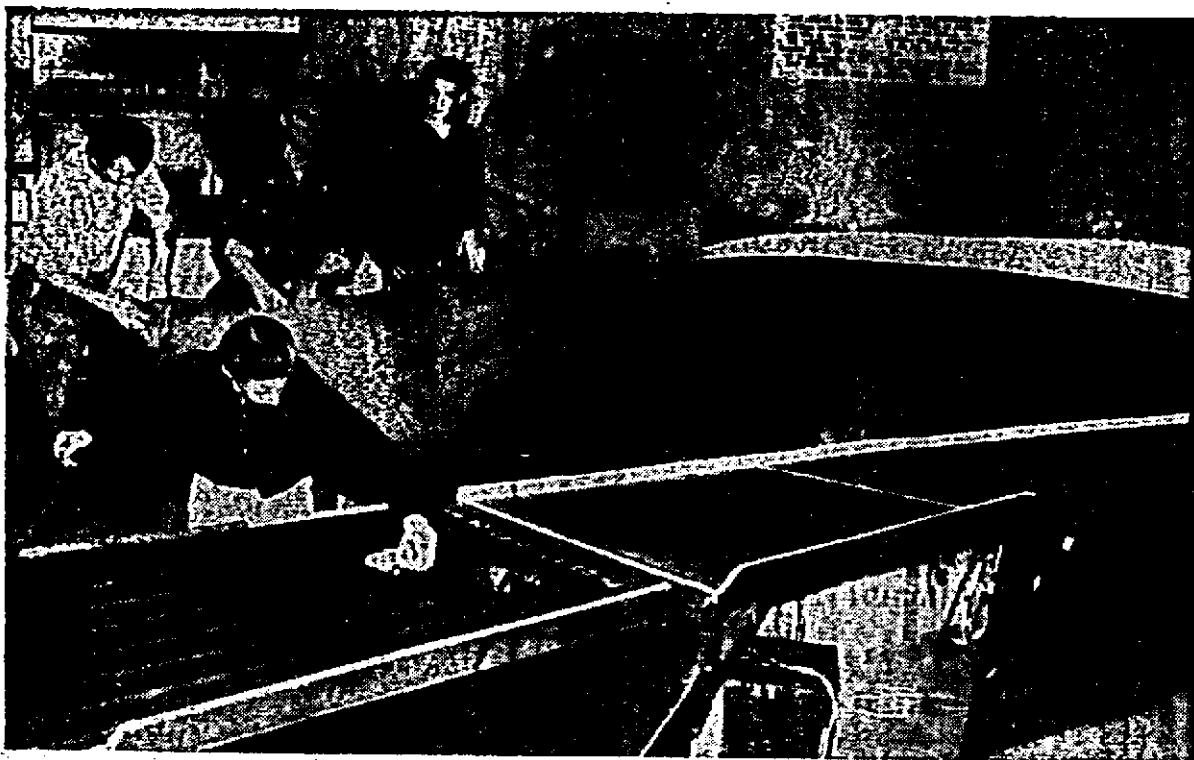

Truly one of the strangest inhabitants of the ocean, the sea anemone strikes terror into the hearts of many denizens of the deep. But just the same, its beautifully colored body is pleasant to look upon and some creatures, who closely associate with it, find the sea flower not such a bad companion after all.

—Photos by the Author

The widowed sea anemone, spending its life in solitary manner, resembles an exotic tropical plant. Its delicate tentacles seize smaller creatures.

Slot Car Racing:

Tiny, electric-powered cars spin around oval or figure 8 "slot tracks" in newest game of the speed world. Sport takes name from slots that guide the cars as operators use remote control units to "drive" the cars.

Newest Adventure in the World of Speed

By Robert Hazelleat

IF SOMEONE could lower the price of a $30,000 race car to less than $20, reduce the track from 2½ miles to 110 feet, and still retain the thrills of an Indianapolis race, that someone would make a mint.

"This year," says Jack Tate of Model-Rama, a Compton model car components plant, "the hobby industry expects to hit $27 million in sales on model cars alone."

"There's a good reason for it," he continues. "You can begin with an over-the-counter, snap-together kit for

$4 to $6. From there, you can modify, rebuild, scrap and begin again with a more sophisticated model built from available components, or even from scratch with only tires and motor to be bought.

"With every step, the hobbyist is learning and having a ball at the same time. And the big companies? We love 'em. A youngster buys a kit or two, and soon graduates to the hand-built jobs. There's room for both of us."

A TRIP to a model racing setup, better known as slot

car racing, can be quite an adventure. Usually, it's a hobby shop with plenty of room.

There will be competitors ranging from kids barely tall enough to see the track, to adults who have long collected pension checks—all interested in seeing how fast a car can be made to go and still keep to the track.

On race night, qualifying runs determine placement in later events. A few evenings ago, at Compton's Model-Rama Pit Stop, a new record of 4.20 seconds was set on of 100 feet. The tiny car, 1/24 or 1/25 the size of its larger relatives, raced on a 1/24 half mile track. The speed? Just under 18 miles an hour, magnified by the figure eight layout. Translated to normal car size, the pace would be a fantastic 432 miles per hour.

The Compton installation has a figure eight, two road courses (one of them called the Riverside) and a drag strip about to be re-opened. The strip, a scale quarter-mile, is 55 feet long. On the former track, one little bomb was timed at .995 second. That's about 37 miles per hour from start to finish, a scale speed that's almost unbelievable.

DURING THE DAY and non-race evenings, patrons drop a dime in a slot to energize their racing lane for 15 minutes or thereabouts, depending on the shop.

On the big nights, though, entry fees cover track time and trophies awarded for trophy dash, semi-main, main event and other achievements.

LeRoy Higgins, an enthusiast from South Pasadena whose wife and son are also devotees, has more than 100 trophies, all collected in less than a year. Competitors take pride, just as big-car drivers do, in "wiping out" all comers at tracks throughout the Southland and even in national events.

Says Higgins, "Races are won by staying on the track, as well as by speed. There's a knack to it."

One doesn't simply stick a car in its slot and push a button. The driver either nurses a "go" button provided by the track, or brings his own plunger affair that works like a gas pedal. Some drivers even have brakes by using the motor as a generator through a special, hand-held switch.

A CRASH on a turn during a hot race is nothing less than spectacular. A car mis-cues and spins, another car immediately slams into it, while a third vehicle rams through and into the air for several feet, leaving a trail of parts on the track.

The car is much too fast to be brought into a turn wide open. Power must be slacked off at the curves, turned on again at just the right point. Like their big brothers, cars win when they can gain a tiny fraction of a second before braking, accelerate quickly and down the straightaway. A miscalculation results in a sure spin-out. Danger to life, limb and pocketbook may be less than with Grand Prix cars—but a hobbyist soon learns about centrifugal force.

The new sport has a longer history than many persons realize. A British military officer hybridized an electric train motor with a model car body and chassis about 16 years ago. He was captivated by his efforts and went on to refine the idea. Others soon took up the hobby, and about 11 years ago interest crossed the Atlantic.

ABOUT 1957, model building in the United States picked up a bit, going through about five years of off-and-on activity, until it really boomed in 1961.

"Apparently, everyone had the idea at once," explains Jack Tate. "I suppose buyers for the big department stores simply reached decisions simultaneously. One Christmas, slot cars were 'in' and that was it, as big companies (Continued on Page 21)

Whirling around the slots at unbelievable speeds, the little cars require considerable skill from the operators to keep them on the turns and yet maintain highest speeds.

DON'T try to squeeze so much into so little!

Boudoir Brightener

This fluffy rose tree flourishes best as boudoir shelf brightener.

By Lorena Fleissig

A FLUFFY rose tree flourishes best on a boudoir shelf. You'll appreciate its bright yellow, orange and red aura of cheer on a gray morning. It can sweeten the air with some drops of a favorite scent. It can be a bouquet in which to park some elusive pearl corsage pins.

Most of the trimmings were odds and ends left from "this-and-that" items, and you might search your own scrapbox for interesting subjects.

Materials are a seven-inch stick, one half inch or less thick, a three-inch styrofoam ball, a dime store red glass vase three inches tall and wide enough at the base to support the 12-inch height of the rose tree.

IN THE PROCESS of assembling the tree, the stick was slightly sharpened to a point and tipped with glue, then forced halfway into the center of the foam ball. A line of paste was spread down one side of the stick and strip of green tie ribbon was wound smoothly to within an inch of the end. Over the green ribbon was wrapped a strip of pale green net and a diagonal curve of gold tie lace for glitter effect.

The unwrapped bottom of the stick was pushed into a block of styrofoam wedged into and extending up the height of the vase. (When the foam was wedged too tightly, a shallow hole had to be cut for the stick to enter.)

The plastic roses in orange, yellow and red, were leftover party picks. The scraps of red net were folded in a square and all cut at once into two inch circles. The picks were cut short to an inch, pushed through a circle of red net, tipped with glue and stuck into the foam ball. Beginning at the top of the ball, the flower heads were set in rows down the curve of the sides. More roses filled in the open spaces, alternating the colors and 20 or more flowers were used. The number depends on the spacing.

ANOTHER ROSE was attached to the neck of the vase with a gold wire stem. Plastic leaves pushed inside the neck of the vase hid the foam.

Substitutions could be, instead of the dowel, a toy arrow shaft, a rod or metal tube.

For the rose picks, the flowers from several corsages.

In place of net, pin a series of ribbon twists into the foam so that V-cut ends will stand out with a perky effect.

SOUTHLAND HOMES

Modest Exterior

By Stella George

MODEST EXTERIOR of the Long Beach home of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Mee and family, 5505 Flagstone St., betrays the fact that the interior has a definite air of elegance. The former two-bedroom one-bath tract house has been remodeled to the extent that it is now an entirely different dwelling from its original. The work had been done so skillfully that it seems as if the structure was always the way it is today. It is also difficult for an observer to believe that every bit of the remodeling was done by Mr. and Mrs. Mee (with the exception of the large plumbing fixtures in the new bathroom).

One unique feature about the remodeling is conversion of a former living room into a large formal dining room. A new and spacious living room—so comfortable in decor that it serves the purpose of living and family room—was added. In addition, the Mees built on a large master bedroom and bath.

AN ENTRANCE HALL was created by putting a wall on the right on the front entry; thus there is entrance to the hall and bedrooms to the left, the sunken living room directly ahead, and the dining room to the right.

Three wide steps lead down to the living room, which is separated from the dining room above only by small white posts supporting a narrow top.

Budget was an important consideration in the new decorating scheme. The Mees purchased a used dining room set which was made of heavy walnut and which included a large buffet. They painted the set antique white, flecked with gold, and covered the chairs with a rich royal blue fabric. They lowered the buffet and used the bottom legs as a base for a couch in the living room. Flooring in the dining room and adjoining kitchen is of black and white tile squares. The white posts which overlook the living room were a part of an old table (purchased for $2). Another portion of the table is now an ornamental piece in the entrance hall which, at a glance, seems custom made for the purpose. Shutters cover the front window in the dining room.

THE NEW living room is carpeted in thick wool turf of a neutral beige shade. A black fireplace in on the far wall, in full view of the dining room. Two sofas, which Mrs. Mee recovered, are at right angles along one wall and below the dining room area. Above one is an arrangement of original paintings, all done by Mrs. Mee. Nearby is a hi-fi set. Across the room are two occasional chairs flanking a small table. One is an heirloom piece more than 100 years old.

The kitchen and dinette seem larger because of new decorating ideas which have been put into effect. White brick wallpaper and a handsome mural surround the dinette. A plastic topped table is surrounded by four black wrought iron chairs. Overhead is a white lamp that hangs low.

THE NEW master bedroom is half again the size of the other two. Closets are ample. A glass wall faces the patio. The new bath has gold flecked tile and a built-in dressing table. The other two bedrooms are tailored to the needs of a small girl and two older brothers.

This modest exterior fails to indicate luxury inside.

HOW YOUR CHILD LEARNS

A Boy's Book List

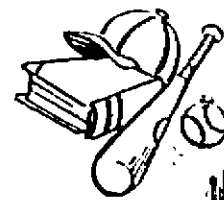

By Howard E. Kent

QUESTION: Could you recommend some summer reading—just for fun—for a boy of 13?

ANSWER: Yes, if you don't mind searching the remote, dusty corners of second-hand book stores.

I recommend a series of books by Seckatary Hawkins (Robert F. Schulkers).

They capture the spirit and adventure of boyhood more successfully than any books I know. Nothing comparable is being written in this dull, austere, plastic-covered era of children's "literature."

It's hard to explain the marvelous flavor of the Seckatary Hawkins books. But you get a good idea of it from the introduction to "Stoner's Boy":

"We boys have had some exciting times around this old river bank. The trouble started a long time ago, and the reason we organized our club was to figure out ways to steer clear of trouble. And that's how it comes about, too, that all the other boys in and around our town call me 'Seckatary' Hawkins. You see, when the boys in our club used to play together on the old river bank, right down off the main road, we would always get into a fight, somehow or other, with the boys from Pelham, which is just across the river from our town. And the Pelham fellows were pretty rough, too. They built shacks on their side of the river, in which they would meet every day and watch for a chance to 'get' us. Well, we didn't want to get into any fights, neither did we want to keep away from the river bank...."

Modern authors of "wholesome" books for children just aren't writing about the rough fellows across the river. So, from the 1920s, I recommend:

- "Stoner's Boy."
- "The Red Runners."
- "The Chinese Coin."
- "Knights of the Square Table."
- "The Yellow Y."
- "The Gray Ghost."

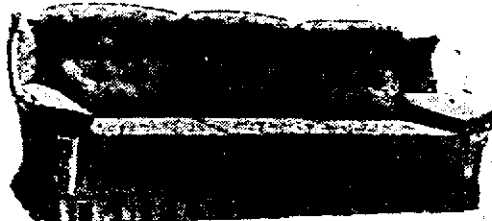

Good reading for the long, hot summer.

New Vitality on the Cotton Scene

Check and Double Check—Gale and Lord's bright navy and white checked Dacron and cotton makes up superbly in Hannah Troy's jacket dress. Picking up the check-stencil motif in the Lampshade—the high white hat of John Frederici—style has new vitality.

The Gale & Lord cotton story this season in the world of fashion is one of textures, ribs, construction. The fabulous success of ottoman has carried on with many new fabrics in the ribbed theme. The look of cavalry twill or whipcord, the crisp hand of pique, the happy alliance of polyester with cotton makes for new vitality and excitement on the cotton scene.

The newest and most conversational is the bubble pique in tender romantic shades of mauve, buttercup, mint, hyacinth and the like. And in all forms of bubble and of ottoman WHITE continues as a high fashion color in the hands of America's foremost designers.

FOOD

Fritters: Fun to Do, Fun to Eat

By Mildred K. Flanary
 Southland Magazine
 Home Economics Editor

GOLDEN brown corn or apple fritters make a hit at any meal, either as a potato substitute or, in the case of apple fritters, as a tasty, filling dessert. For breakfast, they give the day a good start.

For simplicity, try using a package of prepared escalloped apples, or corn soufflé. Either will eliminate time-consuming advance preparation work, including peeling, baking or boiling.

Apple Fritters

- 1 12 ounce package frozen escalloped apples
- 1 1/2 cup flour
- 2 tsp. baking powder
- 3/4 tsp. salt
- 2 eggs slightly beaten
- 1/2 cup milk
- fat for frying

Defrost escalloped apples, at room temperature for about 2 hours, or overnight in a refrigerator. Sift flour, baking powder and salt. Add milk. Stir in apples and slightly beaten eggs. Drop by heaping teaspoons into hot fat about 1/2 inch deep in skillet. Brown on all sides. Drain on paper towels. Serve with syrup as a vegetable substitute, or with lemon-flavored whipped cream as a dessert. Makes 16 fritters, serves 3.

Corn Fritters

- 1 12 ounce package frozen corn soufflé
- 3/4 cup flour
- 1/2 tsp. baking powder
- 3/4 tsp. salt
- 1 egg
- fat for frying

Defrost frozen corn soufflé, either at room temperature for about 2 hours, or overnight in the refrigerator. Sift flour, baking powder and salt. Beat egg. Stir mixture into egg. Add defrosted corn soufflé. Blend lightly. Drop by heaping teaspoonful into hot fat about 1 inch deep in skillet or French fry kettle. Brown on all sides. Drain on paper towels. Serve with syrup for any meal. Makes 16 fritters, serves 3.

Fritters made with apples or corn are welcome variation for potatoes or for dessert, or for a filling breakfast.

A. It is so well known for quantity of milk and butter-fat produced, as well as for being such a good all-purpose breed, that it has long been the most popular breed in Denmark. In 1938, the Danish cow with highest yield, a Red Danish Dairy, produced 19,634 pounds of milk, of 5.62 percent fat, and 1,247.75 pounds of butter. Heifers and bulls of the breed have been exported to many countries for breeding purposes, in the past 25 or 30 years.

A. The ship did not purposely carry a skeleton on board, but when she was broken up, in 1888, wreckers supposedly discovered the skeleton of a workman who had been trapped and sealed into a compartment in the double hull during the ship's construction. Old sailors have been quoted as saying that the skeleton on board was responsible for all the Great Eastern's misfortunes. The mammoth, ill-fated ship was built in England in 1854-1858.

A. "Slack water" is the period when no horizontal movement of water can be seen at the surface — when the sea level is neither rising nor falling. The term is generally used with reference to the time between flood and ebb currents. "High-water slack" is the slack period following high tide; "low-water slack" is the slack following low tide, before the turn of the tide.

A. The distance depends greatly on the nature of the iceberg's surface exposed to the ship. Average radar distance may be 8 to 10 miles. If the exposed surface is a gentle slope, and the day is clear, the iceberg can probably be seen visually long before radar picks it up. The large vertical-sided Antarctic icebergs can usually be detected by radar at ranges of 15 to 30 miles.

For well-exposed color movies at the beach, it's usually necessary to close your lens opening by a half or even one full stop from normal, because of the light sand and preponderance of light colors.

If you have an electric-eye camera, this is done automatically—but remember this situation can "fool" the meter. When you're taking a picture of a person sitting under a beach umbrella, chances are the meter will read all of the bright sand around the umbrella and the area under the umbrella would be underexposed.

If your camera has an exposure lock, move in close, take a reading of the person and then lock the aperture. Otherwise, use a manual setting.

Building this "treeless" treehouse is relatively simple and the finished unit will yield hours of fun for kids.

By Bill Meyerriecks

IN THE life of every youngster, there has to be a treehouse. You might think back to your youth and remember the fun and excitement of having a "headquarters" or clubhouse up high where you could imagine the world was yours.

Sketchbook this week makes it possible for Dad to become the hero of the hour to his youngsters with a plan for a "treeless" treehouse. The plan takes into consideration that your back yard may not have a wide spreading tree in which to build the house. It provides complete start from the ground up.

THE TREEHOUSE is not a difficult project. All you need is the Sketchbook plan and a moderate pile of standard lumber. Regular tools ordinarily found around home are sufficient.

Specifications on the plan call for a completely safe treehouse with a floor only five feet off the ground and the railings 7½ feet up. Height to the peak is about 12 feet. If you wish to use longer 4x4 corner posts, the treehouse could be moved higher.

Floor space inside the treehouse is 5 feet 2 inches square. Access is up a magic ladder through a trap door. This makes it particularly good fun. The imagination of the youngster soars as he climbs up the ladder to his "control tower," or "forest ranger station," or whatever the treehouse may be to him that moment of play.

TO HOLD down the cost of materials, the Sketchbook plan recommends use of insulation board as paneling material for the sides and the roof. If cost is no object, plywood can be used instead.

The treehouse design is S-165 and may be obtained by sending 50 cents with name and address to Building Editor, Southland Magazine, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach 12, Calif.

DEAR MISS RULE: May we learn about WHITTING-

TON.—J. S. Lakewood.

J. S. WHITTINGTON, a name famed from the English legend about Dick Whittington, was actually derived from the ancestral home-town of Whittington (meaning "estate of the fair one's family") in Worcestershire. Dick Whittington, a boy who came to London to seek his fortune, had achieved nothing and was en route home when church bells seemed to beckon him back to London. He followed his intuition and returned. Later he became prominent and served as lord mayor of London three times between 1397 and 1420. The Whittington family shield is red, decorated with a blue and silver stripe across the center.

DEAR MISS RULE: May we learn about GYSLER. — S. G. Anaheim.

S. G. GYSLER is an old form of the German name Geisler. The archaic warrior-tile source was "Gisil-Heri" meaning "soldier with a rod or wand of authority."

Utility Class are judged today under Herald C. Hylton of Long Beach, Margaret L. Foster of El Cajon and Howard E. Cross of Harbor City.

Junior Showmanship class judging time will be announced at the show. Judge will be Robert J. Mankey of Santa Ana.

EARLY THIS evening M. B. Godsol will select Best in Show from the six group winners of both Saturday and today.

To enjoy a dog show, buy a catalog, visit the benched dogs, select your favorite breed and watch the judging. Don't forget the fun of the obedience trial. Take the youngsters but do not permit touching the dogs nor teasing them. Don't let children bring in balloons. Although a dog show is a busy place, the unnatural noise of a balloon popping can upset the most stable dog. Hot dogs and other goodies are available.

Chances are the youngsters will want to "practice dog show" on their own dog when they get home. With some help from you, this is good, for a dog loves attention. And you can make it really rewarding by adding a few tricks to his "lessons."

First teach the dog to "Sit." Put a leash on him, snub him near a wall on a table, and walk toward him holding a treat above his head. He'll sit, and as he does, command, "Sit." Reward him with the treat.

WHEN HE is sitting on command, go on to "Shake," "Beg," and "Speak." Sit him, then run a finger on the inside of his right leg or cover his paw with your hand. As he lifts the paw, take it in your hand, quickly say, "Shake," praise and reward him. Repeat often but don't tire him. Again, when he is sitting, lift his forepaw, say, "Up," praise and reward. Repeat often. Also, when he is sitting, hold a treat over his head and command, "Speak." Bark if you like. He'll catch on. Give him praise and the treat. Happily, a dog taught to "Speak" often becomes a dog that does not bark needlessly.

FOR ENTRIES to Boxer Club of Southern California specialty at El Nido Park, Torrance, July 11; telephone TE 5-9394 immediately. For the Samoyed Club of America specialty July 24 in Santa Barbara, write the club at 15557 Kingsbury St., Granada Hills. For entries to Ventura dog show July 25, write Moss, 808 Summit Ave., Greensboro, N. C. Jack Bradshaw has entries for Santa Barbara show, phone RI 9-7432.

Southern California but her title was challenged because she was Indian. In 1841, Gov. Alvarado confirmed Reid's claim to Santa Anita, 8,000 acres, sold in 1846 to Henry Dalton for only $2,700. A small portion is now the Los Angeles State and County Arboretum, and another part is the Santa Anita racetrack. One of Reid's successors, "Lucky" Baldwin, is remembered in the famous coach house and the Queen Anne Cottage, wickiups mark the Indian dwellings and Hugo Reid's adobe the rancho period.

Overlooking the entire San Gabriel Valley the house has been restored as it was in 1839. The National Society of Colonial Dames in California furnished the ranch house in 1961. The trams carrying loads of visitors at the Arboretum in Arcadia bring thousands of young and old Californians to this historical area every day.

Reid became prominent in California life and his interest in the Indians led him to write 22 essays on their life and history. The writings are now part of his biography, "A Scotch Paisano" by Susanna Bryant Dakin. He died in 1852, leaving his family destitute. Dona Victoria died in 1868 and was buried on Christmas Eve of that year in San Gabriel (Mission), corner 16th and Main St. in Los Angeles.

Gastric Freezing Curbs Urged

By Ben Zinser
Southland Magazine Medical Science Writer

TECHNIQUE of freezing the stomach to treat peptic ulcer should be considered experimental and confined to medical centers experienced in the procedure, a poll of famed medical experts recommends.

Says the AMA Department of Medical Physics and Rehabilitation: "There seems to be no justification for its widespread clinical use until evidence of its efficacy and safety has been firmly established."

Earlier, two doctors affiliated with the University of Texas Southwestern Medical School in Dallas made this comment in a recent AMA Journal report:

"Gastric freezing is not an innocuous procedure. Like any operation, it is subject to errors in judgment and technique, and may be attended with side effects and complications. This is particularly true when the method is utilized in poor-risk patients by overzealous or inexperienced personnel."

A REPORT that the drinking of certain spring water found on the island of Icaria, Greece, will dissolve gallstones has been rejected by a medical expert.

Dr. Franz J. Ingelfinger, Boston, in a report in the AMA Journal, says: "I know of no diet, mineral water or medicine that will bring this about (dissolution of gallstones)."

BAD NEWS for people who like to eat: The Food and Nutrition Board of the National Academy of Sciences-National Research Council has reduced its recommended daily calories allowances for adults.

For example, the calorie requirement for a moderately active man who is 25 years old and 145 pounds has been reduced from 3,200 to 2,900 daily. And for a 25-year-old, 128-pound moderately active woman the daily calorie allowance has been lowered from 2,300 to 2,100.

The decreased calorie requirements stem from the Food and Nutrition Board's concern that a considerable segment of the adult population is overweight and that today's average American exerts much less energy.

IT'S WELL KNOWN that more men than women smoke, but Jewish women are altering the smoking pattern among women, two Harvard University researchers report.

A new study discloses that Jewish women may soon have more smokers than the male sex does.

Other findings:
More Catholic fathers and sons and more Jewish mothers and daughters smoke. Fewer Catholic mothers smoke than do Protestant or Jewish mothers, and those who do smoke, smoke less.

Drs. Eva J. Salber and Jane Worcester report the research in the journal Cancer.

A NEW TYPE of sweet, one less likely to lead to tooth decay, is being investigated by the Royal Dental School in Stockholm, Sweden.

The preparation is a slowly fermentable carbohydrate made of treated potato starch, according to Dental Abstracts.

Newest Adventure in the World of Speed

like Strombecker and Revell jumped into the field."

The idea is deceptively simple. Begin with a model car, usually to 1/24 or 1/25 scale. Mount in it a motor that turns in the neighborhood of 8,000-9,000 revolutions per minute on current from a car or truck battery.

The track has braided wire strips to give a power takeoff from the battery in the same manner as an electric train, through the track. A brush or swinging arm arrangement under each car gives contact, space between the metal strips forming the slot that names the game. A guide under the car travels in the slot, and that's it.

"THE INTEREST lies in the problems that must be overcome," says Tate, who spent about 14 years racing midjet autos in the old Southland circuits. "Every change means a modification somewhere else—rewind the motor for more speed, and you compensate for it in weight distribution, suspension, gear ratio, the whole bit. In fact, any problems of weight in motion are there, just as in life-size cars.

"People don't believe it, unless they've seen a good race. But some competitors are actually pale and shaking before a race." Tate can prove the point at any good track.

As usual in the automotive field, slot racing is virtually headquartered in Southern California. In the hobbies of custom cars, sport cars, and drag racing, the rest of the country seems to learn from the Southland. Out of 130 tracks across the nation, 43 are known to be scattered from Santa Barbara to San Diego. Probably half that number are in Los Angeles County. Bringing it even closer, there's a concentration of tracks in the Long Beach, Torrance, Compton, Lynwood areas that runs the gamut from elaborate combination layouts down to the barest elements.

Models are available from the 'jankiest-looking jalopies to the smoothest Sting-Rays, Ferraris and customs—along with classics no longer around.

ALTHOUGH many hobby shops now in the sport began with a stock of airplane models and toys, it soon was evident that slot cars were becoming a "hot" item. Within a few months, stores began seeking room for expansion to accommodate track layouts.

On the other hand, men like Richard Hibben, with his Carson Hobbies in the 223rd Street-Avalon area, began from scratch with an empty store room and enthusiasm, plus a figure-eight layout. Now, it's going strong, with a road course added to the track and hobby shop.

Is it a fad?
Concludes Jack Tate: "If it is, it's a big one. The little cars are going to be with us a long time, I think. Remember, as much as 85 per cent of the more expensive cars are built by Dad, instead of Sonny."

Free Swimming Pool Planning Kit

If you are planning a pool this year here is your opportunity to get a free kit showing all phases of pool construction. Also included are tips on pool buying plus complete information on special equipment. Kit is packed with facts and ideas you will want to know before you build.

This free kit was put out by endorsement of Anthony's Pool Pools, world's largest pool-builder.

Its authoritative information was developed by Anthony, based on the building of over 21,000 pools.

In the pictures and text it describes the way modern pools are constructed. The growing use of high-speed automatic equipment for excavation and gunite cementing has kept the price of Anthony pools low while prices in general have gone up. A modern pool is just about the biggest bargain you can get these days.

It is important that you choose a builder large enough to offer you modern speed and economy.

During the first four months of this year Anthony has built more pools in the greater Los Angeles area than the next three largest pool builders combined. This is a dramatic endorsement of Anthony's value, service, and reputation. Kit also describes such Anthony exclusive accessories as Hilda-Sweep automatic pool cleaner—it is never removed from the pool—and Antho-Pure, the automatic pool purifier that holds up to six months' supply of Gardex.

Other sub-assemblies and accessories manufactured in Anthony's 15 acre plant and sold direct to the pool buyer help keep Anthony's price low. Anthony Pools' stock is listed on the American and Pacific Coast Stock exchanges.

For your free copy of this valuable kit, drop in or call Anthony Pools South Gate office at 5871 Firestone Blvd., phone SP 3-2210, TO 1-0381, or our Torrance office, 25412 S. Crenshaw Blvd., phone 832-5391 or our Anaheim office at 2030 So. Harbor, phone JE 4-3100.

BOOK REVIEWS

The Seamy Side of Chicago

By Vera Williams
Southland Magazine Book Editor

BILL DOHERTY, one of the famed six Doherty brothers who in the 1940s and early 1950s covered crime news in Chicago, now is a Long Beach public relations man, living at 3120 Kaylor Ave.

In his spare time he has written a hair-raising autobiography, "CRIME REPORTER" (Exposition-Banner, $5), detailing his adventures and a long look at the seamy side of Chicago, than which nothing apparently is seamier.

All top-flight newspapermen, the Doherty brothers—Frank, Eddie, Martin, Jim, Tom and Bill—pulled no punches in the struggle for newspaper scoops, by-lines and headlines. Probably they were the only six brothers in the world who were crime reporters at the same time in the same city. Their roots were deep in law enforcement because their father was a Chicago police officer for 46 years.

Bill Doherty uncovered a witness who identified a mad killer who kidnaped a six-year-old girl, hacked her body into pieces and threw the pieces into different sewers.

He slugged it out with a hoodlum who threatened to wipe out Bill and his family.

One murder solution brought Doherty the Pall Mall Big Story Award. Another, "The Card Party Murder Case," related in his autobiography, was dramatized on television and radio.

HOW ABOUT a religion editor with a flair for Western history?

Dan L. Thrapp, religion editor for the Los Angeles Times, is the author of a carefully researched, intensely interesting biography of a renowned Arizona frontiersman, "AL SIEBER, Chief of Scouts" (University of Oklahoma Press, $6.95).

Gen. George Crook planned and organized the Apache campaign in Arizona. Gen. Nelson A. Miles took credit for it—but Thrapp asserts that the man who really won it was Chief of Scouts Al Sieber.

How else, he asks, can one account for the fact that when Al was present, the army won, but when he was not, it lost?

Crook's philosophy of Apache warfare was to trap Indians with Indians. From the first, Al and his Tonto Apache scouts met with success, and when the long chase ended, deep in Mexico, it was Sieber and the Tontos who harassed the warriors into surrender with their relentless tracking.

Thrapp unearthed hitherto unknown and unpublished material, including several eyewitness accounts, to write the book.

"AHEAD OF us lay a great new land—"

Like latter-day Swiss Family Robinsons, the Short family cast their fortunes ashore on a lonely Alaskan island just after World War II. "THE CHEECHAKOES" (Random House, $4.95) is the remarkable story of a remarkable family narrated by Wayne Short, who shared with his parents and two younger brothers the unique experience of pioneer life in the 20th Century. They were "cheechakoos," Indian for greenhorns; they trapped, stalked deer, shot a charging brown bear with a .25-20, worked on an Alaskan mail boat in the dead of winter, and went to town once a year.

WINNIE MAE, Yankee Doodle, Lady Southern Cross, Miss Liberty . . . Wilkins, Earhart, Post, the Linderghs . . . Vega, Air Express, Explorer, Dirius, Altair, Orion.

The names conjure up headlines of the 1920s and 1930s.

The story of continents and oceans spanned, Polar regions explored, records set, broken and reset, all in single-engine airplanes bearing the winged-star insignia of Lockheed is told in "REVOLUTION IN THE SKY: Those Fabulous Lockheeds, The Pilots Who Flew Them" by Richard Sanders Allen (Stephen Greene Press, $9.95).

The expert will be interested in the three-view drawings, specifications and performances.

The reader—aviation buff or no—will be caught up in the suspenseful account of Jimmie Mattern's solo junket around the world, "Hardluck Harold" Bromley's three tries to fly to Tokyo, swashbuckling Roscoe Turner and his "copilot" Gilmore the Lion, Jimmy Doolittle, Ruth Nichols and the rest.

"THE LITTLE BOOK OF BELLS" by Eric Hatch, with sketches by Eric Sloane (Duell, Sloan and Pearce, $3.50) traces the story of bells through the ages, from the ancient Crotal, ancestor of modern sleigh bells, to the electronic carillon. It includes a little history, information about the nature and manufacture of bells, and legends.

The reader learns about the largest bell in the world, the great Tsar Kokokol of Moscow, which never rang; the Bell of Port Royal, which now tolls under the sea; the Clog-an-eadhacta, an ancient bell that may have been St. Patrick's "secret weapon"; the 20½-ton Bourdon Bell of Riverside Church, largest tuned bell in the world, and our own Liberty Bell.

A Chip Off the Old Block

"If you can describe it, I can make it," says Bill Kirst, a third generation wood turner, shown here checking out a lathe job in his well-equipped Long Beach shop.

IN THIS push button age of mechanization and mass production, wood turning is almost a lost art. But Bill Kirst, a rugged individualist who refuses to succumb to the forces of modern trends, is successfully practicing the ancient craft in his shop at 1921 Redondo Ave., Long Beach.

He is a third generation wood turner who plies his trade just as his father and grandfather did before him and refers to himself lightly as a "chip off the old block."

In the late 1800s, wood turners were as plentiful as garage mechanics are today. But gradually, modern methods reduced the demand for this type of work and Bill finds himself at the end of a diminishing line.

EVERYTHING is custom made at Bill's shop. "If you can describe it, I can make it," he claims with obvious pride. Anything can be ordered from a hitching post to a wassail bowl.

A year or so ago a Lake-wood woman brought him a picture of her parental home in Maine. She wanted a picket fence exactly like the one her grandfather had made 75 years ago. Bill drafted a pattern and in no time at all she had her fence. This is the kind of job he delights in because it gives him variety.

While most of his contemporaries are doing the same job over and over, such as in cabinet making, Bill is happier to be working creatively with something new and different. Yesterday he may have had an order for a turning to replace a broken leg on a Duncan Phyfe table or a new rung for a Chippendale chair; today he might be turning out moldings and tomorrow he may be working on a modern room divider.

"AS A CRAFT," Bill says, "wood turning is a creative release for an artistic bent. It's a means of expressing one's own personality in an individual way and each new job is a challenge."

For centuries, man has made things out of wood but the invention of the lathe has been responsible for more beautiful work than was possible with only hand tools. It is difficult to say when the first lathe was invented but articles of furniture found in ancient Egypt show that it was in use as early as 400 B. C.

Although it has been greatly improved over the years, it hasn't changed much in the last century. Bill turns out most of his work on a 16-inch wood lathe he bought from W. J. Burgin who ran the first woodworking shop in Long Beach — it is more than 100 years old and still in excellent working order.

BESIDES the lathe, he has many other items in his shop that date back to the 1800s. One piece in his collection is an archway decoration consisting of 180 separate wood turnings assembled into an intricate design. It illustrates the creativity and patience that are needed to turn out a good piece of work.

Bill is enthusiastic about the way wood turning is being taught in the schools today. "I've seen some excellent samples of work being done by students with only one or two semesters of instruction," he says. But he is quick to remind that it takes many years to become proficient in all departments of the wood-

Flower-Planting Time's a-Wasting

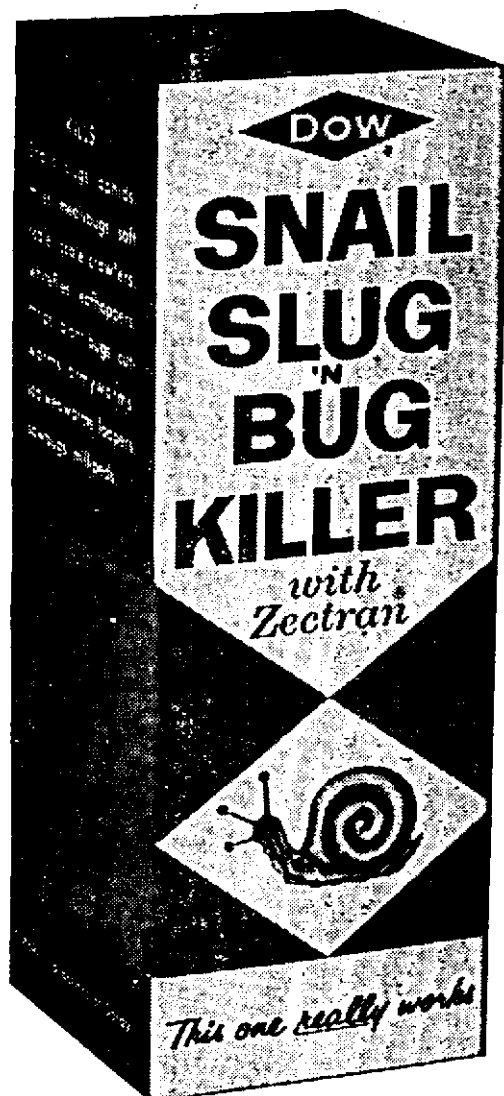

By Joe Littlefield

THERE'S a time and a place for buying cut flowers, but this is hardly the way to put color in the garden, and quantity flower purchases come high. Besides, every gardener knows the pride that comes with showing off or cutting home-grown blooms.

But the time for planting zinnias, asters, marigolds, petunias and such mainstays of the home garden is fading fast; you must plant them soon.

An you don't have to have a large vacant lot in order to grow enough flowers for the house decoration, if you'll wisely plant a dozen or so of each kind, but keep same kind in groups, with tall ones at back, graduating down to

We're thinking of changing its name to Aphid & Thrips Killer.

In a way, it seems only right. Our Snail, Slug & Bug Killer with Zectran® Insecticide is just as great for knocking out aphids and thrips on flowers and plants. One spraying and the little monsters are gone; and once dry, there's no danger to children or pets. But on the other hand, Dow Snail, Slug & Bug Killer gets rid of snails, slugs, and practically any gardening insect pest you can name. Kills more pests, in fact, than any other single product around.

Until we make up our minds, ask your garden supply dealer for it by its present name: Dow Snail, Slug & Bug Killer. And while you're talking to him, check on Dowpon® Grass Killer Bar that you rub along the edge of walks, flowerbeds, buildings to eliminate unwanted grass. Two more great ones from The Dow Chemical Company.

Dahlias are the pride of many gardeners and today's garden article tells one way of protecting the dahlia bulbs from the attacks of the destructive wireworms.

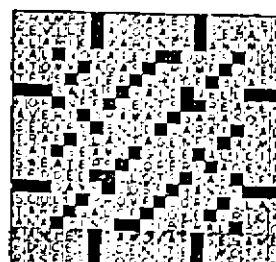

the low in front of the garden.

Plant a dozen sempiflorens type begonias in the shady garden area, snap off stem, two to three inches long, with flowers, every couple of weeks when plants become well established. This will keep color coming in that part of the garden, and will yield table decoration till frost season.

WHILE ANSWERING a question at a recent lecture we gave at Downey Branch, California National Fuchsia Society, on wireworms, those amazing soil pests, a keen home gardener member of that club, Katherine Willeford told us how she solved the wireworm problem around her dahlias. She said, "Before planting dahlia bulbs in the selected spots in your garden, pour about a gallon of boiling hot water in each hole and let ground cool before planting the bulbs. This action kills many of the small vermin in the immediate area. Then, if the ground is too wet, use a small amount of dry material next to the bulb when planting it."

"Also, I have found it to be an excellent plan to plant a fresh full grown carrot with the tops intact, next to each dahlia bulb. If there are any wireworms in the area, the carrots will attract them before the bulbs do and will embed themselves in the carrots. Simply pull up the carrots every few days, remove and destroy the wireworms, and replant the carrots in the same spots. This action results in ridding your garden of wireworms cheaply and effectively and spares your dahlia bulbs."

GARDEN CLUBS

Care of cymbidium orchids after the blooming season will be discussed by Paul Gripp, general manager of Santa Barbara Orchid Estate, at a meeting of South Coast Orchid Society at 8 p.m. Monday in Silverado Park clubhouse, 31st Street and Santa Fe Avenue. The public is invited.

Father's Day will be observed by members of the Fuchsia Society with a pancake breakfast to be served from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. today at 3736 Falcon Ave. A garden tour will follow the breakfast and Joe Littlefield, garden writer and consultant, will be master of ceremonies.

"Requiem Roses for Hot Weather" will be the topic of Joe Littlefield, garden authority, at a meeting of Orange County Rose Society at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at Sun Garden School, Trask and Newland Streets, Garden Grove. He will also answer questions on rose culture. The public is invited.

Fuchsias 'On Stage' in July

FUCHSIA fanciers will have their heyday July 11 and 12 when the 10th annual Fuchsia and Shade Plant Show of the California National Fuchsia Society will be presented in Long Beach Municipal Auditorium. Amateur and professional exhibitors will compete and approximately 27 trophies and more than 60 blue ribbons will be at stake, along with a Sweepstakes trophy for the best display among branches of the society.

Garden clubs, other than Fuchsia Society units, and individuals displaying companion shade plants such as begonias, ferns, African violets, gloxinias, bromeliads and orchids, will be eligible for awards.

Blooms of a wide variety of fuchsias will be displayed, each named and described, and source of supply identified. An educational booth will provide data on fuchsia and shade plant culture, with qualified personnel on hand to answer questions.

Webster Willeford of Downey is show chairman and Miss Cheryl Creel of Long Beach is "Fuchsia Queen of 1964," and her princesses are Joann Deden, Paramount, and Susan Harper, Westchester. They will be crowned officially at the Saturday show by Sandra Scarrioffini of Paramount, last year's show queen, and with Joe Littlefield of Pasadena, garden writer and consultant, as master of ceremonies.

Tips on Gardening

Garden tips for the week ... You can still set out new hydrangeas if you keep them in shady areas. Remember to water them often.

Sweet fragrances can greet you in your garden during those summer evenings if you plant Star Jasmine, bouvardia and osmanthus now.

Stake and tie tomato plants now to avoid the unkept look of sprawling branches.

For your vacation checklist include a list of specific instructions for your garden care while you're away. This will save time and effort. When you return your garden and lawn will be just as you want it.

Hurry and plant annuals for dashes of color in fall and winter. Check your local C.A.N. nursery for a complete selection.

Dorothy Digs

Scale, aphids and ants are usually found on trees and shrubs in the same area. The reason for this is the ants' dependence upon other insects for some of its food supply. Ants are very attentive to any insect which will respond to care such as is given to these two insects.

Of course there are many other ways in which scale and aphids move from place to place but ants are responsible for the greatest migration. Tender foliage is a constant quest for aphids. The ants, being good farmers, are conscious of this need for greener pasture for both aphids and scale so they return the favor of obtaining from them the excretion that their own young need by moving the young aphids and scale constantly.

Ridding the area of ants is probably the easiest step in keeping the aphid and scale population down. This can be done with 6 per cent chlordane dust scattered at the base of trees or shrubs and in areas where branches of the plant are apt to touch against any object that would serve as a ladder for the ants.

The next step is to dislodge the aphids and scale and to destroy them both at the same time. This can be done with safety by using a super spray containing an oil emulsion combined with nicotine alkaloid

MIRRORS reflecting beauty and elegance... Luxurious carpeting and comfortable booths... Immaculate goblets and shining silverware... Candles burning calmly within holders designed like Grecian urns... Those are just a few of the effects which make the main dining room of the Americana restaurant, Bellflower Boulevard and Carson Street, one of the most strikingly handsome places in Long Beach. Hosts Mike Comminos and Chris Fotion, who lavished time and money on the design and decoration of the room, are now reaping the rewards of their planning. Each day the Americana attracts new patrons who discover with delight that beautiful surroundings enhance the flavors and joys of fine food.

Many are astonished when they also discover that the Americana does not charge luxurious prices for its luxury. Numerous fine dinner entrees, prepared with painstaking attention to detail, are priced at $2.95, including a 10-ounce New York cut steak au roquefort with mushroom buttons; a 10-ounce top sirloin noted for its juicy flavor; roast prime ribs of beef sliced medium pink, well done or rare, and beef en brochette broiled with bacon and mushrooms and accompanied by scrumptious wine gravy. Also featured are special weekly entrees for $2.50, plus gourmet treasures like the lobster tail-top sirloin steak combination, $3.95. All are served with chilled relishes, glamorous tossed salad, baked potato, fresh cheese toast and beverage.

Sunday dinners are served from noon to 11 p.m. The Americana also has a coffee shop and cocktail lounge.

What's more, here are some facts on how Bayer Aspirin meets the test of competition.

Reporting on a government-financed study of five leading pain relievers, an article in The Journal of The American Medical Association showed:

For speed and strength of relief, Bayer Aspirin was unsurpassed by any product tested, including the higher-priced product that claims to be 50% stronger.

Also, Bayer Aspirin was as gentle to the stomach as any product tested, including the higher-priced buffered product.

Furthermore, the two higher-priced combination-of-ingredients products tested upset the stomach considerably more often.

For fast relief from headaches, muscular pains, or the pains and fever of a cold, get Bayer Aspirin, the world's favorite brand of pain reliever.

PARADE'S SPECIAL

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

PRISON FACT. According to Chaplain George McKinney of Sing Sing prison in Ossining, N.Y., 3 out of every 10 felons are addicts or have some connection with narcotics. The chaplain has urged the death penalty for narcotics peddlers.

SWITCH. According to Soviet Russia, Communist China today is a police state which practices mass repression of its people. Izvestia, the Soviet newspaper, declares that life in China is similar to the worst aspects of Soviet life under Stalin.

LIKE FATHER, LIKE SON. The Commerce Department reports that 23% of the men in the U.S. between the ages of 25 and 64 are engaged in the same occupation as their fathers. Among professional and technical workers, 41% follow in their father's footsteps. But among clerical workers, salesmen and service employees, only 15% follow the paternal leader.

SUCCESSFUL MARRIAGE. Which are the most enduring marriages in the nation? A survey of 1,000 marriages reveals that more than 95% of the young Americans who married in their collegiate years are still married, compared to the national average of 75%. Reason: "There are no social pressures on married college students. They are not expected to buy new cars, smart clothes, better furniture to keep up with the Joneses, and in these first unpressured years they can really get to know and understand each other

SLEEPING MACHINE. The French have invented a device which uses a rhythmic yoga technique to induce natural sleep. The work of Robert Lasserre, a writer, the mechanism consists of a small TV-like set called a Somnidor. It's placed on a table seven feet from the subject. Switched on, it generates a cold, pale blue light on the screen. The light expands and contracts while the patient adjusts his breathing to the light rhythm. Six or seven breaths, and the subject slows down. Ten more and he's fast asleep. Lasserre plans to market the Somnidor in America later this year.

WALKOUTS. English motion picture theater chains have decided that the tradition of playing the national anthem, "God Save the Queen," at the end of each performance has outlived its usefulness. "About 50% of the audience escapes before the music starts," one theater executive explained, "so we've decided to discontinue the practice."

HIGH PRICES. If you're going to Japan this summer, be warned: prices there are high. A cup of coffee costs 25¢, a pack of American cigarettes 40¢, hotel rooms are 10% higher than the American average, a good night club dinner for two somewhere between $25 and $50.

TV RIGHTS. The TV networks are imitating the motion picture industry in buying up TV rights prior to publication of several books. Object is to get first crack at potential best-sellers.

HOLLYWOOD.

For the average young actress the toughest job in show business is breaking in.

To find an opportunity to demonstrate her talent the aspiring hopeful needs persistence, doggedness, resolution. More often than not her job-seeking generates depression, disappointment, discouragement. She loses faith in men, because agents and casting directors are almost always males, and frequently she loses her dignity, her enthusiasm and, if desperation drives her to capitalize on her charms, she loses even more.

Supposedly this experience builds strength of character and self-reliance in a young woman. Years later, if the trauma accompanying the experience has not been too great, she looks back on her first job-finding days with a feeling of pride and a deep self-satisfaction that she made it on her own.

In Hollywood these days there is a colony of young actors and actresses that will never share this experience. It consists of the sons and daughters of motion picture and TV stars who have decided to follow in the parental footsteps.

Think of any film or TV star, age 40 or over—Frank Sinatra, Glenn Ford, Bob Mitchum, John Wayne, Dean Martin, Loretta Young, Joan Crawford, Danny Thomas, Jennifer Jones, Maureen O'Hara, Henry Fonda, John Mills, Edmond O'Brien, Lloyd Bridges, Robert Montgomery, Martha Raye, the list goes on and on—each of these stars has at least one child working in show business, and whether they like it or not, trading on the family name.

Latest of the second generation to enter this favored group is Linda Hope, 23, willowy and tall (5-feet-8), blonde and hazel-eyed, beautiful and intelligent daughter of comedian Bob Hope.

In contrast to other members of the born-with-a-golden-spoon colony, Linda readily admits that having a famous parent is a tremendous help in any profession or industry, but even more so in show business, where the competition is so severe.

"Let's face it," she declares candidly. "Unless you're a genius with a recognized skill, it's the contacts you know who really put you in a position to show what you can do."

"A few weeks ago I made my debut as a TV actress in one of my father's Chrysler specials, a comedy called School for Bachelors. Know how I got the job?"

"One evening I was sitting in the living room with Dad's secretary, Jan King. Jan was looking over Dad's schedule of future appointments. I saw that she had listed School for Bachelors to be shot at Revue Studios, which is only a few miles from our house."

"Do you think, Jan," I asked her, "I could get a part in that show?" Jan smiled and said, "There's someone around here who might put in a word for you."

Linda Hope

THE BEST OF HOLLYWOOD'S YOUNGER GENERATION

by Lloyd Shearer

"Just then," Linda continues, "Dad walked in, and I asked him right off if I could have a part. He told me to study the script carefully and to pick out something I thought I could play, and he would consider it. That's how I got the job. It wasn't much. I just had two pages of dialogue. But it was a job, and it gave me confidence and experience."

CHALLENGING PART

"I played a giddy pin-up girl, very effervescent and vivacious. I'm not that way myself, so the part was a challenge, and I was lucky to have someone like Agnes Moorehead, with whom I'm studying, to help me. I think I did passably well. Certainly I was no disgrace or disappointment to my father."

"If my name wasn't Linda Hope, if my dad was John Smith, I realize I would never have gotten that job so easily and so quickly. But still I can't go through life always being on the defensive just because Bob Hope happens to be my father."

The oldest of Hope's four adopted children, Linda is a graduate of St. Louis University, an English major who recently decided that she wanted to become a director. Last summer she visited three of Europe's top film men, Federico Fellini in Italy, Ingmar Bergman in Sweden, Tony Richardson in England, and observed their directorial techniques. A bright, perceptive, studious girl, she learns quickly, but her dad has warned her there's no easy road to success, no substitute for long, arduous apprenticeship.

"Every time we discuss my career," Linda reveals, "Dad makes a speech. He doesn't mind my going into show business, not one bit. But he wants me to know, all of his children to know, that just because we have his name, we can't achieve anything worth-while without a lot of hard work. He always explains how tough it was for him, how he slaved to get where he is. He constantly repeats that when you expect praise and financial gain from the public, you have to be prepared to repay the public with dedication and talent."

"Well, I've done summer stock at Ogunquit, Me. I'm studying acting with Agnes Moorehead. I'm taking guitar lessons and fencing. I've had a good background in English and drama. For awhile I studied clinical psychology, so I know a little something about people. Next year I plan to enroll at UCLA and take courses in film-making. I'm honestly trying to prepare myself to become a good actress and then through understanding and experience in the medium, a good director. I don't want people to hire me because I'm Bob Hope's daughter."

I don't want that to be my stock in trade. Maybe that's how I got my start. But I'm not going to end up that way. I'm going to contribute something in my own right or leave the business."

How come a girl like Linda Hope, well bred, gentle, physically and mentally attractive, is considering a career at this point instead of marriage? Or is all of her career talk a façade, a stopgap until the right man appears?

A friend who knows her well says that as regards finding a husband, Linda has the special problem of the very rich. "Bob Hope," the friend explains, "is one of the world's wealthiest men. In addition to radio and TV stations, half a dozen different companies, oil wells and whatnot, he's listed among the largest landholders in California; he's worth millions in real estate."

"As a boy in Cleveland, he was raised in unbelievable poverty. Like many such self made men, he vowed his children would have the advantages he lacked."

"When Bob and his wife Dolores adopted Linda and Tony from The Cradle in Chicago," the friend goes on, "and later Nora and Kelly, they brought them home to one of the most lavish estates in North Hollywood."

"The Bob Hope home is a showplace—swimming pool, beautiful gardens, pitch and putt golf course, hired help of every kind. Linda was raised in the lap of luxury, and it's a tribute to her parents that she isn't spoiled."

"Dolores Hope is a very devout Catholic. She sent Linda to parochial schools, Immaculate Heart and Mt. St. Mary's, and fortunately at those schools the Sisters make the students toe the line."

"Still, Linda is faced with the situation of finding a husband in her own league, not marrying beneath her station, and in Hollywood, that's not easy."

IDEAS ABOUT HUSBANDS

Briefed with this information, I asked Linda if she dated frequently and what sort of man she would like to marry. "Maybe," I suggested, "a comedian or an actor like your dad?"

"No," she answered quickly. "Actors are not for me. I think they're very nice on the screen but I would never marry one. I've gone out with several, and while they make interesting dates, I don't think they make very dependable husbands."

"Right now I'm sort of interested in doctors. I'd like to marry a man who is dedicated to whatever he does, someone in whose work I can share and in whose achievement I can take pride."

"At one time I thought seriously of going to medical school and becoming a doctor, but somehow I wound up majoring in English."

"When I got out of school a few years ago, I was looking for something to do. What can an English major do? Teach English. So I taught at Our Lady Queen of Angels in downtown Los Angeles, but later I decided that what I really wanted was to become an actress and then a director, because as a director I think I could combine marriage and career, while an actress finds that very difficult. When you're a director and you're off the job, your life is private. There are no public demands. You can spend time with your family, and ideally that's what I'd like to do."

I asked Linda if coming from her sort of background and being a child of creature comforts, she could possibly marry some struggling young man who was earning three or four hundred dollars a month or even less. "Would you buy your clothes at Ohrbach's?" I asked.

A POSITIVE REPLY

"Yes, I would," she said flatly. "I buy a lot of my clothes there now. I think that if you really love someone, it's possible to do anything. I wouldn't like to marry someone who had no promise or someone I or my dad had to support, but I think it's exciting to build something with the man you love rather than to start out with something handed to you or already established."

"As for this house," Linda added, "and these grounds—we do have a swimming pool and a few golf holes, and maybe you won't believe this, but you know my dad—the plain truth is that we don't live luxuriously. We live simply and informally."

"When I went to school I lived in a dormitory with I don't know how many other girls. I didn't have my own room or bathroom. It wasn't luxury living by any means. I didn't have a car. When I had laundry to do, I walked down the street with the bundle in my arms just like everybody else. I got along fine and had some very happy years in St. Louis. Here, I have to make my own bed and help around the house. I still teach school one day a week. I don't pal around with the movie colony. The only good friend I have in the business is an actress in New York, Sandra Church."

"I'm definitely not spoiled. Let some young doctor come along who wants to take me away from all this, and if I fall in love with him—I'm going."

Many of the stars' offspring now working in show business and—I will name no names—are foul-ups who have no skills, drop-outs who have no talent, singers who cannot sing, youngsters lucky enough to have been born to famous and in many cases self-centered and irresponsible parents.

Linda Hope is not one of these. A member of Hollywood's second generation, refined and religious, careful in her choice of associates, civic-minded and virtuous, educated and still learning, fun-loving but quiet, she does credit to her community, her parents, her church.

She is a living refutation to the widely held premise that Hollywood and its stars produce no normal children.

Like father, like daughter: Linda Hope learns the ropes from dad Bob Hope, rehearses for her first TV stint, School for Bachelors.

Kissing colleagues at Portugal college: she gets kiss, he gets cut in cape.

Extra Credits for Kissing

by ROSALIND MASSOW

COIMBRA, PORTUGAL. If college boys at Coimbra University, one of Europe's oldest colleges, seem to be more tattered than university men elsewhere in the world, it's not poverty but romance which makes them look that way.

Students at the 700 year-old Portuguese university here proudly wear black capes that are, by tradition, ragged at the hem. Why the enthusiasm? It's simple—each ragged edge represents a kiss.

When a Coimbra man meets a girl and gets to know her well enough to kiss her, she is entitled to a souvenir of their embrace—a small piece of material torn from the hem of her boy friend's cape.

Nobody knows the origin of this quaint college custom, but judging from the tattered appearance of 99 per cent of the male college population, one wonders when students have time for class.

One fellow, in the third year of his five-year course in science, proudly admits that he is working on his second cape.

Another young man of 25, a law student, wears a cape handed down by his more restrained father. "I have made more cuts in my cape than my father did when he went to school," boasts this lawyer-to-be.

The black cape, formal frock coat with satin lapels and black trousers, required uniform of Coimbra University men, is a modification of the clerical garb of the 13th century. And Coimbra undergraduates and alumni are very sentimental about their capes, the appearance of which can determine the difference between great popularity and dismal social failure.

One brand new freshman, quickly

recognizing the possibilities of his cape, secretly ripped a few pieces off the hem of his cloak without really being entitled to do so.

"Sometimes girls like a boy who has a lot of cuts in his cape," he says defensively. "I'm interested in a girl who wants that kind of boy."

Once out of school it's a different story. A former Coimbra student, now a representative for Alitalia Airlines in Lisbon, took a group of American visitors to this university city recently and bragged about his student days. "Do you still have your cape?" one of the American women asked.

"Of course not," the young man said, a little shocked. "Do you think I'd want my wife to see how many girls I kissed before I married her?"

ON THE SERIOUS SIDE

But believe it or not, kissing is not the only campus activity at Coimbra. The university has a tough educational curriculum. The 6,000 men and women students, many of them on scholarship, pursue five-year courses in the schools of law, letters, science, mathematics and pharmacology. The school of medicine is a seven-year course.

Although standards here are as high as those of any university in the United States, the tuition is unbelievably low. Fees for a general college course are about $40 a year; medical school is $50 a year.

Tradition is strong among Coimbra men. Women students have infiltrated the campus (one-third of the University's enrollment is made up of coeds), but the men aren't a bit nervous about their age-old customs.

Girls wear black capes, too, but they are all intact. No Latin lady would ever kiss and tell.

BONERS & BLUNDERS

The Politician's Nightmare

by JACK HARRISON POLLACK

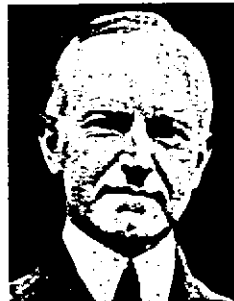

Robert A. Taft preferred handshakes to autographs.

Estes Kefauver found it hard to remember faces.

Harry Truman called Communist scare "red herring."

Calvin Coolidge kept mum, avoided making boners.

Now that the Presidential sweepstakes are on, every White House staffer dreads making a faux pas that may doom him to "also-ran."

These campaign blunders include temper explosions, foot-in-mouth slips, goofing on names of towns and politicians, stepping on regional toes and offending influential groups of voters. They range from harmless boo-boos which voters forgive and forget to disastrous bloopers which can undo thousands of handshakes.

Campaign bobbles generally occur because candidates are weary, worried or under strain.

Two late would-be Presidents bungled badly in the 1956 primaries.

Sen. Robert A. Taft refused to sign a 10-year-old New Hampshire girl's autograph book, explaining to her with a candor which she could scarcely appreciate: "I can shake three hands in the time that it takes me to sign your book."

During a Midwest primary Sen. Estes Kefauver once patted a boy on the head and inquired about his father.

"My father's dead," the lad replied.

Later that day, in another part of town, Kefauver, not recognizing him, greeted the same boy, again asking, "How's your father?"

"He's still dead," was the reply.

TRUMAN GOOFS

The plain-talking Harry Truman admits, "When I goof, I really goof." Truman made numerous boners, even during his amazing 1948 "Whistle-Stop" campaign. In Eugene, Ore., he ad-libbed on June 11: "I like Good Old Joe [Stalin]. He's a decent fellow but a prisoner of the Politburo." On August 5 in Washington, he scoffed at Communist-in-government investigations as a "red herring." Convinced that this shooting-from-the-hip cost the Democrats anti-Communist votes, Republicans gleefully wisecracked, "To err is Truman."

Even four-time winner Franklin D. Roosevelt occasionally blundered. Before receiving the 1932 Democratic nomination, at a White Sulphur Springs, Ga., dinner, he convivially complained about "that great sink of iniquity called New York." FDR's eldest son, California Rep. James Roosevelt, told me, "In later years, Father mentioned this incident as a 'good example of the trouble you could get into by opening your mouth without opening your brain.'"

COOLIDGE PLAYS IT COOL

Candidates used to be kept from making boners by keeping mum. During the drab 1924 campaign, President Calvin Coolidge was asked, "Have you any statement on the campaign?"

"No," replied Coolidge.

"Can you tell us something about the world situation?"

"No."

"Any information about Prohibition?"

"No."

As disappointed reporters sauntered out, Silent Cal cautioned, "Now remember—don't quote me."

Al Smith, twice governor of New York, lost the Presidency in 1928 partly because of a big-city boner. The Happy Warrior, who was proud that he rose "from the sidewalks of New York," boasted in his campaign, "I never left the main line of the New York Central." But farmers throughout the U.S., resenting this snub, voted against him.

Candidates often try to capitalize on the boners of their supporters. One of the earliest on record was when William Jennings Bryan, three-time Democratic nominee for President, arrived in a rural Midwest town in 1908 to speak before a huge waiting throng. However, the arrangements committee had neglected to provide him a platform. Climbing on a near-by manure-spreader, he began,

"Ladies and gentlemen, this is the first time I have ever spoken from a Republican platform!"

And last but not least is a boner made by the late President Kennedy in a speech at an all-Democratic rally in West Virginia in 1962. Democrat Cleveland Bailey and Republican Arch A. Moore, Jr., were fighting over the First District Congressional seat, and Kennedy, wishing to endorse his party's candidate, came to the place in his text calling for his endorsement of Bailey and the other four Democratic members of the West Virginia delegation. He said, "I am confident that Congressman Cleveland Bailey, with whom I served in the House of Representatives a decade ago, and your other congressmen, Ken Hechler, Mrs. Kee, Congressman..." Here he apparently became confused and continued, "Congressman Moore, stand up!" There was a dull silence. Kennedy repeated, "Stand up, Congressman Moore." Moore, of course, wasn't there. But red-faced Democrat Bailey, who subsequently lost the election, was.

HOW TO SAVE FACE

Today, historians claim that to change votes, a boner must be made by the Presidential candidate himself—not by an aide—and to be decisive, it must come late in the campaign.

Franklin L. Burdette, professor and director of governmental research at the University of Maryland, sums up: "A Presidential candidate who makes a first class blunder should strive to get the public laughing with, not at, him. He should make his meaning clear good-humoredly before opponents magnify his mistake."

Nevertheless, the campaign managers of many a defeated candidate sigh, "He should of stood in bed." Not only ball games, but the highest prize in the land has been lost by costly fumbles.

Fight BIRTH DEFECTS

THROUGH THE MARCH OF DIMES!

A friend of the Greek royal family offers an intimate close-up of Europe's jaunty new King

by HELEN ZOTOS

ATHENS.

It's been a busy year for European royalty. But there's been no one busier than Greece's young King Constantine, 24, who eagerly awaits his wedding, on September 18, to Denmark's Princess Anne-Marie, 17, future Queen of Greece.

King Constantine is the world's youngest reigning sovereign. A brown-haired boy with sparkling blue eyes like his mother's, he was catapulted to the throne of the Hellenes by his father's sudden death in March. But he is no stranger to his people. His lanky 6-foot-2 figure is known everywhere in the countryside, and he is immensely popular. Although he doesn't have a drop of Greek blood, being directly descended from Queen Victoria, Kaiser Wilhelm and Denmark's Prince William (who 100 years ago founded the modern Greek dynasty and served as its first king), he was born in Athens, reared as a Greek and speaks Greek fluently.

I was in Greece as correspondent during the grim days of the Communist war when King Paul and Queen Frederika ascended to the throne and risked their lives traveling through the guerrilla-infested mountains to cheer the troops and bring comfort to villagers. It was the Queen herself who introduced me, in the late spring of 1947, to Constantine.

THE OUTDOOR LIFE

At 6 going on 7, Tino was a tow-headed youngster who preferred romping in the woods at Tatoi, the family's modest country home north of Athens, to most other pursuits—except perhaps fishing with the Queen. He was a robust child, fond of animals, sports and outdoor life, like both of his parents; and he didn't have much use for girls who couldn't climb trees, ride horses or beat him in bicycle races.

His sisters, the princesses Sophia and Irene, kept up with his rough-and-tumble ways. They have always been his closest friends and, for the greater part of his young life, were his sole female companions. Tino told me they offered strong competition at his games "when they wanted to," but more often than not they liked to "play with dolls and dress up as nurses."

When Tino was a boy, in the middle of a war, there was no time for politicking—or idle gossip about the monarchy. Greece was busy and united, and the royal couple was adored universally and unconditionally. Frederika was admired as a brave queen, but especially as a mother. She was warmhearted and devoted and brought up the children simply and democratically, without privilege or pampering, in an atmosphere of books, music, sports and good humor. Sometimes American playmates—the sons and daughters of embassy personnel or of Army officers stationed in Greece—would come in for afternoon games, and the Queen would join them in hide-and-seek or whip up hamburgers and cokes in the kitchen. Her children adored her, and the Greeks said of Paul and Frederika that they were the nation's happiest married couple.

But growing up to be King wasn't always easy. Tino was trained for the job from the start. When I first met him, he was still scampering through the woods, but he already had his own private living quarters and spent most of his time with tutors mastering English, German and Greek. The next year he was sent away from home to a new boarding school founded by his tutor, at royal behest, for boys from all social levels, where he shared dormitory life, competed at sports and learned the virtues of self-reliance and responsibility. At 15, his military training began.

Long before he became a general, which is the rank, as King, he now holds, Tino became acquainted with the wartime suffering of the Greeks. The Queen told me about the time when his life was even in peril.

"When the Germans invaded Greece and we fled to the island of Crete," Frederika recalls, "Tino was just 9 months old. I had the most terrifying experience of my life sitting in a ditch with him and Sophia during the first phase of the battle for Crete. The Germans, believing that King George was with us, sent 15 planes in 30 sorties to bomb and even machine-gun us out."

"Two thoughts went through my head at that time. If they hit, I won't feel it, so why worry? If they miss, I'll enjoy telling the story."

'THE GOOD KING'

Paul summed up Tino's destiny when the boy reached his majority in June 1958, proclaiming to him that "from today you become, a fellow worker of mine." Paul and Tino were deeply attached to one another, and strikingly alike. Paul will go down in history as "the good King," and Constantine has so many of his father's attributes, he can hardly avoid becoming a "good King" himself. In recent years, Paul took Tino more and more into his confidence, sending him into the provinces and abroad, giving him a dominant part in official ceremonies and inviting him to attend his most important audiences. When war seemed threateningly near in Cyprus, during his father's illness, Tino stayed up all night conferring with parliamentary leaders. Greek politicians find him "mature, intelligent and knowledgeable." The peasants say he's "democratic, friendly and casual," and his intimates, the young of Athens, think of him as "charitable, deeply devout and fun-loving."

Like most young men who are not kings, Tino loves sports, theater, jazz, fast cars and pranks. He is an excellent mimic and has often regaled his sisters with impersonations of visiting VIPs. His black Mercedes convertible is a familiar sight along Greece's country roads—and on the island of Corfu, the family's favorite vacation spot—where Tino drives, as Greeks say, "like the wind." He also has a sense of humor.

When Jackie Kennedy was visiting in Greece last summer, Tino gave her a ride she'll never forget. 'According to the story, Tino and Irene "crashed" a party for Jackie at the home of former Premier Constantine Karamanlis. Tino danced with America's First Lady, then "kidnaped" her, leaving her host dumbfounded. In his Mercedes in the warm summer night, Tino sped Jackie dizzily through the streets of Athens and down to the oceanside at New Phaleron. Jackie loved the sight-seeing, but Athenians aren't sure whether she had more thrills than chills from the ride offered by her well intentioned captor. At the time, Tino was regent of Greece in the absence of his parents, who had gone to London against the Premier's wishes. The London trip caused a breach between Karamanlis and the Palace, so he deliberately did not invite Tino when Jackie came to town.

Because of his sports cars, high spirits

and dashing manner, Tino has sometimes been pegged a playboy. Greeks laugh at the idea, but gossips have matched him with a potpourri of Greek, Norwegian, Swedish and Swiss girls, and there is one preposterous tale circulating in Athens that his father, learning that the Prince was enamored of a beautiful Greek actress, summoned him and admonished, "You will have to make your choice either to be a king or an actor."

Tino has in fact had very little opportunity—or time—to cut capers with the opposite sex. A few years back, he even complained that a prince's life was not natural in this respect, and it may have been this remark that sent Frederika scurrying about looking over the princesses of Europe for a bride. Although Tino went abroad now and then, and was seen one night ogling scantily clad beauties at Paris' Folies Bergère, his social life at home has been limited to family functions or chaperoned visits with Europe's young royal set. He has never been inside an Athenian night club and at Carnival time cannot carry off a successful masquerade because his height makes him immediately detectable among Greeks.

One Greek girl did turn Tino's head a few years ago. Although the Palace denies knowledge of it, Tino met the lady, a famous stage and screen star by the name of Aliki Vouyouklaki, at the theater, which he was attending one evening with his sisters. The royal trio found the play engaging and the leading young actress so delightful that they went backstage to congratulate her. Several times after that, Tino and Aliki dined together on the outskirts of Athens. No eyebrows were raised, although the relationship obviously gave rise to the apocryphal story about the scolding, and there may have been more to the friendship than is commonly known. However, the relationship died a quick death when Aliki was overheard one day calling the Prince by his first name. Such breach of protocol got the lady in Dutch with the press, and the prince charming vanished.

In January 1963 Tino became engaged to Princess Anne-Marie of Denmark, a cousin whom he had met in 1957 in the gardens of Copenhagen's Amalienborg Castle when she was 11, and too young to notice him. The engagement was sudden and cemented old bonds that have existed between the two royal houses since the days of Prince William, around 1863. Most Greeks regard it as the triumphant result of Queen Frederika's matchmaking. The Queen was known to have had her heart set on marrying off all her children to royalty and, with only Irene's fate left to be determined, has done very well. But Tino denied the implication in what has been his most effective pronouncement on his private life so far. "Our engagement was sudden," he said, "not planned beforehand by our parents. It was the first time in my life that I took a decision without asking my father."

IDEAL CHOICE

However the romance came about, there can be no denying that they were head over heels for all to see at Princess Sophia's wedding in 1962. In many ways the two are very much alike, and Anne-Marie is an ideal choice for future Queen. The youngest daughter of King Frederik IX and Queen Ingrid, she is tall, brown-haired and gay. She has had a broad education, acts, sails and skis. She is also a skillful homemaker.

With a new queen on the throne, the question inevitably arises as to what Frederika's future role will be in the new household. Many Greeks have been asking themselves if she will have a strong influence on King Constantine.

No doubt Queen Frederika will continue, as Queen Mother, to work with some of her charitable institutions, but the Greeks feel, essentially, that there is no reason to believe that she will have any considerable say in the present King's life. King Constantine and Queen Anne-Marie will undoubtedly want to run their own show.

HOW THE LAW PROTECTS JOHNNY & YOU

by MARGO TUPPER

The charcoal in the portable outdoor grill is finally well ignited, and you go inside to prepare the meat and other fixings. Your neighbor's 5-year-old opens the gate and tries to climb on the grill. It falls over, the coals spill and the child is burned.

After the doctor has declared the youngster in no real danger and after you tell your neighbor how sorry you are it happened, you begin to worry about another predicament—your own. Who is responsible? Will you have to pay? And if so, how much?

This is just one of literally thousands of problems involving children and the law. In the case of the outdoor grill, you would not be held responsible. However, suppose your child hits a neighbor's youngster over the head with a hoe. Or the neighbor's child wanders into your yard, falls into your swimming pool—and can't swim. Or some youngster heaves a rock through your picture window. Or your own child orders an expensive English bike. What would the courts rule?

You'd be surprised!

Legal problems involving children usually catch parents unprepared and disturb them seriously. To them the law is a vast unknown land with the Supreme Court at one end and the corner cop on the other. State laws do vary, judicial interpretations differ and on almost every point of law there is an exception depending upon the specific circumstances. But there are certain general legal facts which you should know.

• Parents are usually not responsible for damages and injuries caused by their young ones.

• Children can sue and be sued. When your child hits the neighbor's youngster over the head with a hoe, for example, it's the neighbor's child who brings suit against your child. Of course, as a practical matter, your neighbor sues in behalf of his child, and if your child loses, chances are you will pay the judgment. But the obligation is still a moral and not a legal one.

Know your child: If he's a bully and you know it, you'll be held responsible for the damage he does.

● Although in theory damage suits are between children, there are a number of ways in which parents can get involved. One is to give consent or encouragement to some childish act which results in damage.

INADEQUATE CONTROL

A second way in which a parent can get involved is when the parent knows the child has dangerous habits and fails to exercise adequate control. A Pennsylvania family who was well aware that their son was a vicious bully let him go without supervision to a near-by playground where he beat up a younger child and threw him down a bank, breaking his leg. The parents were held responsible.

The third way in which the parent may become liable involves what the lawyers call a master and servant relationship. That is, if you give orders to your child, and in carrying them out he negligently causes damages, you may be held responsible.

Still another way in which the parent may become responsible is through providing or making accessible dangerous instruments to children. The general common-sense rule, of course, is not to leave any dangerous instrument within reach of a child. Legally, parental responsibility will depend on the degree of care used in keeping such instruments out of the hands of children.

ATTRACTIVE NUISANCE

Another thorny area is the matter of child injuries resulting from an "attractive nuisance"—something on your property likely to arouse the interest of a child which is also a potential hazard—such as a swimming pool. Another example is a large wooden packing case with sharp nails protruding inside. If neighborhood children can reach this box they will try to climb into it and will be scratched by the nails. If you fail to take reasonable precautions to keep the children away—or at least do something about the nails—you may be found guilty of negligence.

The final point in this highlight survey of parents' legal responsibility has to do with the matter of contracts. Your child buys an expensive item on the installment plan. What is your responsibility if and when he misses on payments? The answer is: none. None, that is, unless you knew of and condoned the purchase or made a payment or two on it.

Many court decisions agree that anyone who enters into a contract with a legal infant (anyone under 21) does so at his own peril. It is a "voidable" contract and the infant can disaffirm it any time he wants to.

What can a parent do to protect himself and his children? Patrick J. Head, a Washington, D.C., attorney who has studied the parent-child relationship, says:

"Insurance is the answer. Anyone who has a family and owns a home should have a homeowners' or personal liability insurance policy. You buy not only protection against extensive loss but also legal representation in case of a suit against you."

The typical homeowners' or personal liability insurance policy provides $25,000 coverage in case of injury to another if the insured is at fault, and costs in the moderate range of $15 to $25. Generally these policies will pay up to $250 for damages regardless of negligence and give protection to every member of the immediate family.

DO'S & DON'TS

In case of a sudden legal emergency involving your child, the important thing is not to panic. Discuss calmly such basic facts as names, time of day, place, events as observed. Don't get into a discussion of legal liability; don't engage in an emotional tirade; and above all, remember, not to sign anything.

At the earliest opportunity, turn your problem over either to your lawyer or your insurance company's claims man. Then relax—and let the experts do your worrying for you.

BRINGING UP BABY,*
HINTS COLLECTED
BY MRS. DAN GERBER,
MOTHER OF FIVE

Inside tips on outside doings

Whether your baby is a loil-about, a creep-about or a gadabout, summer is a wonderful season for small fry because they can be outdoors so much.

Timely tips:

- Even though you think baby is safely tan by now, she (or he) shouldn't be exposed to direct sunlight for more than 30 minutes.
- Backyard or beach, don't let a toddler run too much in the heat. An overtired child tends to be fretful.

Summertime lip-smackers

No matter what the season, fruits are great favorites with babies. But somehow in summer they seem to be especially welcome. If they're Gerber Strained and Junior Fruits, that is. Gerber Fruits have unusual meal-appeal because they're flash-cooked in a matter of seconds to retain tempting, true-to-nature colors and flavors. What's more, flash-cooking in the absence of air preserves the utmost in precious vitamin values so important to your baby's nutrition.

Playpen pointers

(1) If you park baby's playpen outdoors, do pick a shaded, sheltered spot so sudden gusts won't chill baby if he perspires. (2) On most warm days baby will fare best with panties or sunsuit. On sizzlers your darling will be more comfy with a cotton shirt or lightweight dress.

Splash flash

A kiddy lawn pool is a delightful but inexpensive investment for an older tot.

- ... Fun for your bathing beauty, relaxing for you as you watch. (Good time to do sit-down chores.) Baby's bathtub toys, and a plastic cup for dipping and pouring, add immeasurably to the fun.

Dan Gerber on digestibility

"It should be reassuring to know that all Gerber Baby Foods are 'custom-cooked' according to their own requirements to insure ready digestibility and also to help preserve nutritive values. Different foods require different attention. Fruits, can be flash-cooked. Meat dinners, certain vegetables and other foods require slower treatment. Whatever the method, cooking time and temperature are controlled to bring out the best in each particular product."

SERVE DUCKLING

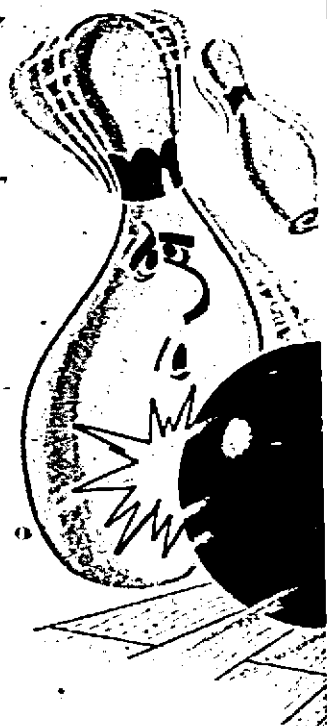

BY BETH MERRIMAN
PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Even in warm weather there's entertaining to be done, and sometimes elegance must be the keynote. Our duckling recipe is just the thing for special occasion dining. In deference to the hot weather ahead, we've planned the preparation so that ducks may be cooked over a single top stove unit. Neither the kitchen nor the cook will get overheated. Start dinner with watermelon balls in chilled ginger ale. Serve wild rice and asparagus with duck and add applesauce or whole berry cranberry sauce and tossed salad. Finish off your fete with cooling raspberry sundaes or lemon sherbet and lady fingers.

- | | |
|---|------------------------|
| 2 ducklings (4 to 5 lb. each), quartered | 1 teaspoon salt |
| ¼ cup vegetable oil | Few grains pepper |
| 1 medium onion, chopped | ½ teaspoon oregano |
| 1 garlic clove, crushed | ½ cup dry sherry |
| | 1 cup dairy sour cream |

Simmer duckling livers in 2 cups water for 15 minutes. Drain; save broth. Chop livers; save. Brown ducklings slowly in vegetable oil until golden on all sides. Remove from pan. Pour off all but 2 tablespoons of oil. Brown onion and garlic in oil left in pan; add salt, pepper, oregano and broth from livers. Return duckling to pan; cover; simmer 1½ hours or until done. Remove duckling to warm platter; strain liquid in pan. Add sherry, sour cream and chopped livers to strained liquid. Heat to serving temperature, but do not boil. Serve with duckling and wild rice. Makes 8 servings.

If you've never tried Alka-Seltzer
you don't know how speedy relief can be!

When you have an upset stomach there's nothing quite like Alka-Seltzer.

Alka-Seltzer contains a soothing stomach alkalizer, ready to go to work instantly to soothe and settle upset stomach.

Headache, too? Alka-Seltzer provides the effective pain-reliever, sodium acetylsalicylate, in a completely dissolved solution. In the first ten minutes—when you really need it—the system quickly absorbs more of this Alka-Seltzer pain-reliever.

Take two Alka-Seltzer tablets before bed and wake up feeling better!

by Milton Berle

Dodger fan Billy Berle, adopted son of comedian Milton Berle and wife Ruth, has friendly chat with Dodger shortstop Maury Wills.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Milton Berle, born Milton Berlinger in New York City in 1908, is one of the great comedians of all time. Brash, boisterous and brazen, mainly to hide the insecurity which plagues him as it does most comics, Berle has starred in every medium of show business. A millionaire many times over, he still attributes much of his success to his mother, the late Sandra Berlinger, a one-time department store detective for Gimbels and Wanamaker's, whose loyalty to her son was fierce and obsessive and a show-business legend. Nowadays, Berle lives in Beverly Hills with his third wife, daughter Vicki and adopted son Billy, confines his appearances mainly to night clubs. Herewith some of his favorite reminiscential jokes:

My mother used to play cards almost every night backstage with Sophie Tucker. One night while they were playing two-handed poker for a 10¢ limit, each kept raising the other. Finally, my mother asked, "What have you got?"

Sophie answered: "I've got an eight, a ten, a four, a Jack and a deuce."

"Take it," Mother replied disgustedly. "I thought you were bluffing!"

There are quite a few truisms connected with my mother, mainly because she was so proud of me. Years ago, when she lived at the Essex House in New York, I would call her every single day just to see how she was. One day when I phoned, the operator told me that my mother was on her way down to the lobby. I asked if she would please page her in the lobby. The lobby was crowded, and when Mother picked up the house phone she shouted at the top of her voice so that everybody could hear her, "Hello, is this my son, Milton Berle?"

Another funny incident happened when I was just a kid. Mother sneaked me in backstage during one of the Al Jolson celebrity nights at the Winter Garden. She tried to get me on the show. Jolson was singing when we got there, and if you think I stay on long—you should have seen Jolson that night! The audience kept calling him back to do encore after encore. Finally, after he was finished, the audience stood up and applauded endlessly. Mother took one look at me, slapped me on my fanny and said, "Now will you practice?"

Gene Baylos is to me one of the funniest comics in the business, funny offstage as well as onstage. Gene has one big problem, though—he's an impulsive gambler. One night he lost all his money at a crap game and was forced to stand around watching while the others continued gambling. Finally, he couldn't take it anymore. He jumped on the crap table and shouted, "I bet my life on the hard six!"

While we're on the subject of impulsive gamblers, there's the one about the roulette player who got lapped out. He put a gun to his head and was about to kill himself when a strange voice said to him, "Don't pull the trigger! Don't pull the trigger!"

"Why shouldn't I?" he asked. "I have no more money!"

"Look in your pocket," answered the voice. "You'll find a dollar there."

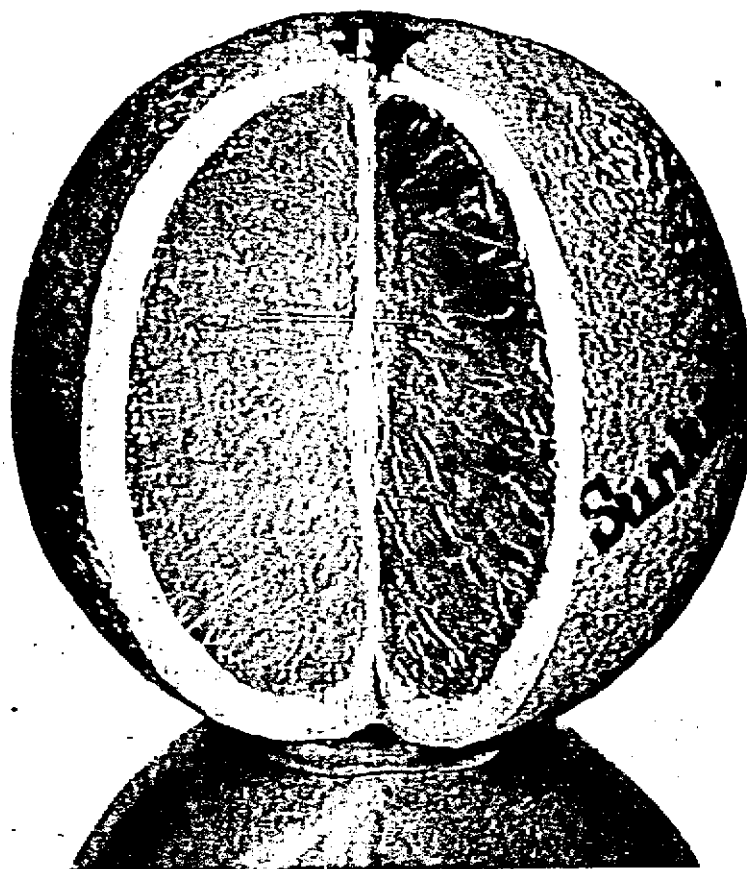

The man looked in his pocket and sure enough, there was a dollar.

The voice said, "Bet it on number 29." The man placed his bet, and the number came in. The voice said, "Let it ride." The man let his $35 ride, and again it came in. So he asked, "Now what do I do?" The voice answered, "Let it ride once more." The man let it ride, and it lost. "Now I'm really broke!" cried the man. "What do I do next?"

And the voice said, "Pull the trigger! Pull the trigger!"

But talking about bad luck—that's nothing compared to the impulsive gambler who, when he drove to Las Vegas, pulled up to a parking space, put a dime in the meter and lost his car!

Another favorite story was told to me only recently by E. G. Marshall while I was shooting The Defenders with him. He told me about a lawyer who had been practicing 20 years and never won a case. He finally found out why—he had been practicing medicine!

WHEN DANGER THREATENS THE NEST, MANY BIRDS EITHER TRY TO DISTRACT THE INTRUDER OR DART TO THE ATTACK

BUT THE OYSTER-CATCHER, INSTEAD OF ATTRACTING ATTENTION BY GETTING EXCITED...

QUIETLY SLIPS OFF THE NEST, AND SHOWING NO APPARENT CONCERN OVER THE NEARNESS OF AN ENEMY...

SETTLES DOWN SOME DISTANCE AWAY FROM HER PRECIOUS EGGS

SHE MAY GO THROUGH ALL THE MOTIONS OF BROODING HER EGGS, AS THOUGH SHE WERE ACTUALLY ON THE NEST...

OR TUCK HER BILL UNDER HER WING FOR A SUPPOSED NAP...
